Centralia Murderer Gets 30-Year Sentence

Pete Caster / pcaster@chronline.com

Weston Miller, right, reacts as he sits next to his lawyer, Joseph Enbody, while Daniel Carson, brother of the slain David W. Carson, makes a statement prior to Miller's sentencing in Lewis County Superior Court on Wednesday at the Lewis County Law and Justice Center in Chehalis.

SENTENCED: Weston G. Miller Given Close to the Maximum Sentence For 2012 Shooting Death of David Carson

By Stephanie Schendel

sschendel@chronline.com

Weston G. Miller, the man convicted of first-degree murder for the fatal shooting of a Centralia man in March 2012, was sentenced to 30 years in prison Wednesday in Lewis County Superior Court.

During his sentencing hearing, the 30-year-old Centralia man read a written statement to the judge in which he apologized for causing the death of David W. Carson, but also insisted he was acting in self defense when he shot him in Miller's house on B Street on March 13, 2012.

Miller was convicted of first-degree murder after a five-day jury trial in May.

"I only knew Dave for a few days," Miller said. "But he was my friend."

In Miller's statement, which took him several minutes to read aloud, he recounted the details of the events leading up to the shooting and said Carson and his girlfriend, Sara DeSalvo, were both staying at his house. He said the couple was arguing constantly, and that he was scared of Carson.

He also explained that he was scared after he shot Carson, which is why he fled.

"There wasn't anything I could do for David," he said, later adding, "I wanted my dad and I wanted a hug."

Centralia Hoarder Wants $394 Billion From County

FIGHTING BACK: Facing Foreclosure, Victor Bonagofski Issues His Own Demands

By Lisa Broadt

lbroadt@chronline.com

In exchange for every vehicle, appliance, screw, nut, bolt, nail and piece of cardboard, scrap metal and lumber Lewis County has removed from his two Centralia properties over the last seven years, persistent-code violator Victor Bonagofski wants $394.2 billion.

Victor Bonagofski
Centralia property owner

His order came in the midst of ongoing litigation in which Lewis County seeks to foreclose on his nuisance property located at 4020 Harrison Avenue in Centralia. That property, as well as a residence at 1303 Reynolds Avenue in Centralia, is owned by the Golden Unicorn Family Trust, of which Bonagofski is a trustee.

Lewis County also considers Reynolds Avenue to be a nuisance, but, because Bonagofski lives there, it is protected from foreclosure by the state's homesteading act.

Over the past 10 years, the county has, on three occasions, solicited court orders allowing it to enter Bonagofski's property to remove solid waste. After each of those abatements, the county sent Bonagofski a bill for the work.

Emails Show Rocky Relationship Between Edison Principal, District

TRANSPARENCY: Edison Principal Neal Kirby Takes On Issues With School District Administration Despite Disciplinary Action

By Amy Nile

Steve Bodnar
Centralia Superintendent

A candidate for the Centralia School Board and a long-time principal has landed in hot water with the district office for questioning the way the administration conducts business.

Edison Elementary Principal Neal Kirby is now putting his job on the line to discuss increasing transparency and equality in the public education system.

Superintendent Steve Bodnar sent a disciplinary letter to Kirby, who leads Lewis County's only top-rated elementary school, for emails Kirby sent challenging the legality of the way the district administers certain programs and inquiring about the implementation of new regulations, according to e-mails obtained by The Chronicle through a public records request.

DESPITE KIRBY'S consistent success in his high-performing school, the administration disagrees with his email communication about crucial issues with colleagues.

"Your perpetuation of false or misleading information in the emails has been hurtful, damaging, and undermines the vision and goals of the organization," Bodnar wrote in a March 8 disciplinary letter. "You are directed to cease and desist from email communication with principals and district level administrators that is disrespectful, offensive and perpetuates misinformation."

Bodnar said he remains concerned emails are part of the public record and advised Kirby make phone calls or schedule

Two Seriously Injured in Crash on Twin Oaks Road

By The Chronicle

A 54-year-old man from Spanaway and a 49-year-old woman from College Place were both airlifted to Harborview Medical Center in Seattle Tuesday morning with serious injuries after their 2004 Toyota Tundra rolled over at Twin Oaks Road and Frogner Road in Chehalis.

The two were delivering phone books in the area at 11:50 a.m. when the driver, the Spanaway man, while driving on Frogner Road failed to stop at a stop sign at Twin Oaks Road. The man attempted to turn right when the vehicle left the roadway, went through a fence and rolled into a nearby field, according to the Lewis County Sheriff's Office.

When the vehicle rolled, phone books scattered across the field.

The man was airlifted with an apparent fractured hip and other serious injuries. The woman was also airlifted for life-threatening injuries.

Neither passenger appeared to be wearing their seat belts.

The 2004 Toyota Tundra was destroyed in the accident.

Lewis County Fire District 6 responded to the scene along with the Lewis County Sheriff's Office.

The Washington State Patrol is assisting the Lewis County Sheriff's Office in investigating the crash.

State Democrats Back Away From Business Tax Extension Plan

BUDGET COMPROMISE:
Extending Tax Would Have Raised $500 Million Over Next Two Years

By Mike Baker
The Associated Press

OLYMPIA — Democrats in the Washington Legislature are backing away from a plan that would have raised money by extending a business tax, as lawmakers sought an elusive budget compromise Wednesday in the final week of an overtime legislative session.

Under the revised spending plan, the Democrats would still add nearly $1 billion to the state's education system. About one-quarter of that money would come from a plan to eliminate or narrow tax preferences, such as requiring nonresidents to apply for sales tax refunds instead of getting them automatically.

Senate leaders have balked at any sort of tax increases, particularly the extensions of a temporary business tax. Extending the tax would have raised some $500 million over the next two years. Democrats said their plan was an effort to find a compromise.

"This is a very large move in that direction," said Democratic Rep. Ross Hunter, the top budget writer in the House.

Democrats say the less ambitious tax plan means they won't be able to add as much money to the education system as they would have liked. The budget also includes some creative tactics. It includes a nearly $400 million transfer from the capital budget for public works projects and it saves $140 million from changes to the schedule in how money is dispersed to local school districts.

Along with differences on taxes, the Senate is also pushing a variety of changes to policy, such as alterations to the worker's compensation system and a plan to create a 401(k)-style retirement system that state workers could use instead of a pension.

Lawmakers are in the final week of their special legislative session focused primarily on the budget. They have been struggling to find agreement on a spending plan that would balance the budget while also adding money to the education system in response to a state Supreme Court ruling.

A separate Supreme Court ruling is also on the minds of lawmakers. Democrats have assumed in their budget that lawmakers will change the estate tax law in response to a court ruling that determined that married couples could avoid the estate tax if they used a certain trust. The House wants to extend the estate tax to everyone, but Senate leaders have been looking to make long-term changes to the estate tax in the process.

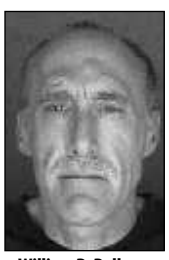
Thurston County Sheriff's Office Seeking Lacey Man Wanted for Assault

By The Chronicle

The Thurston County Sheriff's Office is encouraging the public to help find a man wanted for assaulting another man Monday night on the 9600 block of Old Highway 99 north of Tenino.

William R. Bellamy, 54, of Lacey, is wanted for second-degree assault in connection with the beating of a 52-year-old Lacey man.



William R. Bellamy
wanted for assault

At about 8:30 p.m. Monday, the victim was lured to an address in the 9600 block of Old Highway 99 under the pretense of performing some contract work, according to the sheriff's office.

When the victim arrived, he was reportedly knocked to the ground with a punch to the face.

The victim sustained facial fractures and other apparent broken bones from multiple punches and kicks. Following the assault, Bellamy drove the victim to Capital Medical Center in Olympia and dropped him off at the emergency room, the sheriff's office said.

As of Tuesday afternoon, the victim is still recovering in the hospital.

Anyone with information about the assault is asked to call the Thurston County Sheriff's Office at (360) 786-5500 or dispatch at (360) 704-2740.

If you know the whereabouts of Bellamy, call 911.

I-5 Lane, Ramp to Close Near Napavine for Pavement Repairs

By The Chronicle

Drivers on southbound Interstate 5 will encounter a lane and ramp closure tonight at Exit 68 near Napavine while the Washington State Department of Transportation crews repair a section of damaged pavement.

The right lane of southbound I-5 near Avery Road and the on-ramp from U.S. Highway 12 to southbound I-5 will be closed from 7:30 p.m. Thursday until 6 a.m. Friday.

During the nighttime closure, crews will cut away broken asphalt and patch the interstate.

The patch will give drivers a smoother, safer ride and help keep moisture from causing future damage to the pavement, according to WSDOT.

This work is weather dependent and may be canceled in the event of inclement weather.

Napavine Seeks Volunteers to Care for Impounded Dogs

By The Chronicle

The city of Napavine is looking for volunteers to periodically feed, water and walk dogs that have been impounded while the city works to get them back to their owners.

The city anticipates this work will take four to six hours per month. The individual would only be responsible for dogs that are good-natured and pose no threat.

Those who are are interested are asked to call (360) 262-3547, ext. 213.

Centralia Man Pursuing Professional Bodybuilder Status

DREAM: Steve Thayer Will Take 22 years of Bodybuilding Experience to a Professional Competition in Pittsburgh July 20

By Kyle Spurr

kspurr@chronline.com

Pete Caster / pcaster@chronline.com

Steve Thayer, 41, starts his Wednesday leg workout with squats at Anytime Fitness in Centralia.

While training at Anytime Fitness in Centralia, amateur bodybuilder Steve Thayer focuses on one part of his body at a time and makes sure not to build one muscle more than another.

Symmetry and balance are the most important parts of bodybuilding, Thayer said.

Thayer, 41, who has competed in regional bodybuilding competitions for 22 years, spends five to six days a week at the local gym preparing his body for events.

"He's a permanent fixture in here," Anytime Fitness owner Joanna Wilson said.

Thayer hopes his dedication pays off next month when he travels to Pittsburgh, Pa., for the 2013 Masters Nationals Bodybuilding Competition, held July 19-20.

A victory at the national competition will earn Thayer a professional bodybuilding title.

"My greatest achievement will be stepping onto that stage in Pittsburgh and walking away with my pro card," Thayer said. "I'll be stepping into a venue I've never stepped in before, but I'm up for the challenge."

Thayer, who can now squat 500 pounds and leg press more than 1,500 pounds, started lifting weights at 8 years old with his older brother. By 19, Thayer began pursuing bodybuilding. He won his first title at the Southwest Washington Fair in 1993.

Last month, Thayer won another title at the Emerald Cup in Bellevue.

Weighing in at 198 pounds, he finished first out of 11 competitors in the light heavyweight division after finishing third at the Emerald Cup last year.

"It made me that much more determined to come back this year," Thayer said.

Thayer, whose day job is as a line operator for Pepsi Northwest Beverages LLC, said bodybuilding is not for everyone and takes extreme discipline.

Thayer eats about 7,000 calories a day and trains with Wilson, who will also be competing for a professional title in women's physique at the Masters Nationals competition next month.

SUPPORTING STEVE THAYER

By The Chronicle

Those interested in helping Steve Thayer fund his trip to the 2013 Masters Nationals Bodybuilding Competition in Pittsburgh, Pa., July 19-20 can donate money to him at his website www.gofundme.com/2013-Masters-Nationals.

"Please help a hard working, honest guy achieve his dreams and help send me to Nationals!! Thank you all for your support," Thayer wrote on his webpage.

"Over the many years I never placed in competitions, I could have very well given up," Thayer said. "But I was going to live my dream."

Along with pursuing his professional bodybuilding career, Thayer said, he wants to promote bodybuilding in Lewis County. He is helping to plan a physical fitness competition at the Southwest Washington Fair this year.

When he started bodybuilding two decades ago, Thayer said, he was motivated by winning trophies. Now, he said, he is motivated by inspiring others and sharing his passion for the sport.

"I was the kid that sat in the back of the class, but when I got on the stage it triggered something inside me," Thayer said. "There is no better feeling than being on stage and showing people what I've worked for."

Steve Thayer, an aspiring professional body builder, flexes in front of the mirror while showing the tattoos he has on his back and hands while working out at Anytime Fitness in Centralia on Wednesday afternoon. Thayer explained that the tattoo on his back is of a double-headed cobra, while the ink on his hands shows the metacarpal bones.

"Over the many years I never placed in competitions, I could have very well given up. But I was going to live my dream."

Lewis County Democrats to Host Climate Change Forum

The Lewis County Democrats are holding a forum on climate change at 7 p.m. Thursday, June 27, at Carpenter's Hall in Centralia.

Guest speaker will be Hedia Adelsman, executive policy adviser to the director of the state Department of Ecology.

Also on the schedule is a showing of the film "Do the Math: The Movie."

Light refreshments will be served at the forum.

Carpenter's Hall is located at 417 N. Pearl St.

For more information, contact Lewis County Democrats via email at lewiscountydemocratswa@gmail.com or call (360) 626-2768.

The forum is sponsored by Lewis County Democrats, 20th Legislative Democrats and 19th Legislative District Democrats.

Centralia College Students to Present Capstone Projects Friday

Several Centralia College students will present their capstone projects from noon to 1 p.m. on Friday in the Science Center, room 309.

The projects are a culmination of students' work for the year and will include presentations on geology, chemistry, robotics, botany and other subjects.

STEM scholarship recipients Colleen Suter and Christina Williams will have on display scientific research on historical earthquake and landslide evidence dating back thousands of years.

They used submerged fossilized tree ring samples to help date their findings. Centralia College and the University of Washington have the only two tree ring labs in the state. The women recently presented their research to the Northwest Scientific Association conference in Portland. The event marked the first time community college students have been invited to present.

Chemistry students Joe Clinton and Britany Bradley will have scientific research posters on the synthesis of biodiesel and ethanol, as well as green antibiotic synthesis.

Class on Beginning Beekeeping Planned

A free overview of "Getting Started in Beekeeping" will be offered by the Lewis County Beekeepers' Association at the Centralia Timberland Library from 1:30 to 3 p.m. Saturday, June 22.

Topics will include a year in the life of a beekeeper, equipment needed, basic bee biology, startup costs and more. The overview introduces the Washington State Beekeepers' Association apprentice beekeeping course, which will be offered at the Extension classroom in the Lewis County Courthouse in October and November.

Mount Rainier Makes Changes After Ranger's Death

DESENSITIZED: Climber Had Become Comfortable Not Being Roped and Tethered Prior to Man's Death During Rescue Attempt

By Shannon Dininny
The Associated Press

> "Nick Hall died saving lives. He was only on the mountain that day because four people had fallen and desperately needed his help."
> Randy King
> Mount Rainier National Park superintendent

YAKIMA — Blue skies and sunshine met the climbing rangers attempting to rescue four injured climbers on iconic Mount Rainier last year. The slope on that part of the glacial mountain, while inherently dangerous, was no precipitous pitch — it was no more vertical than some of the steeper runs at a ski resort.

Those conditions may have lulled the rescuers who had become comfortable working on the mountain.

Nick Hall, a four-year climbing ranger, traveled by helicopter to oversee the aerial rescue operation. Freezing rain days earlier had encased the usually soft snow on the Emmons-Winthrop glacier in a sheet of hard ice. While trying to secure a litter — essentially a reinforced stretcher — from the overhead helicopter, Hall lost his balance and fell 2,400 feet to his death. He was not anchored in any way. The ice ax he would have used to stop his slide sat steps away.

A review into Hall's June 21, 2012 death, released Tuesday, concluded Mount Rainier's climbing rangers had become comfortable working on the mountain's slopes without being roped or tethered for safety and had become desensitized to potential hazards.

"On a glaciated peak like Rainier, it's kind of an interesting environment. The terrain you're operating in is not so steep that you feel you're at immediate risk of falling to your death," said Scott Wanek, chief ranger for the National Park Service in the Pacific Northwest region who participated in the review.

WANEK PREVIOUSLY worked at Mount Rainier National Park, supervised mountaineering and search and rescue programs. "In this circumstance, people just got a little comfortable," he said.

As a result of the report, the National Park Service plans to review all high-risk operations, including climbing, boating and diving, in the Pacific Northwest region, Regional Director Chris Lehnertz said in a conference call with reporters.

The review also recommended that Mount Rainier establish protocols and standard operating procedures for climbing rangers to protect against falls in the future, as well as plans for search and rescue and incident command operations.

Park Superintendent Randy King stressed that the accident was not Hall's fault, but a result of many factors, including an overall desensitization to the risks on the mountain.

"Nick Hall died saving lives. He was only on the mountain that day because four people had fallen and desperately needed his help," he said. "We're trying to be open to continuing to learn about what we can do to help people make good decisions and stay safe in an inherently risky environment at inherently risky work."

Mount Rainier sits about 60 miles southeast of Seattle, where the volcano towers over the skyline on clear days. The national park attracts 1.5 million visitors a year. About 10,000 climbers attempt to climb the mountain each year, and about half make it to the summit.

Hall, a four-year climbing ranger originally from Patten, Maine, had been helping to rescue the four injured climbers from Waco, Texas. Two of the injured climbers had fallen into a crevasse at the 13,800 foot level, on their way down from the 14,411-foot summit.

King said a safety and risk management program employed by the National Park Service has been used at Mount Rainier for several years. But he said that while many of the park's permanent staff had been trained, many of the seasonal employees who do some of the most high-risk work had not.

THE PARK BROUGHT in all of its climbing rangers for training earlier this spring, before the climbing season kicks into high gear, to help them recognize risks that people face every day doing their job, he said.

The park also plans to contract with a helicopter company to provide short-haul services that are also used in other parks popular among climbers, including Yosemite, Grand Teton, and Rocky Mountain national parks. In such a rescue, a ranger would be suspended below the helicopter to assess and secure an injured party.

The high-altitude helicopter must be able to operate at the height of Mount Rainier, King said.

"It won't be a perfect tool for all situations, but it's a tool that is probably the best way and perhaps the safest way for many of the rescues that occur on Mount Rainier," he said.

In the meantime, the park will be employing staff differently this summer to ensure its most experienced climbing rangers are on the mountain overseeing field staff operations, largely out of Camp Muir.

THAT MAY MEAN people will not be at Camp Schurman, a resting point for a less traveled route up the mountain, in the middle of the week as they have been in the past, King said.

"Most of what we do on the mountain is actually try to prevent accidents," he said. "We spend a lot of time talking to climbers about what they're doing up there."

The park will do everything it can to continue that work and to prepare climbers for the hazards they could encounter, he said, but ultimately, the responsibility for climbers' safety rests with them.

"If they get in trouble, we will try to help them," he said. "And if people get in a pickle up there, there are conditions and circumstances where people can't help them."

Lewis County Home Prices Drop; Sales Increase

By Amy Nile
anile@chronline.com

Pending home sales in Lewis County increased by 36 percent and closed sales for homes and condominiums rose 17.5 percent in May compared to the same time a year ago, according to figures released Wednesday by the Northwest Multiple Listing Service.

In Lewis County, the total real estate activity rose by 3 percent in May versus the same time a year ago. New listings rose from 130 in May last year to 187 last month.

The median home price in Lewis County dropped $400 in May to $134,500. That's down 0.3 percent from $134,900 the same month one year ago.

IN GRAYS HARBOR COUNTY, the median home price fared better, increasing by 32 percent in May to $139,000. That's up from $105,000 last year.

Pending sales rose by 40 percent, but total activity dropped by 4 percent from last year. Closed sales also decreased by 4 percent in May.

IN THURSTON COUNTY, the median home price increased 6 percent to $225,500 in May, compared to $212,563 a year ago.

Pending sales rose 27.5 percent and closed sales went up 26.7 percent over the year. But total activity declined in May by 16 percent.

ACROSS THE REGION, brokers reported double-digit gains in several key indicators it tracks for the 21 counties in its service area. Compared to a year ago, the number of new listings climbed 16 percent, pending sales increased nearly 10 percent and closed sales increased nearly 22 percent.

Despite gains in listing activity, inventory remains tight, and total activity declined 16 percent in May.

Still, home prices rose more than 13 percent to a median of $275,000.

That's up 13 percent from last year's figure of $242,500.

MLS reported well-priced homes continue to draw multiple offers and sell at a brisk pace around Western Washington as buyers react to increases in interest rates and asking prices.

Nine counties, including Lewis, Grays Harbor and Cowlitz, reported year-over-year gains in pending sales that exceeded 30 percent.

Southwest Washington Dance Center Presenting Annual Concert

By The Chronicle

The Southwest Washington Dance Center will be presenting its 30th annual All School Dance Concert on Saturday, June 22, at 11 a.m., 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. at Corbet Theatre on the campus of Centralia College. More than 200 students will be performing this year.

The 11 a.m. performance is dedicated to the youngest dancers. The creative movement, parent/toddler, tumbling, pre-jazz and pre-ballet classes will show their work. An addition to this performance will be a short dance production of "The Wonderful World of Dr. Seuss." This production was recently featured at more than 11 schools in south Thurston and Lewis counties for the Dance Center's annual school tour this spring.

The 2 and 7 p.m. programs will showcase a wide variety of dance styles, from jazz, lyrical, acro, tap, modern, and classical and contemporary ballet. Also performing will be the rhythmic gymnastic team. Dancers, starting at age 6, through advanced, will be performing. All 10 instructors from the Dance Center will showcase their choreography. Also performing will be the Ballet Company.

Tickets can be purchased for $8 for adults and $5 for children, students or senior citizens, at Southwest Washington Dance Center, 455 N. Market Blvd. in Chehalis or at the door, if available. For more information, call (360) 748-4789 or visit www.swwdance.org.

Sierra Club sues BNSF Over Coal Dust From Trains

SEATTLE (AP) — The Sierra Club is suing Burlington Northern Santa Fe in federal court in Seattle over coal dust that blows off trains into Washington rivers and Puget Sound.

The suit filed Wednesday says the railway sends an average of four trains or 480 open-top rail cars through the state each day carrying coal from mines in Wyoming and Montana to Canada or to TransAlta, the only remaining coal-fired power plant in Washington at Centralia.

Accused Winlock Rapist Claims Innocence and Impotence

DEFENDANT: Leo Bunker III Denies Alleged Victim's Claims in 2011 Sexual Assaults

By Stephanie Schendel

sschendel@chronline.com

Pete Caster / pcaster@chronline.com

Leo Bunker III testifies during his rape trial in Lewis County Superior Court on Wednesday afternoon at the Lewis County Law and Justice Center in Chehalis.

The former Winlock man accused of raping a woman in 2011 took the stand and told a jury Wednesday that the rape could not have occurred because he suffered from erectile dysfunction.

"I was never able to get an erection with her," Leo Bunker III, 52, said during the third day of his trial in Lewis County Superior Court.

He also denied allegations that during their relationship he was possessive, controlling and that he alienated the woman from her family and friends — a story that contrasted with earlier testimony from the woman's family and friends.

Bunker also said he did not watch, or own, violent pornographic movies that showed women getting raped and tortured, as alleged by the victim.

"That is absolutely not true," Bunker said.

Bunker is charged with two counts of second-degree rape, felony harassment and two counts of violation of a court order in relation to what a prosecutor described as an increasingly aggressive and violent relationship.

The woman also previously told the jury that Bunker told her he would kill her and her family if she ever left him.

"I would act unafraid because he liked to scare me," she said. "And it seemed to excite him if he could terrify me."

Bunker denied ever threatening her.

BOTH THE DEFENSE and prosecution finished their cases late Wednesday afternoon. Closing arguments and jury deliberations are set for today.

Bunker has been awaiting trial since April 2012. His trial has been delayed several times for a number of reasons, including the previous judge's illness, the victim's heart attack, an unrelated incident in which the victim was trampled by a horse last fall and Bunker getting diagnosed with cancer while in jail.

In the past seven months, Bunker has racked up nearly $200,000 in medical expenses due to surgery and chemotherapy from his diagnosis of throat cancer. It is a six-figure bill that will mostly come out of the jail's budget.

THE ALLEGED VICTIM TESTIFIED on Monday and Tuesday she was too scared to leave Bunker, and was waiting for his upcoming court date — Oct. 11, 2011 — when he was supposed to report to prison to serve a sentence for a conviction of violation of a protection order his ex-wife had against him.

On that day, however, the court delayed his reporting date back to Nov. 1, and instead of going into custody, Bunker went with the victim back to her Winlock house.

That day, he found out she had called her ex-boyfriend and went into a rage, she testified. He threw her on the bed, pulled off her pants and raped her, leaving bruises on her back, arms and throat, she said.

The woman testified that Bunker's probation officer had told her previously that he had put his ex-wife in the hospital after hitting her in the face and breaking bones. She also said Bunker had bragged about beating up his ex-wife's boyfriend so badly that the man was afraid to press charges against him.

"He was proud of himself," she said.

While most of the victim's testimony focused on that alleged brutal rape, the woman also told the attorneys that Bunker would force her to have sex with him on a regular basis.

DURING CROSS examination, Bunker's defense attorney, Michael Underwood, asked the victim questions about what happened to Bunker's belongings after he was incarcerated.

The victim testified that when Bunker went into custody she had his old BMW, baseball cards covered in mildew, a TV, a refrigerator and other appliances.

After she petitioned for the protection order, two of his friends contacted her and arranged to come get all of his stuff.

The only thing she kept, and later pawned, was a ring he had given her, she said.

THE VICTIM REPORTED the rape, and their abusive relationship, to police on Nov. 4, 2011, three days after Bunker went into custody.

On Wednesday, a domestic violence expert, Peg Cain, testified that it is not uncommon for victims of domestic violence to delay the reporting of abuse.

Cain, who told the jury she had little knowledge of the facts of the case, said domestic violence tends to happen in waves — there is a build up to a violent event, then the violence stops, only to start increasing again.

"Over time, it becomes more compressed and it happens more frequently," she said.

The alleged victim's daughter testified Tuesday that after her mother started dating Bunker, she distanced herself from her family. She started acting reserved, more private and avoided her family.

"Many times, isolation is the hallmark of domestic violence," Cain told the jury Wednesday.

Centralia School District Hires New Middle School Assistant Principal and Athletic Director

By The Chronicle

The Centralia School District has hired a candidate to replace Jay Johnson as assistant principal and athletic director at the middle school.

David Eacker, the assistant principal and athletic director at Tenino Middle School, will take over for Johnson.

David Eacker
new assistant principal

Eacker's wife, Graciela, works as a paraeducator at Fords Prairie Elementary School.

The couple has two children, Andrea and Ivan, who are currently students in the Centralia School District.

Eacker received an associate's degree from Centralia College in 1992 and later graduated from Western Washington University with a degree in Spanish and a teacher's certification. He got his master's degree from City University in 1999 and received his administrative credentials from Heritage University in 2007.

Most recently, he was the assistant principal and athletic director at Tenino Middle School, where he started working in 2010. He began his career teaching Spanish at Ridgefield High School from 1995 through 2002.

He taught Spanish at Tenino High School from 2004 to 2007 and was an assistant principal at Shelton High School from 2007 to 2010.

Tourism Guides Are Here

Alicia Bull
Executive Director

Who ever said there is nothing to do in Lewis County? If you feel like our local community lacks locations to visit, stores to shop at, events to attend, establishments to eat at, or a place to stay overnight, I encourage you to stop by The Centralia-Chehalis Chamber of Commerce and pick up one of the newly released "Lewis County Official Visitor's Guide."

Open the guide, and as you turn from one colorful page to the next, you will experience not only the beauty of Lewis County but the incredible amount of history and activity that drives our our local area.

An exciting new addition this year to the "Lewis County Official Visitors Guide" is the Local Picks section. Various Lewis County community members share their favorite place to "eat, drink, get outside," and their favorite "don't miss" location. The personal touch of our local community members sharing their favorite picks helps the publication have a strong sense of hometown flavor. Tourists traveling from far and away love to hear what the locals have to say about their own community.

Over 80,000 of these guides are printed, distributed and looked to as a resource for our county. The guides are available for individuals or for your business to hand out as people come into your place of business. Just stop by the Chamber of Commerce, and let us know how many you need. We look forward to working together as a community in promoting tourism in Lewis County.

Keep up to date with the Chamber and the latest happening. Scan the QR code with your smart phone!

Ambassador Spotlight

Full name: Carol Sue Johnson

Hometown: Dixon, Illinois

Birthday: December 10, 1958

Update on career: Currently I am an I-5 commuter driving to Olympia to work in Patient Services for Olympia Neurology's Brain and Spine MRI Center.

If you didn't grow up in Lewis County, where were you born? I was born in Lincoln, Illinois, moved to Dixon at age 7 where I lived until I was 18, graduating from the same high school as Ronald Reagan (who did pay a visit to his hometown during his presidential campaign!).

How did you end up here? I've been fortunate to have lived in various states, and am here because my best friend in high school was from Washington originally and moved back here after graduation. Nine years ago I was at a crossroads in my life, and with her encouragement, decided to come out here.

Spouse/Partner? Does s/he work in the area? I've lived in Chehalis for 4 years with a terrific guy who also works in Olympia.

What would others be surprised to know about you? I got to live in Sicily for a year in 1990 and still maintain a friendship with a gal I met there!

Carol Sue Johnson

Do you have any hobbies? I love to read detective novels, but my biggest joy is volunteering; and I am fortunate to be able to work at different events for the Chamber, United Way of Lewis County, Visiting Nurse Foundation, and many others.

Why are you an Ambassadors? One of the best ways to have fun meeting great people, and learn about the community you've just moved to, is by volunteering. I love that Ambassadors help local member businesses and organizations with their efforts in our community;and am honored for the opportunity to play a small part in their successes.

Know The Facts Before Going Outdoors

Jenni Bodnar
Thorbeckes GM

Right about now, I think we all can agree that the spring of 2013 has been way too rainy and gray. But have no fear… the sunshine season is upon us! With longer, light-filled days; and increasing opportunities for you to get outside – it is important to be aware of the latest recommendations to have safe and healthy skin while you enjoy our great outdoors.

This is a subject that we all need to be much more diligent about for the simple reason that, although the sun is necessary for life, too much sun exposure can lead to adverse health effects, including skin cancer. More than 1 million people in the United States are diagnosed with skin cancer each year, making it the most common form of cancer in the country.

The term skin cancer typically refers to three different conditions. From the least to the most dangerous, they are basal cell carcinoma, squamous cell carcinoma, and melanoma. Melanoma is generally the most serious form of skin cancer because it tends to spread (metastasize) throughout the body quickly.

It is important to note that even skin that is not directly exposed to sunlight can be vulnerable to skin cancer. In people with dark skin, squamous cell skin cancer is the most common type of skin cancer, and it's usually found in places that are not in the sun, such as the legs or feet. In people with fair skin, skin cancer usually occurs on parts of the skin that have been in the sun, such as the head, face, ears, and neck.

Ultraviolet light ray facts and how they affect our skin:

There are two types, UVA and UVB rays. UVA rays are not absorbed by the ozone layer. They penetrate deep into the skin and heavily contribute to premature aging. In fact, up to 90% of the visible skin changes commonly attributed to aging (dry, wrinkled, thinning skin) are caused by sun exposure.

Therefore, powerful UVB (ultraviolet-b) rays, which are partially absorbed by the ozone layer, mostly affect the surface of the skin and are the primary cause of sunburn. With news of the thinning of the ozone layer, the effects of UVB radiation pose an increased threat to our risk for skin cancer.

Sunscreen Protection facts:

Sunscreens help shield you from the sun's dangerous ultraviolet (UV) rays in two ways. Some work by scattering the light, reflecting it away from your body. Others absorb the UV rays before they reach your skin. Not too long ago, choosing a good sunscreen meant you just looked for a high sun protection factor (SPF), but did you know that the SPF factor only relates to the UVB rays and not the UVA rays? Also, the sun protection factor (SPF) describes how long a product will protect your skin when correctly applied. Fair-skinned people begin to burn in about 15 minutes. Based on this, SPF 15 sunscreen should last about 225 minutes (15 x 15 minutes = 225) and SPF 30 sunscreen should last for 450 minutes (30 x 15 minutes = 450). However, most people do not apply enough sunscreen to gain the expected amount of protection for any given SPF, and sunscreen must be reapplied frequently.

Unfortunately at this time, there is no rating to tell you how good a sunscreen is at blocking UVA rays, therefore when it comes to UVA protection, you need to pay attention to the ingredients listed on the sunscreen bottle for comprehensive coverage.

Look for sunscreen with broad-spectrum or multi-spectrum protection for both UVB and UVA. Ingredients with broad-spectrum protection include benzophenones (oxybenzone), cinnamates (octylmethyl cinnamate and cinoxate), sulisobenzone, salicylates, titanium dioxide, zinc oxide, avobenzone (Parsol 1789) and ecamsule (Mexoryl SX).

What about water and sweat resistance:

If you're going to be outside exercising, or in the water, it's worth getting a sunscreen resistant to water and sweat. But understand what this really means. The FDA defines water resistant sunscreen as meaning that the SPF level stays effective after 40 minutes in the water. Very water resistant means it holds after 80 minutes of swimming. These sunscreens are in no way water-proof, so you'll need to reapply them regularly if you're taking a dip.

What about kids and sunscreen:

Kid-friendly sunscreens are more available than ever and should be used instead of adult recommended products. The sensitive skin of babies and children is easily irritated by chemicals in adult sunscreens, so avoid sunscreens with para-aminobenzoic acid (PABA) and benzephenones like dioxybenzone, oxybenzone, or sulisobenzone. Children's sunscreens use ingredients less likely to irritate the skin, like titanium dioxide and zinc oxide. Unlike chemical ingredients, these protect babies' skin without being absorbed. For kids 6 months or older, look for a sunscreen designed for children with an SPF of 15 or higher. The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends that babies under 6 months be kept out of the sun altogether.

Sunscreen for skin problems or allergies:

People who have sensitive skin or skin conditions like rosacea may also benefit from using sunscreens designed for children. Go for titanium dioxide or zinc oxide instead of chemicals like para-aminobenzoic acid (PABA), dioxybenzone, oxybenzone, or sulisobenzone. If you have skin irritation or allergies, avoid sunscreens with alcohol, fragrances, or preservatives.

Other sunscreens include moisturizers or other ingredients for people with dry or oily skin. As long as they meet the UVA and UVB requirements above, you can give them a try and see what works best.

How to Wear Sunscreen:

While choosing the right sunscreen is important, it won't help much if you don't use it daily and correctly. Use these tips from the experts.

- Apply the sunscreen 15 to 30 minutes before you go out in the sun. For women, sunscreen can be applied under makeup. Speaking of makeup, many moisturizes and foundations now contain sunscreen chemicals, so look for those the next time you are out shopping.
- Use about 1 ounce (or 2 tablespoons) to cover your whole body. Don't skimp. There are numerous studies showing that people simply don't use enough, and only get 10% to 25% of the benefit.
- Don't forget the easy-to-miss spots, like the tips of your ears, your feet, the back of your legs, and, if you have one, your bald spot! (Did I just say that?) Since your lips can also get sunburned, use a UV-protective lip balm and reapply it regularly.
- No matter how long-lasting it's supposed to be, reapply sunscreen at least every 2 hours, and more often if you're sweating or getting wet.
- Pay attention to the expiration date on the bottle. Sunscreen loses its effectiveness over time.
- Wear sunscreen whenever you're out during the day -- and not only when it's hot and sunny. On a grey, overcast day, up to 80% of the dangerous UV rays still make it through the clouds.

Bath Depot Has Goodies for Dads, Brides

Father's Day is June 16, and if you are looking for the perfect gift to give Dad, come to The Bath Depot Inc., located at 108 W. Pine St., in downtown Centralia.

Here you will find Pre de Provence shave cream, shave soap and aftershave balm, which is enriched with shea butter and aloe vera to nourish, hydrate and heal the skin. We also carry the professional shave brushes as well. And don't forget to pick up the sexy men bar soap or body wash! These are just a few gift ideas you can find at The Bath Depot for Father's Day or any other day.

Also, with June being a traditional wedding month, The Bath Depot has several gifts that make great bridal shower presents, too!

Come in and check out all the bath and body essentials available, and remember, we are proud to carry some locally handmade soap as well. For more information, call (360) 623-1016.

Abundance Vintage Has Wide Selection

If you haven't had an opportunity to visit my shop, Abundance Vintage, located at 109 N. Tower Ave. in historic downtown Centralia, I hope you'll have a chance to come in soon. We're open 7 days a week from 11 to 5 with a variety of things for your home and garden.

On any given day, you'll find primitive, country and French decor, custom built furniture and vintage golf clubs repurposed as BBQ skewers. We have handmade jewelry and greeting cards, signs galore and handstitched Americana. Are you looking for vintage fabrics for pillows or industrial pieces? Maybe a comfy wicker chair and solar jars for the porch or old model cars for Father's Day, mixed in with a few antiques? We've got it -- in abundance -- at Abundance Vintage!

I carry the complete line of Miss Mustard Milk Paint, along with founder/blogger Marion Parson's book "Inspired You" and offer paint workshops monthly. See how this versatile paint can transform almost any surface and provides an authentic chippy look. It's great for kitchen cabinets and safe enough for babies' pieces.

This eclectic mix available makes Abundance Vintage an ideal destination for local shopping. Hope to see you soon!

Historic Fox Theatre to Host Friday Afternoon Organ Events

Historic Fox Theatre Restorations presents Fridays at the Fox! Enjoy the sounds of our powerful Wurlitzer organ as the Fox throws open the doors to the theatre each Friday at noon this summer. Bring a box lunch, or pick up your favorite treat at Holley Place Frozen Yogurt or Tegarden's Fine Chocolates and Pastries, then sit back and soak in the sounds. The fun will continue each Friday until Labor Day.

Organist Paul Van Dyck is generously donating his talent and he takes requests. See you on Fridays at the Fox! Admission is free!

Woodland Estates Retirement Community to Celebrate Father's Day

Are you looking for a good reason to come and check us out? Well this is it.

On June 16, Woodland Estates will be celebrating Father's Day with their traditional Father's Day Barbecue served from noon to 1 p.m.

Woodlands Director of Operations and Food and Beverage Director Mark Clendon has many years of experience in the foodservice industry, working in various restaurants and country clubs throughout his career. He will be cooking up for you an All-American Barbecue of brats, hot dogs, chicken, burgers, and for the vegetarians, Boca Burgers. All these will be accompanied with potato salad, and macaroni salads and all the trimmings.

Entertainment will be provided by Kellyn Belveal, who will be playing the piano in our Solarium. Come join our residents for a great afternoon of food, music and family.

Reservations can be made by calling 748-0095. The cost of barbecue is $15 per person. We would love to have you join us.

Rochester Chiropractic Center to Have Booth at Swede Day Festival

Visit Rochester Chiropractic Center's booth at Grand Mound/Rochester's 34th annual Swede Day Festival on Saturday, June 15. Activities will run from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and include a pancake breakfast, Swedish meatball lunch, parade, fun runs, pony rides and much more.

For more information on the Rochester Chiropractic Center, call (360) 273-9174 or visit www.chiropracticcenterwa.com.

New Balance to Open at Centralia Outlets

Centralia Outlets announces New Balance Factory Store to open in the Centralia Outlets. The store will be located at 102 W. High Street on the east side of the freeway, near Nike and Gap. The opening date for the store is expected to be in early August, though the Grand Opening date has not yet been released. Information regarding employment opportunities can be found on our web site www.centraliaoutlets.com.

New Balance is a leading global athletic footwear and apparel company. New Balance made their first pair of running shoes in 1938 and holds the distinction as the only company that still manufactures athletic shoes in the USA. Because feet don't come in one or two widths, and because shoes that fit better perform better, New Balance shoes come in a wide range of widths and sizes. They are also proud to be an official footwear and apparel provider of the United States Military.

First Allied Securities to Hold Open House in Celebration of Retirement of Tom Duffy

An open house will be held at the First Allied Securities office at 620 W. Main St. in Centralia, on Friday, June 28, from 3 to 5:30 p.m. The celebration will mark the retirement of Tom Duffy, a long time financial advisor in this office. Tom started at First Allied after selling his sign business in 2001 when the office was known as Ragen MacKenzie Investment Services. The same excellent service will continue to be offered by financial advisors Barbara Greatwood, CFPR, John Lawrence, Ric Cavness, Joel Hansen and Registered Assistant Amanda Lenz. Stop by to say goodbye to Tom and visit with all the folks at First Allied. Refreshments will be served.

Sponsor a Student, Leave a Legacy

Our Literacy Council invites individuals, businesses and clubs to pool their resources to sponsor an adult to receive their GED. For $150, you can cover all GED testing fees and help someone who is seeking further college goals and employment, but is unable to accomplish this crucial step due to financial difficulties. GED obtainment results in a significant increase in wages, work hours and fringe benefits, open doors to further education, and a positive legacy for their family!

Our Literacy Council requires all candidates to score competitively on GED pretests and demonstrate progress towards post-GED goals. Due to these requirements, we have a 100% success rate in our clients who attempt all subjects of the GED test! In addition, we provide free tutoring services, tutor training, professional development and family literacy resources.

You may make your GED sponsorship known or anonymous to the student, who will be notified of their individual sponsorship through a sole donor. You will receive a profile of your student's goals, an academic and/or professional update, and have the opportunity to pass on a note of encouragement! More info contact Lindsay Harjo: (360) 736-9391 x382 or lewiscountyliteracy@gmail.com.

Debbie's Boutique to Have '50s-Themed Pre-Party Before 'Love Me Tender'

Debbie's Boutique is sponsoring the Fox Theatre's June showing of "Love Me Tender," an Elvis Presley classic. Cliff and I would like to extend an invitation to everyone to dress up in your favorite '50s attire and come on out for an afternoon or evening of fun entertainment on Saturday, June 29.

Debbie's Boutique will be offering in-store specials that day from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Tony's Y-NOT will be selling Italian Ice and Polish dogs with a portion of the proceeds going to the restoration of the Fox Theatre. The afternoon matinee is at 2 pm with the evening showing starting at 7 pm.

Debbie's Boutique will have a private pre-function for those who are dressed in their favorite '50s attire, so be sure to call and get on the guest list at (360) 269-6033 or (360) 219-7566 and join us for that. Who knows there may even be a surprise visit by Elvis himself!

Prizes will be awarded during the movie's intermission as well as an announcement of the winners for the Best Dressed '50s attire male and female. We will also do a 50/50 drawing going to the Fox Theatre restoration fund.

We look forward to you joining us for this fun day-long event. P.S. Be sure also to put your name in the drawing for a key that just might put you in the drivers seat of the 1973 classic Camaro being given away by Live 95 and KITI radio.

Just Under Three Weeks Until United Way of Lewis County's Chef's Night Out Event!

Now in its fifth year, Chef's Night Out has become one of Lewis County's prime culinary events of the season. We are thrilled to have the opportunity to partner with our extremely talented, local chefs to raise funds for vital health and human service programs in Lewis County.

Over the years, Chef's Night Out has brought in over $100,000 for our community, all while providing a tasty night out for our guests! We've got an extraordinary lineup of chefs for this year's event; Darin Harris of Boccata Deli & Market, Jim Wheeler of Market St. Pub, Jeremy Wildhaber of Jeremy's Bistro, Mike Allen of O'Blarney's Irish Pub, and Donnie Stancil of McMenamin's Olympic Club. These culinary masters will go head-to-head vying for your vote at Chefs Night Out!

In addition to the Top Chef excitement, a live auction chock-full of unique experiences will be up for bid. Some of the featured items include an 8 Day/7 Night dream vacation in Cabo San Lucas, an Ultimate Seahawks tailgate party and game, a Table-to-Farm dining experience, and a Sunrise Hot Air Balloon Ride and breakfast.

To get your tickets today, visit www.lewiscountyuw.com/chefs-night-out or call United Way at (360) 748-8100. Tickets are just $50/person and space is limited. You won't want to miss this evening full of prime culinary talent! Proceeds from Chef's Night Out benefit the many health and human service organizations in Lewis County, inspiring hope and creating long-lasting changes in the lives we touch and our community.

Growing Places to Open New Store in Chehalis, Needs Help Moving

We are thrilled to be opening a new store in Chehalis at the north side of the Sunbirds complex. This new store is located at 1757 National Ave., Chehalis, and will have over 15,000 square feet of retail space where we will be able to better feature our furniture and electronics departments as well as expand our clothing racks. Our goal is to open Saturday, June 15. Our goal is the second store will help provide funds so that more at-risk youth can participate in our program.

In addition, our Board of Directors has decided to move our Farm location to the Salvation Army, which houses the Centralia Food Bank. Since the Lewis County Food Bank Coalition is moving to Chehalis, they felt the move would allow our youth to grow vegetables and then give it directly to the Centralia Food Bank. Our new location will be 303 N. Gold St., Centralia. We will continue to offer our CSA program as well as U-Pick at the new Farm site. One of our goals has been to be a host site for a community garden and by moving to downtown Centralia, we will be in a better location for residents to access the garden. We have 12 raised beds that can be "rented" by local community members. If you are interested, please call Lynn Ford at 269-8837.

We are asking for help moving on June 7, 8, and 9. Come to the thrift store at 515 Harrison Ave., Centralia, anytime from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., and we will put you to work! Of course, if you have a truck to help with the move, we could use that as well.

Gas Tax Increase Proposal Has Us Fuming

Our Views

Last November, the voters passed Initiative 1185, which required a two-thirds vote by the Legislature to increase taxes.

I-1185 was then thrown out by the Washington state Supreme Court, which ruled such a requirement would need to come from a change in the state Constitution.

Out of the state's 49 legislative districts, 44 voted in favor of the initiative, which passed with 64 percent in favor.

Past initiatives that require the two-thirds vote passed in 1993, 1998, 2007 and 2010. Three times the Legislature suspended the requirement.

Despite that strong message, our state representatives are again trying to bump up our taxes, this time to pay for transportation improvements.

If voting patterns don't sway our politicians, perhaps the latest Elway Poll will. Raising taxes to pay for transportation improvements is not popular in this state. Taken last week, the poll reveals that 63 percent oppose an increase in the gasoline tax (already sitting as ninth highest in the nation).

Our representatives, including Gov. Jay Inslee holding power in Olympia, are not following the will of the citizens, who have made it clear with their votes they do not favor the spending binge going on in our state capitol.

Instead, Inslee is proposing an increase in the state's gas tax by 10 cents in the next three years to support his $8.7 billion transportation budget.

The taxation package would also increase fees for yearly car tabs, add a new tax on trucks, increase fees for car registration, and add another tax on changing a car's ownership.

Added up, the proposed tax package would raise $5.2 billion during the next 12 years. It would cost the typical owner of a car worth $10,000 about $250 more each year in taxes.

Another disturbing portion of the proposal is it would give taxing power to the secretary of transportation to raise, without legislative action, the gas tax by an additional 3 cents.

This is despite Inslee promising during his campaign just last year he would not raise taxes.

This is mind blowing and mind boggling.

Once again, the legislative solution is to add more taxes.

It's as if we are continuing to pound our heads against a brick wall with the message we do not have a revenue problem, we have a spending problem.

We believe if we could get a few business leaders from Lewis County to head up Interstate 5 to Olympia, we could cut a few million of unnecessary spending in about two hours, and we would bring our own lunch and not expect taxpayers to pay for it.

COMMENTARY: I Was Just Thinking ...

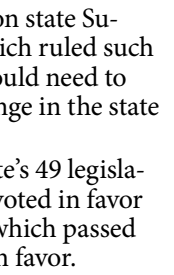
Another Call for What This Columnist Considers to Be Reason



By Bill Moeller

Those of you who have absolutely nothing better to do with your time than read these columns might remember that a few weeks ago I wrote about school summer vacations, and how out of sync they are with our Pacific Northwest weather. I proposed a solution: Move the summer school vacations from June through August to July through September.

I still think it makes sense, since June is usually a wet, chilly month and September includes what I consider to be the nicest days of the entire year.

I mentioned that I intended to send a copy of the column to the state superintendent of public instruction to see if I could get any response. To my surprise I did, although it was from the director of financial policy and research and not the superintendant himself. The information contained in that letter differed from what I expected to receive, so I'd like to share it with you.

First of all, contrary to what I had believed, the school calendar is not set by the state, but by each individual local school district. (I'll bet you didn't know that, either.) All the state requires is a minimum of 1,000 hours of instruction during a 180-day school year. To quote the letter, "Most school boards choose to start in August or September, but there are a couple of schools (not entire districts) that start a little later in October or run year-round programs."

My correspondent admitted not knowing why schools started using September through May as the academic year. If we look at history, school vacations were originally set to coincide with when students were needed around the farm to help out during the growing season and harvest time. And harvest time did not end in August, which is one reason why our traditional "harvest moon" is the end of September or beginning of October.

So the point I'm trying to make is this: School summer vacations used to be scheduled to coincide with weather patterns, so why don't we return to that standard? The current policy seems to have developed from the attitude of "well, that's the way everyone else does it." I'm sorry, but that isn't good enough reasoning for me.

I'm too long in the tooth to start a campaign to adapt the schools academic year to match our local climate conditions, but maybe someone else can raise the banner and lead the march forward to logic and reasonability. I'll beat the drum in any parade if I can ride on a float. I want to repeat this point: Each school district has the power to set its own schedule.

A circuitous path leads me to comment first of all that I've noticed that the trees around Centralia's schools are finally leafing out after being butchered earlier this spring, but they still look gawdawful.

That eventually leads me to comment that I now live in an apartment complex on Scheuber Road known as Tall Firs Apartments. When I returned from a morning swim on Monday, I heard the sound of chain saws reverberating from the center of the compound. The two tallest trees in the complex were being cut down. I attempted to count the tree rings on the stubs and I figure they had stood there for more than a half century.

The reason given for the logging was that they could have been a danger to the apartment complex next to them. Hey, don't insurance companies offer storm damage policies for such situations?

So what do you call Tall Firs when the trees are cut down, "Tall Stumps?"

Letters to the Editor

As Sons Graduate, School Staffs Praised

To the editor:

I was watching "The Today Show" a few months ago. A famous football coach was on, talking about the characteristics you need to be a successful football coach in the NFL. I was a little excited to learn that I had most of those characteristics.

Not one to keep my joy to myself, I called my husband immediately. Somewhat surprisingly, he embraced my potential new career enthusiastically. I own Abundance Vintage in Centralia and frequently need his help at my shop. I think he instantly pictured the end of the perpetual "honey-do" list as I guided my team to a Super Bowl ring. Silly man, I'd want to redecorate the locker rooms and would totally need his help.

Naturally, this got me thinking about my sons; both reached milestones in their lives this spring, and the question of what do I want to be when I grow up has taken a whole new turn for my family. On Saturday, my high school senior, Nick, will graduate from W.F. West. Last month, my 20-year-old, Zach, received his bachelor of arts degree from Saint Martin's University.

It is a time ripe with both terror and joy in our house, to say the least, as my sons ponder not, I hope, where their lives will take them, but rather where they will steer their own ships.

I am proud. And anxious. Have we given them what they need to thrive in today's world? I think they've got the basics covered, especially regarding their education to date, because you need education and training, along with your own innate characteristics, for success.

I am particularly in awe at the class of seniors this year at W.F. West. Seven students tied for valedictorian, with 4.0 grade point averages. Many of them are the kids that Nick has spent his school years with since first grade at Cascade Elementary. What a wonderful group of peers, and how lucky I consider him to be for knowing them.

And what a wonderful group of teachers as well. Their tenacity, skill and compassion, their love of the profession they've chosen is so very apparent in this group of seniors.

Teachers may not point to a building or an exquisite meal and say, "I made this." Yet without them, without the education they've facilitated, not much else is possible. I hope that the teachers know in their very souls what an impact they make every day in so many lives.

Along with teachers are so many other people at the schools: the counselors, coaches, support staff, custodians and folks in the cafeteria, all attending to our kids, and creating a place for them to learn and grow.

So, between the tears and the laughter, I want to say thank you. You made a difference. I noticed. I think a lot of us did.

Centralia School Board Member Kelly Praised

To the editor:

Recently, I was very heartened to see that Mike Kelly is again running for the Centralia School Board.

Kelly has been such a supportive and productive member of the board for all the student programs. Additionally, he has taken the time to build many strong and effective professional relationships with most (if not all) of the school district employees. This has allowed Kelly to make a positive and direct impact on our educational system.

As a legislative representative of the school district, Kelly has benefited our community by being instrumental in fostering solid working relationships between multiple government entities to solve complex issues affecting the district.

Kelly believes in supporting, rather than cutting, programs so as to provide opportunities of great importance for all students to work toward their potential. This also presents students with the good fortune to be able to enjoy participation in extracurricular school activities, which are so highly influential in helping to build self-esteem.

As a TransAlta community donations volunteer, Kelly has contributed much to our community. The leaders and employees of TransAlta should feel proud to have such a high-quality community member on their team.

Thank you, TransAlta, and thank you, Mike Kelly, for serving the students, employees and patrons of the Centralia School District so well.

Kelly definitely has my vote in the upcoming election so he may continue working for our children and our school district.

Voting Limits Pathetic

To the editor:

I think that the idea from so-called "God-fearing, good Christian men" who want to restrict voter rights for minorities and women is pathetic. This country is founded on freedom and liberty, and that's what the millions of soldiers who have died or been wounded in the dozen and a half wars have fought for.

I also think that the only reason they want to restrict minorities and women is they know that they're the only ones who think when they vote. This right should be preserved in this country and not restricted.

• A victim reported that gas was siphoned out of a vehicle at Yard Birds at 12:31 p.m. Monday.

• A bicycle was reported stolen on the 300 block of Southwest Third Street at 2:21 p.m. Monday.

• Two shopping carts were reported stolen from the Twin City Senior Center at 12:16 p.m. Tuesday.

Malicious Mischief

• An unknown suspect reportedly broke a window on the driver side door of a vehicle parked on the 100 block of Southwest Fifth Street at 8:07 a.m. Tuesday.

Vehicle Prowl

• A fishing pole and Sony stereo were reported stolen out of a vehicle parked at 1590 North National Avenue at 11:11 a.m. Monday.

LEWIS COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE

Vehicle Prowl

• A 27-year-old woman reported her unlocked car, located on the 400 block of Tucker Road in Toledo, was broken into sometime between 7:30 p.m. on June 3 and 4 a.m. on June 4. Deputies arrived at Tucker Road at 10:30 a.m. on June 4. The victim reported that her wallet, Twin Star Credit Union debit card, Sears card, $10 in cash and a credit union envelope with $250 inside had been taken from her car, which was parked under her carport.

Burglary

• A 55-year old victim from Glenoma reported his property on the 7500 block of U.S. Highway 12 in Glenoma had been burglarized sometime between 7 p.m. on June 3 and 5 a.m. on June 4. The suspect or suspects allegedly cut padlocks on three outbuildings owned by the victim. It was unclear whether any property had been taken. Each padlock will cost $20 to replace. Deputies responded to the scene on June 4 at 9:45 p.m.

Residential Burglary

• A Pe Ell man, 59, reported on June 4 at approximately 3:45 p.m., that his home on the 100 block of Meyer Road in Pe Ell had been burglarized while he was on vacation from May 25 to June 4. The man's son was house-sitting while his father was away. The alleged thief appeared to have entered the residence by removing part of a window in the back of the house. A 5-ounce silver medallion valued at $3,300, $2,100 in cash, approximately $1,000 in quarters and $400 in silver dollars were removed from a safe in the house, according to the victim. The sheriff's office has a suspect and an investigation is underway.

Violation of Protection Order

• Christopher Roy Beecroft, 36, of Toledo, was arrested on June 4 for violation of a protection order and resisting arrest. At approximately 9:30 p.m. on June 4, deputies arrived at Hop Road North in Toledo to serve Beecroft with a temporary order of protection which ordered the man to vacate the residence and stay 500 feet away from the residence. Beecroft, however, made it very clear he would not leave the house, and told the deputy he was to leave. The deputy made multiple attempts to convince him to leave voluntarily but he refused. At that point, Beecroft was taken into custody for resisting arrest and booked into jail for protection order violation and resisting arrest.

In Remembrance

VIRGIL MELVIN DANIELSON

Virgil Danielson, 91, of Lacrosse, Wash., passed peacefully from this life into the loving arms of his Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, surrounded by his loving family on Sunday, May 6, 2013, in Colfax, Wash.

He was born on Jan. 3, 1922 in Ellsworth, Wis., to Adolph and Lena (Borgstrom) Danielson. At the tender age of 5, he lost his father. When he was 9, the family moved to Washington state. He attended school through 8th grade. He always said he went to high school " in the front door and out the back".

Virgil served in the U.S. Army from Jan. 3, 1942, until July 3, 1944. On June 10, 1950, he married Charlotte Cowley. They later divorced on Sept. 9, 1957. On Dec. 11, 1957, he married his beloved wife and soul mate, Christine Wilhelm, at Napavine, Wash. They lived in many different towns in Washington, while he worked at many different jobs. He also volunteered his time to drive people to appointments, shopping or other errands.

In 1992, Dad was diagnosed with Prostate Cancer, which he bravely battled for 21 years.

Dad loved to hunt and fish. He especially loved spending time with his family and friends. He was proud of his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. He loved them all dearly. He truly loved life, even when battling many health problems. Dad loved his church and listening to the Glory Band. He was a humble man who would do anything for anyone, at anytime, never taking anything in return.

Virgil is survived by his loving wife of 54 years, Christine; one daughter and four sons; Sherri (Steve) Riddle, of Chehalis, Larry Danielson, of Chehalis, David Danielson, of Fairfield, Craig Danielson, of Endicott and Rick (Karen) Danielson, of Anacortes. He is also survived by 22 grandchildren, 28 great-grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews, and many, many friends. He never met a stranger!

He is preceded in death by his parents, one sister, Margaret McGovern; two brothers, Kenny and Orville; and his beloved son, Scott.

We were truly blessed to have such a great man in our lives! He is greatly missed, but forever in our hearts.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to Prostate Cancer Research or to Fellowship Church, 2102 E. Everette, Spokane, WA 99208.

A celebration of life will be held on Saturday, June 22, 2013, at 3 p.m., at Fellowship Church in Spokane. A luncheon will be served after.

Until we meet again, Dad....

Murderer: Man's Attorney Says Client Has Mental Health Problems

Judge Richard Brosey sentenced Miller to the higher end of the sentencing range he faced, which was between 250 and 333 months, approximately 20 to 28 years in prison, with an additional five years for a firearm enhancement.

The judge also sentenced him to eight months for each of the four charges of unlawful possession of a firearm, which he pleaded guilty to prior to trial. Those sentences will run concurrent with his first-degree murder sentence. Miller indicated to his attorney he planned to appeal his conviction.

Brosey said the killing was "totally unjustified" and "absolutely senseless."

The judge also told Miller that the statement he read during sentencing was "more than a little inconsistent" to his previous statement to police, and contradicted evidence presented to the jury at trial.

"David Carson was not an angel by any standard," Brosey said, adding that the victim had appeared in his courtroom for his own criminal cases.

"That being said," he continued, "Mr. Carson did not deserve to die."

"He was extremely paranoid about someone trying kill him."

Joe Enbody
discussing Weston Miller's mindset prior to murder

CAITLIN CARSON, David's daughter, attended the sentencing hearing with several family members and friends of her father. She cried throughout the hearing, and was unable to read her written statement aloud to the court, so a victim's advocate did it for her.

"Not only did we lose our dad on March 13, but your daughter lost hers as well," Caitlin said in her statement. She also said she hopes he suffers from knowing that he won't be there for his daughter's wedding — just like her dad won't be there for hers.

Daniel Carson, the victim's brother, asked the judge to sentence Miller to the maximum possible prison term to send a message to "the rest of the meth users in the county" that when they choose to pick up a gun and end someone else's life, there are severe consequences.

"It's a classic symptom of meth abuse," he said, adding that his brother struggled with drug addiction throughout his adult life, and that it was likely the reason he was spending time with Miller.

"You not only took my brother but you took my childhood friend," he said, making eye contact with Miller and speaking directly to him throughout his statement.

"You reduced my brother, who was a father, an uncle — a great uncle — to a pile of ash in a plastic bag," he said.

DeSalvo, who testified at the trial, also spoke at Miller's sentencing, and at times shouted and pointed at Miller.

DeSalvo also accused him of being a serial killer and being involved in the disappearances of girls in the area. She also said Miller had told her before the fatal shooting that there would be reports of a missing girl named "Stephanie" in the media soon.

DeSalvo told him she hoped he suffers while in prison, and that when he killed Carson, he took everything from her.

DEPUTY PROSECUTOR Brad Meagher, who requested the judge sentence Miller to the higher end of sentencing range, said Miller committed the murder with one of the several guns he owned, despite a court order that was in place that legally barred him from possessing firearms.

Meagher also disputed the claims of Miller and his attorney that he was suffering from a mental illness at the time of the homicide. The mental health experts hired by the prosecution who examined Miller, said his paranoid delusions coincided with his use of methamphetamine, Meagher told the judge.

Miller's court-appointed attorney, Joe Enbody, citing the report the mental health expert he hired provided to the court, disagreed with the prosecutor, and said his client started suffering from paranoid delusions long before the March 2012 shooting and prior to his meth use.

In the year leading up to the shooting, Miller's family and friends said he became increasingly depressed and paranoid, Enbody said. Multiple doctors that treated Miller prior to the homicide said he had pre-existing mental health conditions.

"He was extremely paranoid about someone trying kill him," Enbody said.

Hoarder: County Attorney Says Additional Litigation Could Be Filed in Case

He neglected to pay those bills, and after each, the county took a lien for lack of payment. Those liens now total more than $100,000, according to Bill Teitzel, the county's supervisor for environmental service.

In late March, the county won a summary judgment allowing it to abate the Harrison property, which had become a graveyard for scrap metal and broken down cars. But, the county has not yet undertaken that abatement due to the ongoing litigation, County Prosecutor Kevin Nelson said on Wednesday.

BETWEEN LATE MARCH and late April, county officials became concerned Bonagofski might be transferring nuisance items from Harrison to Reynolds, according to court documents.

Under direction from the county, Lewis County Sheriff's Office Deputy Gabriel Frase on April 26 investigated the matter.

In a casual conversation with Frase, Bonagofski did not try to hide his transportation of junk property. Rather, he told the deputy that he had moved a car from Harrison to Reynolds and that he planned to move additional cars in the future.

Lewis County, in response, requested and was granted by the court an injunction to stop Bonagofski from shifting the nuisance items from one property to the other.

WITHIN THE FORECLOSURE case file are numerous documents submitted by Bonagofski, who is representing himself in the case. Also in the file are hand-written documents from Raymond-Leo Jarl Bell, a man not named as a defendant but who, according to Prosecutor Kevin Nelson, "claims an interest in the property."

Jarl Bell filed his documents from the SeaTac Federal Detention Center, where he has been imprisoned since July 14, 2011. Documents from both men accuse the government of operating as a corrupt "corporation," state their rights have been violated and that they oppose the court's decisions.

Many of the documents had been annotated, but it was not clear who wrote the numerous and extensive marginal notes.

IN A MAY 2 document, Bonagofski specified his primary grievance as Lewis County's infringement on his right to "exclude government from my life and be left alone."

By confiscating his privately-owned items and property, the government committed theft, he said

"I am an absolute owner," Bonagofski wrote in the document. "I do not share anything with the government voluntarily."

Throughout the multipage document, Bonagofski cited extensive case law and sources ranging from the U.S. Constitution to the "Ancient Law of Kings."

He concluded the document with a three paragraph signature; the first of those paragraphs said: "(:For the :Victor-Jerome: a man aggriev[ed]-wish is with the void-interference with the void-injury with the now-time-Rights-interference with the above-(common-law-invoking)-now-time-definition.)"

ABOUT A MONTH prior to filing that document, Bonagofski made his reimbursement demand.

He notified Judge James Lawler, in writing, that he would need that money before he met the terms and conditions set forth by the court; namely, that he would stop moving nuisance items from one property to the other. He also told Lawler that he would need the $394.2 billion within three days.

In a separate document, Bonagofski explained the reasoning behind his claim.

Lewis County, by Bonagofski's estimate, owed him $1 per second, from July 20, 2004 to April 8, 2013, for each vehicle, appliance, screw, nut, bolt, nail, piece of cardboard, piece of scrap metal and piece of lumber removed from his two properties.

He also set out the same financial orders for each usage of "colorable statutory maritime jurisdiction" as well as each visit from an agent or employee of the county.

Lewis County's foreclosure case is ongoing. There is potential for additional litigation, according to Prosecutor Kevin Nelson.

Emails: Kirby Said Disciplinary Letter Did Not Factor in Retirement Decision

face-to-face meetings for "critical" conversations. Bodnar directed Kirby not to "undermine, manipulate or sabotage" district decisions.

FOLLOWING THE disciplinary action, Kirby, 61, sent a letter of resignation announcing his decision to retire on June 30.

"I want to add that a recent letter of discipline given to me has little basis in fact, and it has not influenced my decision to retire at this time," Kirby, who has served as a Centralia principal for more than two decades, wrote on March 20. "In short, I have asked some questions not appreciated, maybe I've been too blunt, but accusing me of lying and impugning the reasons I've written what I write is just conjecture."

KIRBY SENT a scathing rebuttal to Bodnar's disciplinary letter, which detailed his concerns on several district issues, following his resignation.

"I wonder if the district office uses misinformation as just another management tool to deflect criticism. The district office also demonizes people by questioning the motivations of people who question them," Kirby, a former state representative in the Legislature wrote. "Are you asking I simply take carte blanche any statement made by someone in the district office and support that position without any clarifying questioning?"

A FREEDOM OF INFORMATION Act request for the emails in question and documents related to the discipline confirmed just one inaccuracy in Kirby's communications, which did not change his substantive point and he apologized for after receiving clarification. But, Bodnar said, that particular inaccuracy about the source of funding for a summer program could have mislead district employees.

The documents revealed a single interaction that could have seemed disrespectful or sarcastic on Kirby's part, though the email ended with a smiley face.

Still, Bodnar said, the district uses an inordinate amount of organizational energy on email clarifications that could be cleared more easily with a phone call or in-person meeting. Bodnar said he has asked Kirby repeatedly to stop emailing.

BODNAR DID NOT allow Kirby to comment for this story. In an interview Tuesday, Bodnar declined to cite specific examples of how Kirby had perpetuated false information other than the mistaken source of summer school funding and offered little evidence to support the district's strongly worded claims in the disciplinary process.

"The superintendent offered to let me answer questions in his presence, but we couldn't agree on parameters for that discussion," Kirby wrote in an e-mail to The Chronicle Wednesday. "It is also obvious to me the superintendent has chosen to respond to the records request with only a portion of my rebuttal rather than the full document I submitted to him. As such, I feel it is a misrepresentation of what I wrote by omission of parts of the rebuttal."

A MAJOR POINT of contention between Kirby and the district is the handling of the Medicaid Administrative Match program.

The optional program reimburses schools for time spent for referring eligible students and families to services. The district can distribute the funding at its discretion.

When Edison was receiving considerably less per student than other buildings, Kirby said, Bodnar asked him to talk with other principals about obtaining Medicaid money.

Kirby said district officials advised him to get Edison teachers to ask for elaborations on medical issues to keep conversations going past the 15-minute threshold needed to bill Medicaid.

"And you (Bodnar) offered $7,000 in additional support if I dropped the concerns on Medicaid match," Kirby wrote in his rebuttal.

While Kirby said he does not believe anyone is intentionally defrauding the program, he worries that some of the questionable practices warrant investigation.

"Some seemed clean as a whistle, but in some cases I wonder if the line has been crossed in what we can legally do," Kirby wrote.

Kirby said he worries that emphasizing obtaining additional Medicaid money has blurred the district's vision on what it can and cannot do.

For the 2011-12 school year, the Centralia School District received $317,243 in reimbursements, compared to the Chehalis School District's $50,476, according to the Washington State Health Care Authority.

Centralia has 24 percent more Medicaid eligible students and twice the staff to administer the program than Chehalis, according to HCA.

A HUGE EQUALITY problem exists because of the uneven way the district distributes the Medicaid reimbursement money among buildings, Kirby said.

A percentage of the money for staff time goes back to the building that sought the reimbursement.

"When one building has far more per student funds to provide for technology, in-services for staff, library books, and an assortment of other services, equity in education goes to the wayside," Kirby wrote.

Additionally, Kirby said, few monitoring controls exist for the program, which needs tighter checks to ensure limits.

DESPITE THE INEQUALITIES the program produces, Kirby said, the administration told him to stop discussing the issue.

"I think the inequities created and the question around whether it was being done legally or not were valid questions that professionals should ask," Kirby, who has written education finance editorials for many major newspapers in the state, wrote.

Bodnar disagrees with Kirby's position on the Medicaid match issue. He said the district bills for "legitimate" conversations and distributes reimbursements fairly.

BODNAR COMMENDED Kirby for his career legacy working on social justice issues and his efforts to equalize resources for all students in public education.

"I really don't want to be in a dispute with him. He's been a dedicated public educator for 34 years," Bodnar said. "But there are times when you have a disagreement and you have to have corrective action."

Bodnar also said he would like to work effectively with Kirby if he is elected to the school board.

Government Secretly Scooping Up Phone Records of Millions of Verizon Customers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Security Agency has been collecting the telephone records of millions of U.S. customers of Verizon under a top secret court order, according to a report in Britain's Guardian newspaper.

The order was granted by the secret Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court on April 25 and is good until July 19, the newspaper reported Wednesday. The order requires Verizon, one of the nation's largest telecommunications companies, on an "ongoing, daily basis" to give the NSA information on all telephone calls in its systems, both within the U.S. and between the U.S. and other countries.

The newspaper said the document, a copy of which it had obtained, shows for the first time that under the Obama administration the communication records of millions of U.S. citizens were being collected indiscriminately and in bulk, regardless of whether they were suspected of any wrongdoing.

Verizon spokesman Ed McFadden said Wednesday the company had no comment. The White House declined comment and referred questions to the NSA. The NSA had no immediate comment.

Economists See No Stock Bubble Even as Fed's Low Rates Help Boost Share Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nervous debate is raging among investors and analysts: Has the Federal Reserve inflated a stock market bubble by driving interest rates to record lows?

The answer, according to economists surveyed by The Associated Press: No.

Three-quarters of the economists say stocks, which are at their lowest point in a month but are up 19 percent since November, aren't overvalued. Many point to strong corporate profits as justifying the surge in stock prices, which have more than doubled since bottoming in 2009.

The economists expect many consumers to respond to their increased stock wealth by spending more in coming months. Higher spending would help sustain and perhaps accelerate growth.

The economists think growth is slowing to around a 2 percent annual rate in the April-June quarter from a 2.4 percent rate last quarter. The key reasons: Federal spending cuts, higher taxes and economic weakness in Europe and elsewhere.

Judge Rules In Favor of Dying Pa. Girl Seeking Adult Lung Transplant; Expert Raises Concerns

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A federal judge has temporarily allowed a dying 10-year-old girl to move up the adult waiting list for a lung transplant, though an expert has questioned the decision on medical and ethical grounds.

"We are beyond thrilled," Janet Murnaghan, the girl's mother, told The Associated Press on Wednesday after U.S. District Judge Michael Baylson intervened in the case. "Obviously we still need a match."

Baylson suspended an age factor in the nation's transplant rules for 10 days for Sarah Murnaghan, who has been at Children's Hospital of Philadelphia for three months with end-stage cystic fibrosis.

The judge's ruling lifting the age requirement applies only to Sarah, at least until a June 14 hearing on the request for a broader injunction.

An expert questioned Baylson's decision, which came a day after Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius declined to become involved in the case, despite urgent pleas from several Pennsylvania congressmen.

Search Halted in Philadelphia Building Collapse; Six Dead

By Kathy Matheson, Keith Collins and Michael Rubinkam
The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — After a slow but steady overnight search buoyed by the discovery of a woman in the rubble, rescue workers at the scene of a building collapse that killed six people took a temporary break Thursday in what had been a round-the-clock dig for additional victims.

A building under demolition collapsed onto a neighboring thrift store Wednesday morning, injuring at least 14 people, including a 61-year-old woman pulled from the debris nearly 13 hours later and hospitalized in critical condition.

AUTHORITIES HAVE NOT officially ended the search, but the sense of urgency has subsided after workers combed through bricks and rubble using buckets and their bare hands well into the night.

"We're going to keep searching until we're absolutely sure no one else is there," battalion fire chief Charles Lupre said shortly before dawn. He said there were no reports of anyone missing, but there was always the chance that someone was inside who wasn't reported missing.

IT WAS UNCLEAR WHAT ROLE the demolition work might have played in the collapse, but the accident raised questions about how closely the highly visible spot on Market Street, one of Philadelphia's signature boulevards, was being monitored, particularly amid word of the demolition contractor's many legal and financial troubles. Officials from the U.S. Department of Labor and Occupational Safety and Health Administration were at the scene.

FOR WEEKS, PEOPLE working nearby had watched with growing concern as a crew took down the vacant four-story building next to a Salvation Army thrift store at the edge of downtown.

A roofer atop another building didn't think the operation looked safe. A pair of window washers across the street spotted an unbraced, 30-foot section of wall and predicted among themselves the whole building would simply fall down.

On Wednesday, that's what happened. The unstable shell of a building collapsed into a massive heap of bricks and splintered wood, taking part of the thrift store with it.

"Our thoughts and our prayers go out to those who lost their lives, and their families," Mayor Michael Nutter said at a late-night news conference at which he announced the death toll. "At the same time, we pray that those who survive will recover not only physically, but certainly mentally from the trauma of being in a building and it suddenly collapses."

Witnesses said they heard a loud rumbling sound immediately before the collapse.

Firefighters stand by while some look for anyone trapped among debris at the site of a collapsed building in Philadelphia on Wednesday. Deputy Fire Chief Robert Coyne said early Thursday that 61-year-old Myra Plekam was pulled from the debris more than 12 hours after the building collapsed and that she was awake and talking to rescuers. She's the 14th survivor of Wednesday's collapse.

Horse Slaughterhouse Accuses USDA of IRS Tactics

By Jeri Clausing
The Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — A southeastern New Mexico company's plans to convert a cattle plant into a horse slaughterhouse has hit another roadblock, this time over an environmental dispute that the company's attorney blames on the Obama administration putting politics over policy.

Blair Dunn, who represents Valley Meat Co. of Roswell in its more than yearlong effort to get approval to slaughter horses, says the U.S. Department of Agriculture keeps changing the rules because it opposes horse slaughter.

USDA officials referred questions to the Justice Department, which did not immediately respond to a phone call seeking comment.

VALLEY MEAT'S APPLICATION to resume domestic horse slaughter has ignited an emotional, national debate over whether horses are livestock or domestic companions. The company wants to ship horse meat to countries where it is consumed by humans and sold for things like zoo food.

The issue has divided horse rescue and animal welfare groups, ranchers, politicians and Indian tribes about what is the most humane way to deal with the country's horse overpopulation and the rising number of neglected and starving horses as the West deals with persistent drought.

SINCE THE COMPANY PASSED its inspection in late April, officials have been dragging their feet on giving the plant final approval to open by questioning whether it needs a permit under the federal Clean Water Act for discharging waste into water, Dunn said. The plant, he said, doesn't discharge anything into water, and such a permit was never needed during the 20 years the plant slaughtered cattle.

"If these were not requirements for a cattle facility, they cannot now suddenly become requirements for a horse facility," Dunn said in an email to David Glass, who is one of the attorneys representing the USDA against a lawsuit by Valley Meat over delays in approving its application.

Dunn compared the process to that of the Internal Revenue Service, which has been accused of subjecting conservative political groups to extra scrutiny when they applied for tax-exempt status.

"Should somebody be looking into whether or not there is direction from the White House to use/abuse USDA/EPA authority with regard to Valley Meat because they are on the other side of a political issue from the president?" Dunn said he wrote to Glass.

DUNN SAYS GLASS HAS not replied in writing but has left two voicemails saying the issue with the permit involves questions over whether the company needs the discharge permit as mandated by the Clean Water Act.

Glass, like the USDA, referred questions to the Justice Department's communications office, which did not immediately return phone calls.

Turkish Officials Deliver More Conciliatory Messages Ahead of Erdogan's Return

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkish officials, scrambling to contain tensions, have delivered more conciliatory messages to thousands of protesters denouncing what they say is the government's increasingly authoritarian rule and its meddling in lifestyles.

The efforts come ahead of Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan's return on Thursday from a four-day North African tour. All eyes will be on him to see if he also softens his line.

Huseyin Celik, deputy leader of Erdogan's Islamic-rooted party, said the government is sympathetic to secular-minded Turks concerns and is prepared to take steps to "eliminate" their fears.

He has also called on party supporters not to come out in force to greet Erdogan when he arrives.

A human rights group says "several people" were hospitalized late Wednesday when police used tear gas to disperse protests in Ankara.

Koreas Agree to Hold Talks on Reopening Jointly Run Complex After Months of Sinking Relations

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — North and South Korea on Thursday agreed to hold talks on reopening a jointly run factory complex and possibly other issues, after months of deteriorating relations and a day before a U.S.-China summit in which the North is expected to be a key topic.

The envisioned talks could help rebuild avenues of inter-Korean cooperation that were obliterated in recent years amid hardline stances by both countries, though the key issue isolating the North from the world community — its nuclear program — is not up for debate.

The North's Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of Korea, in a statement carried by state media, said it is open to holding talks with Seoul on reopening the Kaesong complex just north of the Demilitarized Zone separating the countries.

South Korean Unification Ministry spokesman Kim Hyung-suk expressed hope that the talks could become an opportunity for the two Koreas to start building trust. He said Seoul will announce the time and agenda for the talks later, but didn't elaborate.

The decade-old Kaesong complex, the product of an era of inter-Korean cooperation, shut down gradually this spring after Pyongyang cut border communications and access, then pulled the complex's 53,000 North Korean workers. The last of hundreds of South Korean managers at Kaesong left last month.

Turkey Sees Largest Anti-Govt Protests In Years But Vital Tourism Industry Shrugs Off Threat

ISTANBUL (AP) — Turkey, a largely Muslim nation that bridges Europe and Asia, has a flourishing tourist industry based on ancient historical sites and ruins, a world-ranked metropolis in Istanbul, wide sandy Mediterranean beaches and stunning regions of natural beauty.

A look at the industry as Turkey is hit by its largest anti-government demonstrations in years:

Turkey attracted more than 37.7 million visitors in 2012, according to the Ministry of Culture and Tourism, which says the country is among the top 10 most popular tourist destinations in the world. Over 5.2 million visitors have arrived already this year, a nearly 14 percent increase over the same period in 2012, it says.

Some 378,000 U.S. residents visited Turkey in 2011, the latest year in which figures are available, according to the U.S. Department of Commerce.

Students Create Animals in Great Recycled Zoo Project

By Deborah Carey

Centralia School District

Edison Elementary School students recently took part in the Great Recycled Zoo Project. Students at the Centralia school were asked to build any animal they wanted from household items that could be reused, such as egg cartons, cans, plastic bottles, toilet paper tubes, cereal boxes, plastic lids, newspapers, etc. They could even invent their own animals if they wanted to.

Once the animals were completed, they were brought to school and displayed in the foyer. Many different animals were made, including birds, turtles, a tiger, a panda bear, chicks, fish and much more.

The winners and their animals were McKenzie Davies, horse; Giovanni Flores-Cuenca, parrot; Gage Lafferty, tiger; and Emma Elder, an elephant splashing water on a bird on its back.

The Edison PTO then paid to enter all of the animals and some other artwork from Edison Elementary into the Spring Youth Fair. All four of the above winners also took home first-place ribbons from the youth fair.

Reynolds, Pocklington Lead Talented Squad

By Aaron VanTuyl

avantuyl@chronline.com

There's plenty of differences between The Chronicle's 2013 All-Area Softball co-MVPs.

One swings from the right, the other from the left. One plays the infield, the other plays the outfield. One is from Chehalis, the other from Centralia; one is headed for the SEC, and the other for the Ivy Leagues.

They can both, however, hit nearly any pitch almost as far as they want.

Centralia's Parker Pocklington and W.F. West's Marissa Reynolds headlined this year's installment of the All-Area Softball Team, combining for a whopping 21 home runs between them.

Pocklington, the Evergreen 2A Conference's Offensive MVP, hit 10 of those homers — though, to be fair, Reynolds had an extra four games at the State 2A Softball Tournament to reach 11. Pocklington, a shortstop who has signed to play at the University of Arkansas next spring, hit an impressive .538 over the course of the season in her fourth year as a starter for the Tigers.

Reynolds, the Bearcats' Princeton-bound center fielder, hit .500 with a 1.118 slugging percentage and knocked five of her home runs during the postseason. She drove in 38 runs in 26 games, with a school-record 29 walks and tied her own regular-season record with six home runs.

Napavine, which took third at the State 2B Softball Tournament for the best finish among local fastpitch teams, landed three players on the All-Area squad. Mackenzie Olson, a junior pitcher and first baseman, hit .511 with a .957 slugging percentage, nine home runs and 48 RBIs, with a 10-2 record on the mound and 54 strikeouts in 71 innings. Alexa Peters, a senior playing for the Academy of Art University in San Francisco next season, also pitched and played first base, hitting .500 with two homers and 28 RBIs while going 14-3 with a 2.74 earned-run average and 104 strikeouts in 115 innings. Demi Sahlinger, the Tigers' third baseman, led her team with a .575 batting average along with 17 stolen bases, 35 RBIs and four homers.

Reynolds had plenty of crimson and grey company on the All-Area squad. Teammates Ali Graham and Mattie Boucher shared the Evergreen 2A Conference's Pitching MVP award, with Graham — a left-handed sophomore — going 10-2 and fanning 74 in 83 ⅓ innings of work, and Boucher — a right-handed junior — posting a 1.43 ERA with a 12-2 record and 71 strikeouts in 73 ⅔ innings. Kenna Tornow, a senior second-baseman and leadoff hitter bound for the University of Great Falls in Montana, hit .371 and struck out twice all season.

Centralia's Erika Brower and Mackenzie Wasson helped lead the Tigers to within a game of the State 2A tournament, losing to eventual second-in-state R.A. Long in the third-place game of the district tournament. Brower, a senior set to play for Centralia College next season, hit .400 with nine home runs while playing third base and pitching, while Wasson — a junior pitcher and first baseman — hit .462 with four home runs.

Adna's Emma Brattain, a four-year starter behind the plate for, hit .424 to earn her second All-Area nod. The senior plans to play at Centralia College next season, after leading the Pirates to the state tournament in each of her four seasons.

Morton-White Pass junior Ashley Kelly hit .521 with four home runs and 33 RBIs, with a .906 slugging percentage. She helped the combination Timberwolf softball program to it's first-ever piece of hardware with a fourth-place finish at the State 2B tournament.

Pe Ell's Kayla Capps, a junior shortstop, provided pop in the middle of the Trojans' lineup with five home runs, a .430 batting average and just two strikeouts, helping her team to its seventh-straight state tournament appearance.

Joni Lancaster, a freshman shortstop, helped Rochester reach the playoffs for the first time since 2006, hitting .410 with 12 doubles, five triples and a pair of home runs for a Warrior team that finished third in the SWW 1A League Evergreen Division.

SUNNY VIEW: Weather Provides Enhanced Experience At Rainier

By Jack Royle

For The Chronicle

With last weekend offering dryer and warmer weather, locals and tourists alike took advantage of hiking various trails in the Mount Rainier National Park.

Although few roads remain closed until late June and into July, many of them opened during the month of May, including the Nisqually to Paradise, Stevens Canyon, State Route 410/ Chinook Pass, Cayuse Pass via State Routes 410 and 123, and the White River road.

With exceptions of the Ohanapecosh visitor center which will remain closed for the 2013 year due to sequestration budget cuts and the Sunrise visitor center which is scheduled to be open on July 3rd, both the Longmire Museum and the Paradise Henry M. Jackson visitor center are open for exhibits and information.

As May ended, visitors began looking for site-seeing opportunities and also a chance for a little trekking. With some of the higher trails still covered with snowpack, they offer a little more challenge to each hike, but for those families with younger trekkers, the lower, more flat trails provide plenty of aweing views without too much of a workout.

Trail of the Shadows seems to be a go-to trail for most families. While offering views of the lava-flow flats and being close to the Longmire Museum, this trail is a great opportunity for adventure for the easier-going hikers.

Waterfalls tend to be the attention-grabber while driving up to the Paradise Henry M. Jackson Memorial visitor center, with spots to view right off the road at Christine Falls and Narada Falls. Other opportunities to view waterfalls require a little on-foot traveling such as Carter and Madcap Falls which are on the trailhead beginning at Cougar Rock.

With weather forecasts predicting fairly decent weather in the coming weeks, now is the time to pack your pack and explore the Mount Rainier National Park.

Hunting and Fishing Report

Local Rivers Opened This Past Saturday

By the Seattle Times

Many local rivers and streams opened this past Saturday for salmon, steelhead or trout, and here are some reports on how fishing fared:

The Cascade River and Skagit River from the Highway 530 Bridge at Rockport to Marblemount Bridge opened for hatchery chinook this past Saturday (June 1), and the catches were good one day and bad the next.

"Sounded like it was kind of mixed bag depending on where you were at," said Brett Barkdull, a state Fish and Wildlife biologist. "I heard they got about 10 fish or so right around the hatchery first thing in the morning on Saturday. It also sounded like down in the Skagit it wasn't quite as good and then it kind of flip, flopped the next day (Sunday, June 2), and few more fish were caught down in the Skagit and less in the Cascade.

Barkdull said it was pretty dead on Monday (June 3).

"That is because it looks like we need more water as it is pretty low," Barkdull said. "The good news is we'll get water whether we like it or not. If this weather forecast holds we'll have more water than we want (from snowmelt and runoff from the dam)."

The Marblemount Hatchery on the Cascade River had about 200 chinook through the middle of last week, and the forecast this year is 2,800 hatchery chinook, which is the highest since the fishery began.

Another popular area that opened for chinook and steelhead on Saturday is the Skykomish River.

"The Reiter Ponds section (on Upper Skykomish) opened, and I did hear one story about a person catching their two-fish limit within ½-hour there," said Aaron Bosworth, a state Fish and Wildlife biologist. "I also heard that people fishing (summer-run steelhead) out on the main part of the (Skykomish) did well also. That fishery attracted quite a crowd the way it usually does."

The chinook fishery on the Skykomish generated some effort, but Bosworth didn't hear of any reports.

Bosworth says there were several folks out on the Cedar River, and heard that a couple people had caught some nice-sized trout (18 to 20 inches) in this catch-and-release fishery.

"There were also several boats out on the Green River after summer steelhead," Bosworth said. "Success was moderate there, and I heard that three boats fishing between Flaming Geyser and Soos Creek caught one fish per boat on Saturday."

Mammoth 225-lb. Halibut Caught Near Sequim

By the Seattle Times

The halibut fishery in the eastern Strait of Juan de Fuca ended Friday on a high note for three Everett anglers.

Woody Woods, 71, and his two fishing partners, Ted Measor and Pat Vaughn, were fishing the deep waters off Dungeness Spit just west of Sequim.

The three anglers had already hooked two nice halibut.

At about 11 a.m., Woods, who was fishing in 430 feet near the yellow buoy off the Spit, hooked into something giant.

"I thought it was a rock (on the bottom) but a rock doesn't take out line," said Woods, who used salmon and tuna bellies for bait with a 32-ounce lead weight.

"I got the fish up to about 100 feet and then it took off, and I tugged and cranked, and tugged and cranked," Woods said.

After a 30- to 45-minute battle, Woods managed to get the monster halibut up to the boat.

It was 75 inches long and had a 12-inch thick belly. Its estimated weight was 225 pounds.

"It was a team effort, and I was glad to see the fish and get it inside the boat," Woods said. "It was a great day."

Woods' fish bested the other huge halibut caught May 3 in the eastern Strait by Ryley Fee of Woodinville — that one weighed 180 pounds.

The eastern Strait, La Push, Neah Bay, San Juan Islands, eastside of Whidbey Island, northern Puget Sound and central Puget Sound are now closed for halibut. The only ocean area still open for halibut is the southern coast off Ilwaco, where fishing is allowed Fridays to Sundays only.

The western Strait of Juan de Fuca off Sekiu is open June 8 only.

Cowlitz River reported some anglers are catching some spring Chinook near the barrier dam.

Last week Tacoma Power recovered 187 spring Chinook adults, 27 jacks, 14 winter-run steelhead and 40 summer-run steelhead during four days of operations at the Cowlitz Salmon Hatchery separator.

During the past week Tacoma Power employees released 42 spring Chinook adults and 20 jacks into the Cispus River above the mouth of Yellow Jacket Creek, and they released two spring Chinook adults and two jacks into Lake Scanewa above Cowlitz Falls Dam.

River flows at Mayfield Dam are approximately 6,540 cubic feet per second on Monday, June 3.

Kalama and Lewis rivers reported light effort for hatchery steelhead during limited sampling last week.

Chicago White Sox players share congratulations as they walk off the field in view of the scoreboard showing their 16-inning baseball game against the Seattle Mariners on Wednesday in Seattle.

Chicago Snaps Skid, Beat Seattle 7-5 in 16

SEATTLE (AP) — Alejandro De Aza and Alex Rios each had an RBI single in the 16th inning, and the Chicago White Sox snapped an eight-game losing streak with a 7-5 victory over the Seattle Mariners on Wednesday.

CHICAGO 7
SEATTLE 5

De Aza's tiebreaking hit came after the teams combined to make baseball history when Chicago scored five times in the top of the 14th, only to have Seattle complete an improbable rally on Kyle Seager's tying grand slam off Addison Reed (2-0) with two out.

According to the Mariners, with information from Elias Sports Bureau, Seager was the first player to hit a tying grand slam in extra innings and no team had ever scored five or more runs in the 14th inning or later to tie a game. It also was the first game in major league history when each team scored five or more runs in the game when it was scoreless through the ninth.

After 13 innings of offensive futility, the two sides combined for 10 runs and 10 hits in the 14th inning alone.

But all that became a footnote when the White Sox scored twice in the 16th against Hector Noesi (0-1), who gave up three runs and seven hits in three innings. De Aza drove in Gordon Beckham and eventually came around on an infield hit by Rios, who also singled home the first run of the game.

The two-run cushion proved to be enough for Reed this time. He struck out Brendan Ryan on three pitches, and then got Endy Chavez and Jason Bay swinging to end it 5 hours and 42 minutes after the first pitch.

Reed was charged with five runs and five hits over three innings, but got the victory. The White Sox avoided the first winless road trip of seven or more games in franchise history.

Seattle had a chance at its first sweep the season, but missed out on a bunch of opportunities to grab the lead. The Mariners left a runner at third in the first, second, fifth, sixth and 10th innings, and Seager was thrown out at home to end the fourth while trying to score on Nick Franklin's fly ball.

The missed chances wasted another impressive outing from by Hisashi Iwakuma, who pitched eight innings and retired his final 16 batters.

Most of the action took place in the 14th.

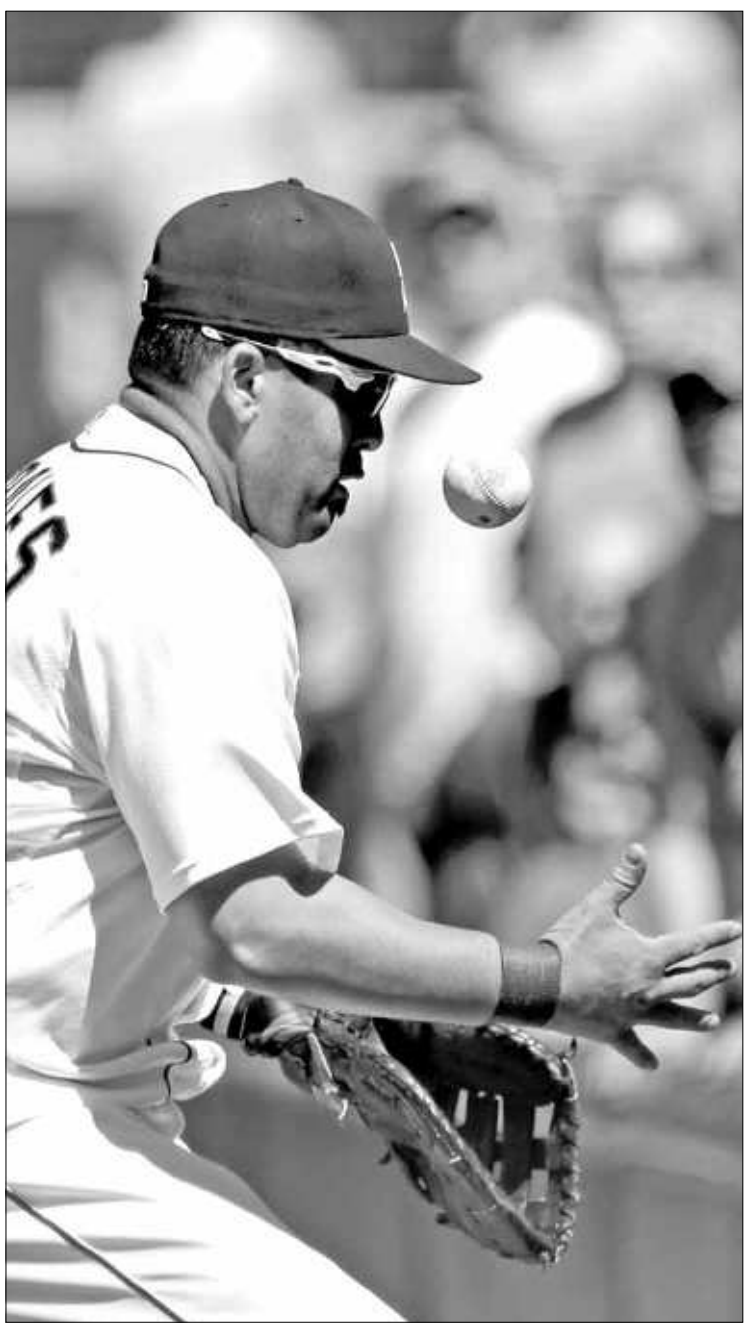
De Aza had a leadoff walk and advanced to third on a perfectly executed hit-and-run single through the right side of the infield by Alexei Ramirez. Rios then singled in De Aza, and Chicago added another run on Casper Wells' infield single. Jeff Keppinger had a two-run single and Hector Gimenez doubled home a run as the White Sox sent 10 batters to the plate.

And that seemed to be more than enough, especially with Reed taking over.

But the closer was shaky from the outset, giving up four straight hits after Franklin popped out. The last of the four hits came from Chavez and scored Michael Saunders to make it 5-1. Reed struck out Bay on a slider and had a 1-2 count on Seager when he left a fastball over the plate and third baseman drove it over the wall in right-center for his first career grand slam.

The Mariners' dugout erupted and Seager wore a grin on his face as he rounded the bases. It was the first home run allowed this year by Reed.

Notes: Chicago announced RHP Jake Peavy has a nondisplaced rib fracture on the left side of his chest and will be sidelined for approximately four to six weeks. The fracture was revealed in an MRI exam on Wednesday morning in Seattle. ... Seattle plans on having Michael Morse (quad) back in the lineup on Thursday, although manager Eric Wedge has not decided if Morse will play first base or DH. ... Wednesday was the 13th game in Mariners history to be scoreless through nine innings.



Seattle Mariners first baseman Kendrys Morales tries to get a grip on a foul ball from Chicago White Sox's Jeff Keppinger in the eighth inning.

MLB Interviewing Players as Part of Drug Probe

NEW YORK (AP) — One by one, for three weeks already, players accompanied by their lawyers have been summoned to interviews as part of baseball's latest investigation into performance-enhancing drugs — and the process is a long way from finished.

Some pretty big names, led by Alex Rodriguez, could be on the hot seat.

A-Rod, Ryan Braun, Nelson Cruz, Melky Cabrera and Bartolo Colon are among the 20 or so players who may be disciplined for their links to the now-closed Miami anti-aging clinic, Biogenesis of America.

The players' union says it has been assured no decisions regarding discipline will be made until the interviews are completed.

"It would be unfortunate if anyone prejudged those investigations," union head Michael Weiner said in a statement Wednesday.

And it appears the process has a while to run.

Interviews with players started three weeks ago and are scheduled until the end of June, according to people with knowledge of the process who spoke on condition of anonymity because statements on those details weren't authorized. Dan Halem, Steven Gonzalez and Patrick Houlihan, lawyers in baseball's labor relations department, conducted several interviews, and some players haven't been scheduled.

"Every player has been or will be represented by an attorney from the players' association," Weiner said. "The players' association has every interest in both defending the rights of players and in defending the integrity of our joint (drug) program. We trust that the commissioner's office shares these interests."

MLB has been seeking the cooperation of Biogenesis founder Anthony Bosch since Miami New Times reported in January that it obtained what the paper said were records detailing drug purchases by Rodriguez, Cabrera, Cruz and Colon. Yahoo Sports reported that Braun, the 2011 NL MVP, was mentioned in the records.

MLB sued Biogenesis and its operators in a Florida court in March, an attempt to pressure Bosch. A person familiar with the case told The Associated Press on Tuesday night that Bosch agreed to talk to MLB, a deal first reported by ESPN. MLB wants to speak with Bosch in the next few days,

"Due to ongoing litigation, it would be inappropriate to comment on any aspect of this matter at this time," Bosch's lawyer, Susy Ribero-Ayala, said in a statement.

Among the players linked to the clinic, Cabrera, Colon and San Diego catcher Yasmani Grandal already have served 50-game suspensions following positive tests for testosterone announced by MLB last year.

"It looks like it could be getting to the bottom of this and finding some information that hopefully would help Major League Baseball as far as cleaning this game up," said San Francisco manager Bruce Bochy, who managed Cabrera last year. "I always thought they should be a little stricter to keep these players from trying to beat the system and cheat. I'm all for stiffer penalties."

Once MLB interviews Bosch and the players, it will have to determine what penalties to impose.

"WADA commends the decision of Major League Baseball to seek suspension of an estimated 20 players," World Anti-Doping Agency Director General David Howman said in a statement.

"More and more, information and evidence gathered in the investigative process is proving an effective means of uncovering doping in sport. MLB has approached this issue in a professional way, and the evidence gathered will undoubtedly be pivotal," Howman said.

Any suspensions for first offenders would be put on hold if the union files a grievance, a process that would put the matter in front of an arbitrator and delay possible sanctions for weeks or months. Second offenders would serve suspensions during the grievance process.

Baseball's drug agreement calls for a 50-game suspension for a first violation, 100 for a second and a lifetime ban for a third for positive tests for banned PEDS or their use or possession. The agreement also allows discipline for "just cause" for a violation not specified.

Any player disciplined could file an individual grievance, and it isn't likely that cases would be combined into one proceeding. If Bosch testifies at a hearing, he would be subject to cross-examination, and players' lawyers likely would try to attack his credibility.

The Heat defeated the Pacers 99-76 to advance to the NBA finals against the San Antonio Spurs. At right: San Antonio Spurs' Tim Duncan listens to a question during a news conference at NBA basketball practice Wednesday in Miami. The Spurs play the Miami Heat in Game 1 of the NBA Finals tonight.

Spurs a Contrasting Finals Challenge for Heat

By Ira Winderman

Sun Sentinel

MIAMI — The conference finals left each of these teams tenderized. For the San Antonio Spurs, it meant going up against Marc Gasol, Zach Randolph and the beef of the Memphis Grizzlies. For the Miami Heat, it was seven grueling games against Roy Hibbert, David West and the raw power of the Indiana Pacers.

Perhaps that's why players from both teams marinated in the moment at NBA Finals media day, recognizing that this upcoming best-of-seven series likely will be less impactful on their connective tissue.

"It will be a little more open," Spurs center Tim Duncan said Wednesday at AmericanAirlines Arena, where the Finals open Thursday at 9 p.m. "I think it will still be very physical. This time of the season, the Finals will bring it out in everybody. I don't know if there will be much to relax about. I think it will definitely be a different type (of series), and it will be more up-tempo, more wide open."

No, no one is calling these teams soft. The Spurs still have the size of Duncan and Tiago Splitter, can roll in with the bulk of DeJuan Blair and Boris Diaw. And no one will confuse the Heat's Udonis Haslem and Chris Andersen as timid presences.

But both of these teams prefer to play at speed, in the open court, more with finesse than force. As ugly as Heat-Pacers grew, this could be a return to the beautiful game, more opportunity for the grace of LeBron James, Dwyane Wade, Tony Parker, Manu Ginobili, the nimble footwork of Chris Bosh and Duncan, 3-pointers taken under less duress by Ray Allen, Shane Battier, Danny Green and Gary Neal.

"We'll have a different challenge in doing it against the Spurs than we did against the Pacers," Heat coach Erik Spoelstra said. "That is clear. Their game is different. Offensively, they'll attack us in much different ways. And then offensively, we'll have to attack them in different ways than we did in the last series."

Asked if the matchup against the Spurs could be more conducive to the Heat's preferred style, James said, "That's what we hope."

But he cautioned that different doesn't necessarily translate into easier.

"We don't know until the series gets started," he said. "Every team we play causes different problems, from Milwaukee to Chicago to Indiana and now San Antonio. So we don't actually know until the series begin."

By the end of the Pacers series, there was no place for the intuitive game of Heat swingman Shane Battier, who went from eight minutes in Game 5 against the Pacers to four in Game 6 to none in Game 7.

For his part, in his own unique way, Battier said he was both humbled and hungered by Monday's benching, while also grateful for the possibility of redemption with that Game 7 win.

"Obviously, as a competitor it was tough, I'm not going to lie," he told reporters on the main court at AmericanAirlines Arena. "It was maybe the toughest thing I've gone through as a competitor. I was super happy for my team and my teammates.

"In retrospect, it's OK today. Every now and then you have to eat a turd sandwich. When you eat a turd sandwich, that ribeye tastes really good next time. That's life, and that's the way I look at it."

The Pacers were wide-eyed, seemingly giddy just to have taken the next step to the conference finals. For the Spurs, there is recognition of how difficult it can be to take back to this level, having waited six years since their previous Finals visit.

"Tony and Manu and myself, we've been on that court for a long time," Duncan said of the Spurs' veteran core. "We push each other. And we're excited to be back on this stage."

Of course, they did not have to push as much in the conference finals, moving past Memphis' muscle in four games to provide a nine-day break. That allowed Parker to study the Heat.

"It was a great series. It was really fun to watch," he said. "I'm a big student of the game. And I love watching games. I think you can learn a lot. Miami and Indiana was a hell of a series. "

The Heat learned, as well. To a degree, they went to school on themselves, ultimately finding a way to free up Wade and Bosh enough to help push James into a 2007 NBA Finals rematch against the Spurs.

"My meal tasted a little better after the game, you know? I'll tell you that. It was a good feeling to obviously be in that moment," Wade said of pushing through in Monday's Game 7. "Like I told Chris the night before, I spent a lot of time with Chris in his house, we're neighbors, and I told him, I said, "Chris, it didn't matter if you scored 30 points a game up until this point. If you get in Game 7 and score two points and we lose, you'll feel just as bad or worse than you feel now. So it's all about Game 7, man. It's all about this moment. Let's do whatever we can, do what we've got to do until things turn around for us.'

"I thought his mind-set of being aggressive was a change to hopefully bring into this series."

Now they're here, the opponent more seasoned, but the challenge also perhaps more to the Heat's liking.

MATCHUPS FOR NBA FINALS: HERE'S PICKING THE MIAMI HEAT

By Charles F. Gardner

Milwaukee Journal Sentinel

Matchups for NBA Finals:

SMALL FORWARD

Miami's LeBron James vs. San Antonio's Kawhi Leonard

James has faced some talented defenders in the playoffs, starting with Milwaukee's Luc Richard Mbah a Moute. Then James faced Chicago's Jimmy Butler and Indiana's Paul George, both skilled defensive players. Now it will be Leonard's turn to try to slow down the game's best player and league MVP. The Spurs handled James well in the 2007 Finals when he was with Cleveland, but that was before he became Superman.

Advantage: Heat.

POWER FORWARD

Miami's Udonis Haslem vs. San Antonio's Tiago Splitter

Both are complementary players, but Haslem always has formed a big part of the Heat's identity, willing to do whatever it takes to win. Haslem had two big scoring games (17 and 16 points, respectively) in the conference finals against Indiana. Splitter relieves a lot of the pressure on Tim Duncan and has converted 58 percent of his shots in the postseason.

Advantage: Heat.

CENTER

Miami's Chris Bosh vs. San Antonio's Tim Duncan

Bosh struggled against Indiana's Roy Hibbert in the previous series and faces a future Hall of Famer in Duncan, who has been rejuvenated this season and in the playoffs. Bosh will try to venture outside to bring Duncan away from his comfort zone. Duncan is averaging 17.8 points and 9.2 rebounds in 14 games during the Spurs' current playoff run.

Advantage: Spurs.

SHOOTING GUARD

Miami's Dwyane Wade vs. San Antonio's Danny Green

Wade has struggled with a sore right knee throughout the playoffs and even missed Game 4 against the Bucks due to pain. When he struggled in Game 6 at Indiana, he said he needed to be incorporated better in the Heat offense. But Wade scored 21 points in Game 7 and suddenly seemed energized again. Green is shooting 43 percent from three-point range in the playoffs and is a good defender.

Advantage: Heat.

POINT GUARD

Miami's Mario Chalmers vs. San Antonio's Tony Parker

Parker made a good Memphis defense look bad in the Western Conference finals. Parker's ability to get into the paint and create havoc will test the Heat, and it may need James to defend him at key times. Chalmers will be no match.

Advantage: Spurs.

BENCH

Miami's Ray Allen, Chris Andersen, Norris Cole, Shane Battier, Mike Miller and Joel Anthony vs. San Antonio's Manu Ginobili, Gary Neal, Matt Bonner, Boris Diaw, Cory Joseph and DeJuan Blair.

Allen and Battier struggled against the Pacers, but Allen hit three critical three-pointers in the first half of Game 7. Andersen has hardly missed in the playoffs while providing the rebounding the Heat lacks, although his suspension for Game 6 was pure stupidity. Cole could prove critical in defending Parker if Chalmers struggles. Ginobili is more a starter than a bench player and could turn a game or two in the series. In other words, he could make a massive difference.

Advantage: Heat.

COACHES

Miami's Erik Spoelstra vs. San Antonio's Gregg Popovich

Spoelstra is underrated because he coaches a trio of stars and makes sure they work together while massaging wounded egos when necessary. It's not an easy job. Popovich will scream at his players, but he knows how to get the best out of them. And they trust him implicitly. He has won four NBA titles and that's no fluke.

Advantage: Spurs.

INTANGIBLES

The Heat struggled during its conference finals matchup against the Pacers, but that might serve it well heading into the Finals. Bosh and Wade will get a clean slate in this series. The Spurs have been resting after sweeping Memphis, but San Antonio's veterans won't mind the idle time. It probably helped them and they will know how to handle it.

Advantage: Spurs.

PREDICTION

It's hard to pick against any team with James in the lineup. He didn't get a lot of help for much of the Indiana series and as he pointed out, the matchups were bad for the Heat with the physical Hibbert and David West inside. Now it's Duncan and Splitter the Heat must face, not to mention a premier point guard in Parker. A lot will depend on Wade's performance. Can he play consistently the way he did in Game 7 against Indiana? If he does, the Heat will be hard to beat and will repeat.

Miami wins series, 4-3.

MLB Draft

Zack Collins' Bat Coveted in Major League Baseball Draft

By Dieter Kurtenbach

Sun Sentinel (MCT)

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — If all goes to plan, catcher Zack Collins, from American Heritage in Plantation, Fla., will be batting third in the major leagues.

How long it takes for him to reach that spot is anyone's guess, but on Thursday, with the start of the 2013 MLB First-Year Player Draft, Collins will no longer have to guess where it'll happen.

Collins is expected to be the first South Florida prospect taken in the draft, which has a new format this year. The first and second rounds, where Collins is expected to be picked, will be held Thursday (MLB Network, 7 p.m. EDT), with the remaining 38 rounds to be completed on Friday and Saturday.

While Collins is eager to join any team, where he's drafted will decide if he starts playing professionally this summer.

Collins has signed a letter-of-intent with Miami, and he said if he's not selected in the first three rounds of the draft, he'll play in Coral Gables for the next three years.

Collins can only sit and wait to find out what his future holds, but one thing is certain _ the forecast is bright.

It was Collins' left-handed hitting that first caught pro scouts' attention. There's nothing complicated about his swing. His body is calm, though the impact he puts on the ball is quite violent.

Collins has heard plenty of comparisons from those scouts. Maybe he's the next Mark Teixeira or Matt Wieters. Then again, that swing, with the power it dishes out and the little hitch that starts it off, looks awfully similar to Josh Hamilton's.

What can't be debated are the results of that swing. Collins was the MVP of the 2011 IBAF World Youth (16-and-under) Championships, leading Team USA to a gold medal, and he hit .388, with 31 RBI and five homers his senior year at Heritage, earning Sun Sentinel All-County First-Team honors for a second straight year.

Collins' bat can be a valuable asset to pro teams, but the biggest question surrounding the 18-year-old is where he'll play in the field. There are only a handful of catchers in the big leagues that resemble Collins, who is 6 feet 3 and 220 pounds, and his size made some pro teams project him as a first baseman.

But Collins didn't accept that. He wants to play catcher full-time, so he worked with former UM and current San Diego Padres catcher Yasmani Grandal to improve his defense behind the plate.

According to Collins, his defense is "a million times better now," and he's convinced a number of scouts that he's not a defensive liability.

"I've only been playing catcher for four years," Collins said. "Most guys have been back there their entire life. If I can improve that much over the last year, I think that says a lot about what I can do."

Collins isn't the only South Florida player expected to be drafted the next three days. Nova Southeastern infielder Carlos Asuaje could be a second-day pick, along with Elev8 Sports Institute-Delray players Stephen Alemais and Ron Healy.

Other South Florida players should expect to hear their names called as well. Coral Springs shortstop Luis Guillorme, West Boca catcher Michael Barash, Palm Beach Central third baseman Ian Hagenmiller and two of Collins' Heritage teammates, C.J. Chatham and Shaun Anderson, should all be drafted.

Seattle Holds 12th Pick in Draft

By Tim Booth

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — For a change, Tom McNamara and the Seattle Mariners don't have a clear idea of how the first round of baseball's amateur draft will play out.

The past two seasons, the Mariners have picked Nos. 2 and 3 overall in the draft and McNamara's job was simpler. The Mariners simply waited to see who was picked above them and then had their choice of one of the top prospects in the entire draft pool.

This year is a little different.

"The unsung guys that work with me, they've gotten after it this year big time. We've seen a lot more players this year," said McNamara, Seattle's director of amateur scouting.

The Mariners hold the 12th pick in Thursday's draft, a spot that has led to plenty of frequent flyer miles for McNamara and his staff as they tried to get a handle on who might be available when Seattle picks in the middle of the first round.

After two straight drafts of having a pretty clear idea who they were targeting and getting a chance to see those players on multiple occasions, McNamara and his scouts have been forced to fan out around the country this year even more trying to zero in on their first-round selection.

"When you're picking two or three, you get to sit on a guy and watch him four or five times or six or seven times," McNamara said. "When you're picking 12 you don't know who is coming your way, you're kind of in no-man's land that way."

Three times in the last four years, the Mariners have selected in the top three. They held the No. 2 overall pick in 2009 when they selected Dustin Ackley, had No. 2 again in 2011 when they took left-handed pitcher Danny Hultzen and selected catcher Mike Zunino No. 3 overall a year ago.

All three of those players are currently at Triple-A, with Ackley having been sent down from the major league club after struggling at the plate. Because none of the three have managed to establish themselves at the major league level yet, some of the Mariners scouting has been called into question.

McNamara said he has not changed his scouting tactics, but the Mariners are placing even more emphasis on how much an amateur player relishes being in a competitive situation.

"There is something I'm starting to learn, too, the players that love if there is a lot of people scouting them, those guys have something extra. Like, 'Ah, this is great, the more the merrier. This is what I want to do,'" McNamara said.

McNamara said there is a strong crop of high school players in this year's draft, but much of the research needed on the prep prospects was done last summer when most of the top players were playing against each other in summer leagues. McNamara said there was one prep player he flew across the country to see in person, only to watch him get intentionally walked four times.

"There is a group of high school guys and a group of college guys and if you didn't do your homework in the summer and watch these guys against competitive teams and players you might be in trouble this year," McNamara said. "We keep saying in that room about the high school guys, 'Hey, let's not forget why we spent all that time on the road in the summer and the fall watching these guys play against the best players.' That's where you learn a lot."

NFL

Bianchi: Deacon Jones, the Greatest Athlete in Central Florida History

By Mike Bianchi

Orlando Sentinel (MCT)

Scott Heckel / The Associated Press

In this Aug. 9, 2007, photo, David "Deacon" Jones waves to the crowd after being introduced at the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio.

ORLANDO, Fla. — Hopefully, as my buddy Chris tweeted Tuesday, St. Peter is not a quarterback.

If so, the pearly gates were destroyed — crunched and shattered into tiny pieces — Monday night when David "Deacon" Jones crashed through them and arrived in football heaven.

And St. Peter _ God bless him — is probably still running for his afterlife.

A moment of silence, please:

Deacon Jones, the greatest athlete in Orlando sports history, has gone to That Big Collapsing Pocket in the Sky.

"There's no question Deacon is the greatest athlete we've ever had," said Bill Buchalter, the Orlando Sentinel's legendary former high school editor and greater Orlando's resident sports historian. "We've had some good NFL, NBA and Major League Baseball players, but Deacon was an icon among icons. He stood the test of time. He was the LeBron of the football field."

He was bigger, faster, stronger than everyone else.

And meaner.

Meaner than a drunken rattlesnake.

For all you youngsters out there, ask your father or grandfather about Deacon Jones and what he used to do to quarterbacks. He used to hate them like you and I hate the IRS. He used to hate them like kids hate creamed spinach. Actually, he hated them so much, he tried to turn them into creamed spinach.

He once clocked Atlanta quarterback Bob Berry so violently with a helmet-to-helmet hit that Berry's helmet popped off and skidded across the scorched earth.

Said Jones after the game: "If the helmet doesn't go, his head does."

Can you imagine the outcry, fines and suspensions Jones would endure today if he played with the same rage and ferocity as he did back in the 1960s? There were those who believe he hated quarterbacks so much because they symbolized the racial injustice and white supremacy he endured as a black kid growing up in the segregated South. He attended Eatonville, Fla.'s Hungerford High School in the days before integration when black men literally had to take a back seat to white men.

His scholarship was revoked at South Carolina State after he took part in a civil rights march. He personally experienced angry white men in hoods and that transformed him into an angry black man in a helmet.

Back in Deacon's heyday in the 1960s, the quarterback position in the NFL was lily-white and there would be no black starter at the position for more than a decade after he entered the league. Jones took his wrath out on the fair-skinned quarterbacks of the league.

"Can you imagine, all of a sudden having the opportunity to legally beat the crap out of somebody who has mistreated you all these years?" his wife, Elizabeth, once told the Orlando Sentinel.

Just ask the great white quarterbacks of his day and they will tell you.

"Running an offense against Deacon Jones was like playing against the shark in 'Jaws,'" Johnny Unitas once said.

"I owe everything to Deacon Jones," Fran Tarkenton said after his Hall-of-Fame career was over. "If it wouldn't have been for him and his lightning sack rush, I wouldn't be known as the greatest scrambling quarterback in history."

They called Deacon Jones the "Secretary of Defense," but he was so much more than just a secretary. In fact, he was the commander and chief of the L.A. Rams' famed "Fearsome Foursome" and the founding father of the quarterback sack. He not only invented the term "sacking the quarterback"; he invented the relentless mindset behind the term. Rushing the quarterback for Jones was sort of like hunting rabbits. When you're done, you just put your bloody victims in a game bag and go home.

"You took the quarterback and you put him in a sack; that's how Deacon described it," Orlando resident and NFL Hall-of-Famer Jack Youngblood explained Tuesday.

Youngblood became an understudy of Jones after he was drafted by the Rams out of the University of Florida in 1971. Bruce Smith holds the NFL record for career sacks with 200, but Youngblood says his mentor "would have had 250" if the statistic had been kept back in Jones' playing days.

That may be a slight exaggeration, but not much of one. Sacks weren't kept as an official NFL statistic until 1982, but if they had been recorded during Deacon's day, there's little question he would be among the NFL's all-time leaders.

Jones not only made the quarterback pay; he made the people protecting the quarterback pay. He became famous for his devastating head-slap on offensive linemen — a maneuver that was later banned by the NFL because Jones utilized it so effectively to get to the quarterback.

Bearcat Track Camp Coming June 10-11

By The Chronicle

The W.F. West High School track and field program will host the seventh-annual Bearcat Track and Field Camp, for boys and girls age 5 to 14, running June 10-12.

For kids ages 5 to 8, the camp will run Monday and Tuesday, June 10 and 11, from 4 to 6:30 p.m. at W.F. West High School in Chehalis. The camp will conclude with a track meet on Tuesday from 5:30 to 6:30.

The camp for kids age 9 to 14 will also run from 4 to 6:30 p.m. on Monday and Tuesday, but with a larger track meet on Wednesday, June 12, starting at 4 p.m. The camp will focus on specific events for the Hershey Track & Field Meet (sprints, distance running, softball throw, standing long jump), which will be held Wednesday. The top two placers in Wednesday's meet qualify for the Washington State Hershey Track Meet at Mt. Tahoma High School on June 29.

Wednesday's Hershey qualifier is open to all Lewis County kids between the ages of 9 and 14. Registration begins at 3 p.m., and athletes can enter up to three events, though no more than two from either the track or field divisions.

The camp registration fee is $25 (which includes a t-shirt), and registration for the Hershey meet is free. Visit www.ci.chehalis.wa.us and click the Parks and Recreation tab for a registration form.

Lizards 10-Run Castle Rock

By The Chronicle

The Sobe-Toyota Lizards scored 10 run in the final three innings to put away Castle Rock Competitive Athletics, 13-3, in seven innings of Senior Legion baseball action Tuesday night at Ed Wheeler Field.

Dugan Shirer led the way offensively for the winners, recording three hits with a double and an RBI. Dominic Angwood added a double.

Tanner Gueller started on the mound for Sobe-Toyota, and was relieved by Dylan Fosnacht in the fourth frame. The Centralia squad took advantage of six Castle Rock errors, while playing a clean game in the field itself.

"We got everybody out there playing, and we were able to move guys around and see what they could do in some different spots," Sobe-Toyota coach Jake LeDuc said. "Overall, it was just a good night for us. We did what we should have done against a team that's not as good as us, but we didn't play to their level. We stepped up and played well all night."

Sobe-Toyota (4-2) will host the Capital City Senators on Tuesday at 6 p.m.

Titus-Will Pounds North Thurston

The Titus-Will offense continued to mimic the weather, collecting 10 hits in a 11-1 victory over North Thurston Tuesday night in Junior Legion baseball action at Ed Wheeler Field in Centralia. The Centralia-Rochester team got another multi-hit performance from Gavin Kerner, who went 2 for 2, and two singles from Dylan Fosnacht.

"It was another good offensive explosion by these kids," Titus-Will coach Jerry Striegel said. "They put a lot of pressure on the other team and let our pitchers go out and throw. Our two guys on the mound did a good job."

Dylan Urvina and Brandon Rogers combined to one-hit North Thurston in the five-inning game. Jacob Monohan added a triple while Nolan Wasson and Christian Peter both notched doubles in the balanced Titus-Will lineup.

Titus-Will (4-0) hosts Aberdeen Friday at 6 p.m. at Ed Wheeler Field in Centralia.

Trappers Edge Chehalis

TENINO — The Tenino Trappers opened their Junior Legion baseball slate with a 4-2 win over Chehalis Sobe-Toyota here on Tuesday.

The Trappers managed 4 runs on just two hits, including an RBI single by Kellen Miller and a single by Thomas Pier. Taylor Sheldon scored both runs for the hosts.

Kolton McKitrick pitched into the seventh inning, striking out six with just one walk, and Pier stuck out two for the final two outs of the game.

Tenino will host Lower Columbia at 6 p.m. tonight.

Shaw, Fortier No Longer With UW Basketball Staff

SEATTLE (MCT) — Longtime assistants Jim Shaw and Paul Fortier have left the Washington basketball staff.

The school announced the move Wednesday. Fortier is expected to latch on with another school. Shaw will be looking for work.

Washington brought back former assistant Raphael Chillious and hired T.J. Otzelberger from Iowa State during the offseason. Otzelberger and Chillious each get two-year deals at Washington through March 31, 2015.

Last season was Shaw's ninth with the team. He was responsible for scheduling and scouting. Fortier, who played at Washington, was on staff for eight seasons. Last year, he was moved to Director of Player Personnel and Development, essentially mitigating his coaching duties.

The moves make Washington's staff significantly younger.

Chillious and Otzelberger are both in their 30s. Chillious also has significant ties to Nike, which tends to help in recruiting.

Otzelberger will become Washington's recruiting coordinator. Chillious will also be involved in recruiting and work with the guards, essentially the same role he had in his first go-around at Washington from 2009-11.

Brad Jackson will continue to lead the game scouting and work with the big men.

The Huskies also hired a new strength and conditioning coach, Daniel Shapiro. He was the Sacramento Kings' strength and conditioning coach for eight years prior to being hired by Washington on a three-year deal. Matt Ludwig had been the men's basketball strength and conditioning coach since 2005.

Seattle's Martins Has Red Card Rescinded

NEW YORK (AP) — An independent review panel has rescinded a red card given to Seattle Sounders FC forward Obafemi Martins, allowing him to play in this weekend's Cascadia Cup matchup against rival Vancouver.

Major League Soccer announced the decision on Wednesday. Martins was originally given a red card in the 71st minute of last Saturday's 2-0 win over Chivas USA by referee Ricardo Salazar. Martins was ejected for his foul on Chivas midfielder Gabriel Farfan, but the Sounders appealed and the fine and one-game suspension were rescinded.

Martins, who scored earlier in the win over Chivas, has four goals in seven games this season for Seattle.

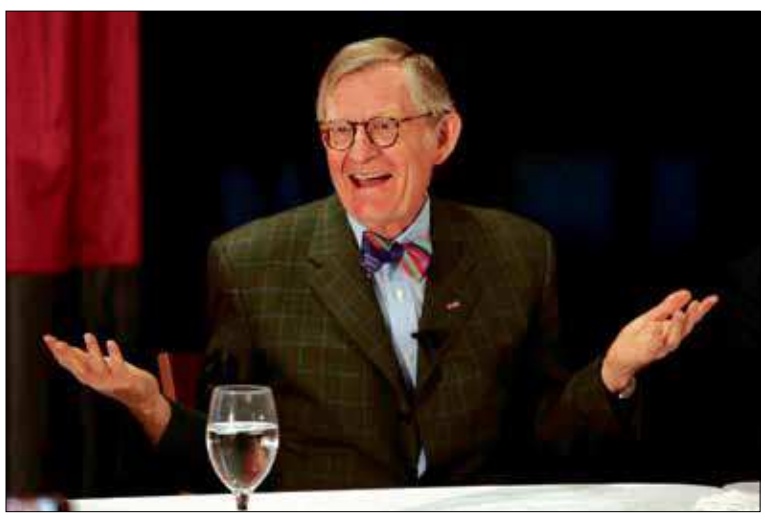
Retiring Ohio State President Cites Age, Family



Adam Cairns / The Associated Press

Retiring Ohio State President Gordon Gee discusses his decision to leave in July at a news conference on Wednesday at the Ohio State student union in Columbus, Ohio.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State University President Gordon Gee attempted to make his retirement announcement personal on Wednesday, citing everything from his age to his 7-month-old twin granddaughters to a California girlfriend as reasons for his abrupt departure next month.

He continued to downplay the furor over remarks first reported by The Associated Press jabbing Roman Catholics, Notre Dame and the Southeastern Conference, comments taken seriously enough by university trustees that they threatened in March to fire him for further verbal transgressions.

If anything, the remarks helped Gee reflect on what he wanted to do next, he said at a morning news conference.

"It played that role but not a defining role in terms of my own conversation with myself," Gee said.

Gee left that news conference for a closed-door meeting with board trustees to discuss a long-term university plan. He said that upcoming project is another reason he wants to step down now rather than later. He couldn't say when asked if he would have made a different decision had the remarks, recorded in December, not been made public last week.

Gee explained away the one-month notice he gave Tuesday by citing a desire not to stay on any longer than he has to.

"I'm not a victory lap guy," Gee said Wednesday. "The last thing I want to do is be queen for a day. I want to move on. I want the university to move on."

Trustee chairman Robert Schottenstein denied Gee had been forced out.

In Dec. 5 comments to the university Athletic Council, Gee jokingly referred to "those damn Catholics" at Notre Dame and poked fun at the academic quality of other schools. He apologized when the comments were disclosed, saying they were "a poor attempt at humor and entirely inappropriate."

Ohio State at the time called the comments unacceptable and said it had placed Gee on a remediation plan to change his behavior.

In 2010, he apologized for criticizing other big-time football programs for having a schedule equivalent to playing "the Little Sisters of the Poor."

Gee, 69, wearing one of his trademark bowties, said he was finding it more and more difficult to do his job the way he wants, which is like a man half his age.

"I want to run it in the way that I can run full tilt," said Gee, how says he's in good health. "And so I don't ever want to ever lose a step."

Napavine's Wheeler Signs With Northwestern

By The Chronicle

Napavine product Skyler Wheeler has signed a letter of intent to continue his baseball career at Northwestern College in Orange City, Iowa.

Wheeler, a 2011 Napavine graduate, played the last two seasons at Grays Harbor Community College.

"Skyler is a very good sign for us," said Northwestern head coach Brian Wede. "He has had a great two-year career at Grays Harbor and we look forward to watching him compete here. I believe he will be a good contributor for a team looking to win back-to-back GPAC Championships."

Wheeler, a 6-foot infielder, hit a school-record .328 during his two-year career at Grays Harbor, including batting .376 during his freshman season to earn an All-NWAACC West Region first-team nod. He also made the honor roll at Grays Harbor with a GPA above 3.60, and plans to major in political science at Northwestern.

The Red Raiders compete in the NAIA's Great Plains Athletic Conference, winning the GPAC tournament on May 4 with a 9-8 win over Midland. They finished the 2013 season with a 31-19 record, losing to games in the opening round of the NAIA Championships in Oklahoma City to Jamestown and the University of Science & Arts Oklahoma.

Brady to Compete at World's Largest Junior High Rodeo

Hunter Brady, an eighth-grade student at Chehalis Middle School, has earned a spot on Washington's National Junior High Rodeo Team and will travel to Gallup, N.M., later this month to compete in tie-down roping and team roping at the ninth-annual National Junior High Finals Rodeo.

The NJHFR features over 1,000 contestants from 41 states, five Canadian provinces and Australia. Contestants will compete for more than $75,000 in prizes and over $100,000 in college scholarships.

The NJHFR will run from Sunday, June 23, to Saturday, June 29, with Saturday's championship performance set to be televised nationally on RFD-TV. Check www.NHSRA.org for daily results.

Pacific Athletic Center Holding Boys Hoop Camp

The Pacific Athletic Center will hold a three-day basketball camp for boys entering grades 3 through 8 later this month.

The camp will run June 18, 19 and 20 at the PAC, located on Jackson Highway in Chehalis, with a morning session (9 a.m. to noon) for boys entering grades 3, 4 and 5, and an afternoon session (1 to 4 p.m.) for boys going into grades 6, 7 and 8.

The cost is $65 for player who pre-register, and $85 for players who sign up on the first day of camp. The camp will cover basketball fundamentals, including advanced ball-handling, footwork, scoring moves and offensive concepts. Prizes and camp t-shirts will also be given out.

Players can register and pay online at pacificathleticcenter.com/reg. Contact Robin Johnson at (360) 280-5971 or robin@pacificathleticcenter.com for more info. Financial aid is also available; contact Angie Brumfield at (360) 219-7846 for more information.

Super Bowl Champion Ravens and Obama Mix it up

By Trevor Graff and Kevin G. Hall

McClatchy Washington Bureau (MCT)

WASHINGTON — In a welcome break from the political crises gripping his administration, President Barack Obama hosted the Super Bowl champion Baltimore Ravens at the White House on Wednesday for a congratulatory ceremony on the South Lawn.

The president sported a purple tie as a nod to the team colors, and was given a team shirt that read "Mr. President," with the No. 44.

The nation's 44th chief executive arrived accompanied by Ravens head coach John Harbaugh and general manager Ozzie Newsome. He made note of his subdued entrance while surrounded by players so large that they dwarfed even the president's beefy security detail.

"Now, I suspect that these guys are wondering, what kind of introduction is that? No smoke machine. No fire cannons. Obama didn't even tear up chunks of turf and rub them on his suit," the president said to laughter.

An avid sports fan, Obama recognized the grit and perseverance of a team whose road to the Super Bowl came through hard-fought victories on the road against teams that were favored. That underdog mentality is synonymous with Baltimore, a working-class port city that's perennially among the nation's most violent.

"It's a very important moment for Baltimore," Rep. Elijah Cummings, D-Md., said in a South Lawn interview after the ceremony. "We are a gritty city. We get up every day. We fight the tough fights, and a lot of times people might not count us in. But we never count ourselves out. It's just a very powerful moment."

Cummings, who said he lived eight blocks from M&T Bank Stadium, suggested that the Ravens have provided a moral boost for a city in need of one. There'd been 94 homicides in Baltimore so far this year as of Wednesday evening, according to an online count run by The Baltimore Sun, compared with 217 in Charm City, as Baltimore is known, during all of last year. That was a 10 percent increase over 2011.

Obama touted the Ravens' involvement in Baltimore and the surrounding communities, announcing the team's latest initiative to donate new uniforms to 42 high school teams in the Baltimore area.

The president took time to spark laughter among the players and their gathered friends and families. Ray Lewis, the recently retired middle linebacker and the face of the Ravens, was a first target. Obama referenced the "squirrel dance" made famous by Lewis as he entered the playing field, and a teammate asked the president to try the dance himself.

"Ray retired on top, coming back from a triceps injury, which I believe was caused by that dance he does," Obama said. "But no, I'm not doing that dance. It caused him to miss most of the regular season."

The president also ribbed quarterback Joe Flacco, the Super Bowl MVP who attended the University of Delaware, in Vice President Joe Biden's home state.

"Capped off one of the greatest postseasons ever by a quarterback," Obama noted, saying that Flacco, a New Jersey native, had earned elite status. "And I'd say that if you keep on playing like that, you're going to challenge Biden for the most popular person from Delaware."

Attending the White House ceremony was Maryland Senate President Thomas "Mike" Miller, who was instrumental in securing legislation for the new stadium that eventually lured an NFL franchise back to Baltimore from Cleveland in 1996. Baltimore lost the storied Colts franchise in 1984, when the owner moved the team to Indianapolis.

"It was a team effort to get this," Miller said, savoring the first Ravens visit to the White House since their 2001 Super Bowl victory, "It's the second time we've been here with this team, and it is fabulous!"

Obama reminded the Ravens and their coach of an impending contest in Chicago next season.

"Best of luck next season," he said. "You're going to need it in week 11, when you go to my hometown of Chicago to play the Bears."

Unmentionably Funny

The Underpants: German Farce More Than Just Cheeky

By Carrina Stanton

For The Chronicle

Before Mariah Carey's dress mishap.

Before Janet Jackson's wardrobe malfunction.

There was Louise Maske's underpants.

The thought of a woman's underpants falling down around her ankles might evoke snickers. But it is the story of what happens after that clothing slip that director Sean O'Neil thinks will resonate with audiences of "The Underpants," which opens June 14 at the Evergreen Playhouse.

Steve Martin's "The Underpants" is an English adaptation of the 1910 farce "Die Hose" written by German playwright Carl Sternheim. O'Neil, who previously brought "Dr. Horrible's Sing Along Blog" to the Evergreen's stage, was given a copy of the play after performing in Martin's "Picasso at the Lapin Agile" at Centralia College four years ago. O'Neil said he was immediately drawn to the piece.

"It's a play I've wanted to do for a very long time," O'Neil said.

The play begins in the aftermath of scandal that follows young housewife Louise Maske, played by Michaela Hickey, when her underpants fall off in public. Her husband, Theo, a minor government functionary, played by Ryan Hendrickson, fears for his reputation and job prospects following the debacle. But when not one but two men, Frank Versati, played by Tyler Alverson, and Benjamin Cohen, played by Dean Phillips, come calling about the Maske's room to rent, Theo feels elated. Little does he know, their new renters were drawn to their abode by his wife's unmentionable mishap.

"I hope people will find it amazing that the sight of a pair of underpants could cause so much havoc," O'Neil said. "It's just become so much a part of our thought we might not care anymore but at the time this play was written, it was a big deal."

The animated, artistic and double entendre-filled Versati, rents the room under the guise of simply being interested in the room, when what he really wants is Louise. Louise is torn between her duty to her husband and her desire for more from her life than cooking and cleaning. After encouragement from nosy upstairs neighbor Gertrude Deuter, played by Wendy Hendrickson, Louise decides to have an affair with her new renter.

"She's a hopeless romantic," explained Hickey of her character. "She's like every 20-something who just wants romance. There's nothing else she really wants out of life other than to just be wanted."

Underpants

Wendy Hendrickson was originally signed on to be the assistant director for "The Underpants" but read the part of the overly isolated but overly worldly Gertrude and knew she wanted to read for that role. She said Gertrude is an interesting character because she has both adopted Louise as her surrogate child but also lives her life vicariously through the young woman.

"I enjoy the interaction of the different characters," Hendrickson said. "They're all so different and they all come to the stage with their own histories and their own stories and there's tension and innuendo but there's also a message if you can see past the humor."

Sickly Mr. Cohen, who in a running gag continually claims he's a good, honest German Cohen "with a K," also wants Louise, though the affection is not shared. But if he can't have an affair with her, he's at least content to thwart Versati's advances. All the while, Louise's husband makes drinking buddies of his new tenants and talks philosophy with them, never suspecting their intentions toward his wife.

Hendrickson said by today's standards Theo might be unfairly categorized as a sexist but he prefers to look at him as a strong man of his time, who had the utmost love and respect for his family but who also believed in traditional roles and places. He said the juxtaposition of Theo, Versati and Cohen is an interesting commentary on the many different levels and types of masculinity.

"It's a farce," he said. "It's silly and funny but at the core there's a really strong message, I think."

"I wonder if people will really get it all in one showing," Phillips added. "It's just a great show but there's so much under there."

Pool Loses Leg, Then Life

In 1886, John Pool, Cowlitz Prairie resident, lost his leg after it was crushed by a log. Several days after his leg amputation, he died.

Another Auto Accident Happens to Reynolds

In 1911, J.W. Reynolds, Tacoma, was in another auto accident in Lewis County. Two years before he had hit and killed a Chehalis bicyclist.

"Considerable excitement was caused at 8 o'clock last night when an automobile owned and driven by Ed Hitch of Centralia, crashed into a touring car driven by J.W. Reynolds of Tacoma, at the corner of Walnut St. and So. Tower Ave.," The Centralia Weekly Chronicle wrote.

"Both machines were being driven at a high rate of speed and it was miraculous that no one in either car was seriously injured. Mrs. Reynolds' face was cut by flying glass and she was in an extremely nervous condition when she was carried into a nearby house.

"Neither car carried lights, although darkness had almost fallen. The Reynolds' car was driving down the right hand side of Tower bound for Chehalis when Hitch came into Tower off from Walnut, and cut the corner without slackening his speed or blowing his horn, in warning. Hitch's car is a five passenger National and it struck the Cadillac with terrific force, wrenching the mechanism of both cars and tearing the rear wheel off the National."

Dewey Jerrells Found Not Guilty

On June 6, 1936, Dewey Jerrells, 36, was a free man. Jerrells was found not guilty of murdering his 76-year-old mother, Mrs. Margaret Jerrells. The chief witness to the murder was an 11-year-old boy. The mother was killed and her body burned in her house on March 30, 1936.

"The young Mossyrock farmer showed no signs of excitement as the verdict was read," The Centralia Daily Chronicle reported. "The expression on his face did not change in the least. He sat motionless for over a minute as the jury prepared to leave the box. He then got up and stood beside one of his attorneys, W.E. Bishop, and shook hands with each juror as they left their seats."

More Than 800 Want Swimming Lessons

In 1961, Tom Smith, Chehalis pool director, reported 802 people had signed up for the free Red Cross swimming lessons, which were sponsored by the City of Chehalis. In 1960, 1,000 people had taken the lessons.

Safety Meeting Sparsely Attended

In 1986, only a few people attended a meeting regarding a five-siren system to alert residents of problems with the Mossyrock Dam. The sirens were mandated by new federal regulations. Attendees said many residents went to a baseball game instead.

Robert Simpson, former dam worker living on Mayfield Lake, said the probability of an issue was slim. "They're one in a million," Simpson said. "But I'm interested in anything that concerns safety."

"There should be 500 or 600 people here, said Carl Lichtenwaler, Mayfield Estates resident. "I guess they would rather watch baseball."

Christensen Chosen as New Director

In 2001, Todd Christensen, 30, Idaho economic development specialist, was named the new executive director of The Chamber.

Band Director Leaving

In 2006, W.F. West High School band director for 24 years, Dan Judd, left Chehalis at the end of the school year for Summit High School in Bend, Ore.

Judd and his brother Dave had worked together in Chehalis for 19 years in the music department, using the same office. They were known as the Brothers Judd.

Yelm Graduate's Book is 'Right Out Of a Movie'

By Tyler Huey
The Nisqually Velley News
news1@yelmonline.com

Gary Beggs played on Yelm's 1958 State B basketball championship team, but that feat is a minor side note in his "right out of a movie" life story.

Self-published in October 2012, "The Nightstand Notes" is an autobiography about the ups, downs and everything in between of Beggs' whirlwind life. Although it may come off as a Hollywood script, this true story is one of romance, mystery, love, comedy, business failures, divorce, reconciliation and more.

Gary Beggs
Author

As a United States Airman stationed in Libya and France for two years, his life took an unexpected turn when he took a 30-day leave to visit England. As it turned out, he ended up in Denmark and met an engaged woman in a café,

"She was with another guy and I would look over at her and she would look over at me, and this guy would keep getting up," Beggs recalled. "I thought, "Man, I've got to say something to her.'"

When the Englishman walked away, Beggs said he slid a paper to her asking for her name and phone number. She slid it back and said to meet in two hours.

They met each other every night at the café for about a week. The eventual plan was for her to leave for a weekend and Beggs would go to Sweden. As planned, Beggs went to meet her on a Friday night but she didn't show up. He then went to the supposed apartment she lived in and nobody had heard of her.

Beggs said he was so upset, he caught a train to Sweden, went into a cafeteria and someone ended up walking by him, which caused his coffee to spill.

To his shock, it was Karin — he didn't know her last name — who explained the unforeseen circumstances that brought them together.

"One thing led to another and we just knew we were meant for each other," said Beggs, who lives near Portland, Ore.

The two married, on Dec. 17, 1964.

"A lot of people who have read the book said this is right out of a movie," he said. "It's very exciting, it's very intriguing."

After getting discharged from the Air Force, they drove to his parents' house on Valley Road in Yelm. Beggs ended up working at Boeing for eight years, and while having a full-time job, he earned a bachelor's degree in industrial arts education from the University of Washington. Upon graduation, he started a construction company in Centralia and built custom homes.

This is also a story of redemption. All of those long hours wreaked havoc on their marriage, and his wife left him in 1984. But years later, they remarried in 1990.

The book, which can be purchased on Amazon.com, has six positive reviews. Although those who offered feedback all seem to know Beggs, any bias is not the reason for their high praise; they claim it was simply an enjoyable read.

"He is a great story teller and kept me in suspense throughout the entire book," wrote Lernie Gibbs. "His honesty and transparency were a delight. I loved it and so will you."

"The Nightstand Notes" refers to the messages they left each other to communicate during their busy lives. It also refers to the note that was left when Karin was leaving him.

Beggs said he wrote the book to help others.

"From having some marital difficulties it just goes to show — we're both Christian — if you really trust in God … you can really work out your difficulties," he said.

Life isn't always rainbows and butterflies. His autobiography is an example of how those tough times can be turned around. However, Father Time will always be undefeated, as Beggs learned the hard way.

Karin died Dec. 5, 2011, due to a tumor under her eye.

"I want people to get her message of hope," he said. "Throughout her sickness she was always happy.

"People would come over to cheer her up, but when they left they were more cheered up than when they came. She just had a sparkle to her that everybody loved."

Watercress Finesse: Crisp, Peppery Green Takes a Starring Role in Sprightly Main-dish Salad

By Joe Gray
Chicago Tribune

Watercress is a treat I had come to associate with spring and the return of farmers markets — that is, until I came across vibrant bunches of it recently at the local grocer.

It was so fresh and crisp that instead of figuring how to incorporate it into dinner, I made it dinner accompanied by ingredients to complement, not overpower, its peppery bite — cooling and zesty oranges, mild sauteed chicken, briny olives and rich, tangy feta. So was born a watercress-centric salad that makes a light dinner.

For a heartier version, you certainly could make the meal chicken-centric, grilling larger portions and serving the rest of the salad alongside. (Shrimp would be good as well.) A milder cheese, such as queso fresco, could sub for the feta.

Since that dinner, I've come to find out that watercress is common at many grocers. Apparently, everyone knew this but me. I'm still enjoying the freshly picked wild watercress from the farmers market, but I'm so glad to have a supply at the grocer when that harvest is done.

Tip: Watercress is edible from stem to leaves. If the stems are thick, you can snap or cut them off, separating the clusters into smaller sprigs. (Nibble on the thick stems for a snack.)

WATERCRESS, CHICKEN AND CITRUS SALAD

Prep: 20 minutes
Cook: 8 minutes
Servings: 2

Vinaigrette:
1 tablespoon freshly squeezed orange juice
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1/4 teaspoon salt

Salad:
1 tablespoon olive oil
1/2 pound chicken tenders or 1 boneless, skinless chicken breast half
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 large bunches watercress, about 6 ounces
2 tangerines, peeled, segmented (or 1 orange)
1/2 medium jicama, peeled, cut in 1/4-inch matchsticks, about 1 cup
1/4 cup quartered green olives
2 ounces feta, crumbled, about 1/2 cup

Directions:

1. For the vinaigrette, whisk the orange juice, vinegar, olive oil and salt together in a small bowl. Set aside for flavors to marry.

2. For the salad, heat the olive oil in a skillet over medium-high heat. Add the chicken; sprinkle with salt. Cook, turning, until lightly browned and cooked through, 8 minutes. Set aside to cool slightly.

3. Place the watercress, tangerine segments, jicama, olives and feta in a bowl. Shred the chicken into long pieces with your fingers (or slice or cube it with a knife). Add to the salad. Pour the vinaigrette over the salad; toss gently with your hands to lightly coat all the ingredients.

Tips: Pool Safety Can Help Prevent Children From Drowning

By Colleen Wright
Orlando Sentinel

ORLANDO, Fla. — Ten years ago Jerry Pitzer sat by his backyard pool with a friend. Five of his kids were perched on the pool steps. His best babysitter, a Dalmatian named Patch, stood guard.

But no one saw 3-year-old Cassandra fall into the pool and sink to the bottom.

Last week, 52-year-old Pitzer, now a water-safety instructor at Community Based Care of Central Florida, shared the story of his daughter's drowning at a press conference.

Pitzer — along with representatives from several Orange County (Fla.) departments and The Gift of Swimming, which gives swimming lessons for underprivileged children — spoke about water safety and drowning prevention.

Last year, 228 children aged 12 or younger drowned in Florida, more than any other state.

We're wiping out the equivalent of several classrooms of kids each year in Florida, said Dr. Kevin Sherin, director of the Orange County Department of Health.

In 2012, 1,000 children drowned across the country and another 5,000 suffered injuries from a near-drowning experience.

When Pitzer didn't see his young daughter in the house, he frantically checked her usual hiding spots. Nothing.

Then he went outside and scanned the surface of the backyard pool. Finally, he saw her at the bottom.

His final piece of advice for the audience was chilling.

"Drowning children don't float," Pitzer said.

He recommended these prevention tips during the press conference:

• A guardian should be designated to watch children in the water at all times. Blowing a whistle helps alert others of a child drowning and to call 911.

• An alarm that can be placed on the exit of the home or in the pool alerts parents if a child steps outside or falls into the pool.

• Follow the 4-4-4 rule: Install fences on all four sides of the pool, making sure they are 4 feet high with slats separated by 4 inches.

• Cover spas and jacuzzis.

• Lock sliding doors and screen doors.

Orange County Fire Chief Otto Drozd said supervision and barriers are key to drowning prevention, and offered additional tips:

• If a child gets away, first search all waterways such as pools, bathtubs and backyard lakes and ponds.

• If the child is found, do not hesitate; call 911. The dispatcher will give directions for administering CPR.

Susan Polder, the executive director for The Gift of Swimming, went over precautionary steps for parents.

• Do not encourage breath-holding competitions among kids.

• No roughhousing in the pool or around the pool deck.

• Keep a cellphone or landline nearby the pool in case of an emergency to call 911.

• Learn CPR.

• Enroll your child in swimming lessons. Children 9 months and older should be able to float in water. Children should know how to swim even when fully clothed.

ADVICE: Dear Abby

Reader Takes Action: 30 Acts of Kindness

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: It is easy to watch or read the news and think people are awful and this world is going nowhere fast. At New Year's I made a resolution to try and DO something about how I view society. I decided I'd do 30 random acts of service for strangers.

I know it may seem small and insignificant, but at least I can say I'm trying to make this a better place to live. I'm hoping it will spread a message of love and caring in a world with too much hurt and violence. Ideally, one or two people will notice and pay it forward.

It's spring, and so far I have volunteered as a math tutor at a local school and shoveled the snow off a neighbor's sidewalk. But I'm already falling behind, and I'm struggling to come up with some good ideas. I know you and your readers often have creative suggestions. Can you suggest more acts of service I can do for strangers? — TRYING TO BE NICE

DEAR TRYING TO BE NICE: You could volunteer at a local food pantry. Or find an organization that delivers food to shut-ins and take meals to the clients they serve a couple of days a month.

You could bring a garbage bag with you when you take walks in the morning or evening and pick up paper cups, plastic bags, cigarette butts and candy wrappers that litter our streets and beaches. Or simply acknowledge the presence of others by smiling and saying, "good morning," "good afternoon" and "good evening" to people you encounter.

Readers, if you'd like to chime in, I'd be interested in your ideas.

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, when I was a senior in high school, a guy became overly attached to me. He shared many very private feelings with me about his lack of friends and severe depression. After trying to help him, first by myself and later with a school guidance counselor and even involving his parents, I decided his problems were too much for me to handle and ended the friendship. I know I hurt him, but I saw no other alternative. After high school we didn't speak for about a year.

We are now in the same college and he's trying to force himself back into my life and be friends again. Abby, he hasn't changed at all. I feel bad, but I have no interest in becoming his friend.

What should I do? I have a hard time saying no because he is so persistent and I feel guilty. — FEELING PITY IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR FEELING PITY: Tell him the truth. Say, "I can't be your friend because your problems overwhelm me. But YOU can do something about them by going to the student health center and asking for counseling, and by joining some clubs and activities so you can interact with new people."

DEAR ABBY: Why are brownies called brownies if they are black? — JUST WONDERING IN HOUSTON

DEAR JUST WONDERING: I took your question to Lachlan Sands, executive chef at Le Cordon Bleu College of Culinary Arts, Los Angeles, who says, "The first mention of 'brownies' is in a Fanny Farmer cookbook published in 1906. They are not called brownies because of the color, but were named after Celtic pixies."

P.S. If your brownies are turning out black, you may be baking them too long.
