Talented Mr. 'reboot'

Netflix gets gritty with 'Ripley' remake

By Dana Simpson

TV Media

ollywood loves a charming sociopath, and for good reason. As 2023's "Saltburn" beautifully illustrated, divisive, morally ambiguous characters have a way of getting under the skin of the audience members and characters alike, staying within the fabric of each individual like a stubborn stain. As viewers try to sort out the motive behind the maniac, morals are called into guestion, boundaries are pushed and - for better or for worse — the most questionable events of the film often play on repeat in our heads. Mary Harron's "American Psycho" (2000) achieved the same effect more than 20 vears prior to last year's "Saltburn," but perhaps the most recognizable villain to fit this model originated in the 1950s.

Tom Ripley, who gives his surname to Netflix's newest series, was first created in 1955 by thriller novelist Patricia Highsmith. While posthumously seen as somewhat of a divisive figure herself, Highsmith created Ripley to guide her would-be bestselling novel, "The Talented Mr. Ripley." The novel spawned four sequels (published between 1970 and 1991) and grew to further acclaim in 1999, when it was adapted into the fivetime Oscar-nominated feature film of the same name. Now. 69 years after Ripley's birth, Netflix makes its mark on the classic tale.

The eight-episode thriller series, "Ripley," premieres Thursday, April 4, on Netflix.

Celebrity chefs bet big in afterhours culinary poker challenge

By Caroline Collacutt TV Media

Cooking requires focus, quick thinking and talent — and so does poker. Hosted by Eric Adjepong ("Alex Vs. America"), the all-new, highstakes cooking competition, "Wildcard Kitchen," serves up challenges like never before, with new episodes airing Tuesdays on Food Network.

"We're serving up our first-ever after-hours culinary poker game in [an] all-new series," Food Network announced in a recent news release.

"In each episode," they say, "host Eric Adjepong takes over the test kitchen after hours with an exclusive invitation for three chefs to bring $5,000 to play across three hands of his underground culinary poker game."

"The competitors, who all know each other well, have scores to settle and personal stakes to lose as they battle to create dishes based on the cards they are dealt and bet using their own instincts and cold, hard cash. The luck of the draw determines the dishes and cooking time, while wildcards deal unpredictable challenges into the mix that test the chefs like never before. From surf and turf with peanut butter to live crab with kimchi, anything can happen in 'Wildcard Kitchen' as mystery guest judges use blind taste tests to determine who walks away the high roller with bragging rights and cash from their fellow chefs."
