U.S. gymnast Simone Biles competes in the 2020 Tokyo Olympics on NBC and other outlets.

The same but different: Summer Olympics return post-pandemic

Shrouded in uncertainty and a year late, the 2020 Tokyo Olympics get going this week with as much anticipation as any in recent memory.

Kicking off Wednesday, July 21, two days before the Opening Ceremony on Friday, July 23, NBC along with USA Network, CNBC, NBC Sports Network, Golf Channel, Peacock, Olympic Channel, Telemundo, Universo, the NBC Sports app and NBCOlympics.com will provide over 7,000 hours of coverage of 33 sports. Among them are swimming, diving, basketball, gymnastics, track and field, beach volleyball and boxing, plus new sports karate, skateboarding, sport climbing and surfing and returnees baseball and softball.

More than 11,000 male and female athletes from 206 countries will be at these games, the status of which was in doubt as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic. At this writing, arenas and venues in the Japanese capital were set at 50 percent capacity up to 10,000 spectators. But despite the anxiety and all the restrictions in place, Mike Tirico, NBC's prime-time studio host for these games, thinks Tokyo will make a fine host city.

"This is one of the great cities in the world," he says, "and I think tourists from around the world would've come to the games. And I think that's just the unfortunate part of this timing for the host city. You know, you plan seven years out for the games and this would've been such a spectacular games. And as you know, there's so much culture ...

"Having said that, I think they'll put on a great games," he continues. "The venues were, according to the IOC, more ready and prepared than any city that hosted the Summer Games, so we were really in for a great games. So from a preparation standpoint of the venues, the facilities for the athletes, I think that's going to be still as good as possible."

In the weeks prior to these games, Tirico has been crisscrossing the country, taking in qualifying events in various sports and making note of athletes to watch. And he's also looking at the big stories. In particular, Usain Bolt's absence means there will be a new fastest man in the world. And he sees U.S. gymnast Simone Biles adding more medals to her collection and the American swim team dominating as well.

And in soccer, the U.S. women's team will look for a modicum of redemption for their deflating loss to Sweden in the quarterfinals in Rio de Janeiro in 2016 when they face that country early in competition.

"Coming off the success of the World Cup," Tirico says, "I think the likes of Megan Rapinoe and everyone else has become extremely popular athletes in this country. And they're just one example of what I think is the overall strength of Team USA in Tokyo and that is the women's teams. ... It really will be a lot of the focus of the coverage and of America's best medal chances coming from many of those women."

Checking in with CURT MENEFEE

When it comes to animals, Curt Menefee certainly walks the walk.

Not only is he host of two-animal centric shows, “America’s Top Dog” and “An Animal Saved My Life,” both airing Tuesdays on A&E Network, he’s a lifelong dog owner. Currently, he and his wife Viollette have two rescues – a 10-year-old Labrador retriever/German shepherd mix named Abby and a six-year-old French bulldog/Corgi mix named Toby.

“We love it,” Menefee, also a commentator for Fox Sports, says, “and that’s all I’ve ever done and all I will ever do.”

And as any dog owner knows, dogs don’t exactly do what their owners or trainers want them to do. Be it not performing a trick before party guests after doing it hundreds of times in private or just not coming when called, the canine memory can be unpredictable.

Menefee has seen it in a few times on “America’s Top Dog,” especially on the obstacle course. Dogs will run it perfectly on the practice run but when the cameras are on and the clock is running, not so much.

“You get to that one moment,” Menefee explains, “and all of a sudden for whatever reason, the dog decides, ‘Eh, I’m not doing this tonight’ or ‘I don’t want to do it’ or ‘You’ve really got to coax me.’ ... And I think sometimes we take it for granted with our own dogs ... (when) we say, ‘Hey, sit.’ Really, we’re speaking two different languages. And there’s a non-verbal communication that goes on (between the dog and their human handler) that you really see on display when they’re running a course and a clock is going and there’s time and there’s pressure.”

Name: Curt Menefee

Birth date: July 22, 1965

Birthplace: Atlanta

Family ties: He and wife Viollette reside in Los Angeles

Education: Has a bachelor’s degree in journalism from Coe College in Iowa; currently pursuing a master’s in public policy and administration at Northwestern University in Chicago

TV credits include: “NFL on Fox,” “Fox NFL Sunday,” “UFC on Fox,” “Hello Goodbye”

Author credit: “Losing Isn’t Everything: The Untold Stories and Hidden Lessons Behind the Toughest Losses in Sports History,” published in 2016

For the unusual and the exotic, turn it to Cooking Channel and Food Network

No matter how much into food you are, you can always count on Food Network and Cooking Channel to show you something you've never seen before.

Be it a cuisine from a far-off land or a little-known protein or vegetable, there is always something that maybe you might want to try or at the very least watch someone else try it and hear what they think. So if you're bored with your own cooking and looking for new ideas, fire up the flatscreen and check out the following shows.

And nothing is more unusual than the fare that Andrew Zimmern digs into on the Thursday, July 22, episode of his Cooking Channel series "Bizarre Foods America," which lands him in Pittsburgh to try the goat heart tartare, a cutting edge dish that we won't try to describe except to say it sounds bloody interesting. Also on the menu are more conventional dishes like stuffed cabbage and braunschweiger.

A little less on the raw side are the munchies Zimmern digs into on "Bizarre Foods: Delicious Destinations" on Monday, July 19, on Cooking Channel, in which he samples what San Diego has to offer, including an octopus tostada, Filipino chicken adobo, So-Cal monster burritos and Mexican-inspired fish tacos. And San Diego is one town that knows how to do fish tacos right.

If it is small bites you seek, "Snackmasters" on Cooking Channel on Sunday, July 18, has chefs Anna Haugh and Aktar Islam trying to replicate a lunchbox favorite, a packet of Quavers, a potato-based snack from Great Britain that dates back more than 50 years and currently comes in flavors like cheese, prawn cocktail and salt and vinegar.

Over on Food Network, chef Michael Symon honors his Greek heritage on the Saturday, July 24, edition of "Symon's Dinners Cooking Out," with his own spins on two classic grilled foods: skewered chicken and pork souvlaki with a side of tzatziki sauce and homemade pita bread. Opa!

Not to be outdone, Valerie Bertinelli is testing the boundaries of cookie making on her Sunday edition of "Valerie's Home Cooking" by making cookies for any time of day, including a breakfast sandwich cookie, thyme and gruyere savory cookies, coconut chocolate chip cookies and chocolate and orange hazelnut cookies.

And on "The Kitchen" on Saturday, greens are the order of the day as Katie Lee Biegel cooks up spicy chicken eggplant boats, Alex Guarnaschelli uses every part of the carrot to prepare her roasted carrots with carrot-top pesto, and Geoffrey Zakarian goes spicy with his spinach and Swiss chard stew with coconut curry greens and lentils.

Rapinoe, Team USA look to put 2016 elimination behind them

It was the loss that left an indelible mark on the U.S. women's soccer team.

At the 2016 Summer Olympics at Rio de Janeiro, the heavily favored Americans lost to Sweden on penalties in the quarterfinals, marking the first time in 16 years the team went home without at least making the gold medal game. Afterward, said Megan Rapinoe, Team USA's high-scoring midfielder, "we felt like total failures." So much so that she says they will never let anything like that happen again.

And that will be put to the test Wednesday, July 21, when Team USA meets the Swedes in a group stage game at the 2020 Tokyo Olympics. For the 36-year-old Rapinoe, this will be her third Olympics. She was on the team in 2016 but was relegated to the bench because she was still recovering from major knee surgery. But she was one of the stars of the 2012 team in London as she helped lead the U.S. to the gold medal.

On this year's 18-player team, she stands as one of the oldest players on a team of veterans and fresh faces whose average age is almost 31. She won the Golden Ball and the Golden Boot at the 2019 World Cup and now Team USA is trying to become the first team to follow a World Cup title with Olympic gold.

It would mean vindication to a U.S. team trying to put a deflating loss behind them and add yet another trophy in the much-decorated Rapinoe's career.

Hey, Boo Boo! Viewers of a certain age will certainly remember this animated series that premiered in 1961 and follows the adventures of the smooth-talking bruin who was always looking to raid the picnic baskets of park-goers at Jellystone Park while Ranger Smith tries to stop him. OF 'SUPERMAN & LOIS' ON THE CW

In making "Superman & Lois," how have you liked becoming the latest screen incarnation of Lois Lane?

It's been very humbling, honestly, to be playing a strong female character as iconic as Lois Lane. She was first introduced in 1938, along with Superman, and she has really represented someone who's incredibly dogged and determined and uncompromising. And I think at a time when the profession of journalism has been under siege, as we have seen for the last few years, it's especially important and timely. And I take it very seriously.

How do you feel the series depicts Lois as a professional?

A lot of what she is writing about is what capitalism is doing to these small towns all over the United States, and Smallville in particular. And definitely, the journalism is an important part of her story. Superman's doing his stuff with his superpowers, and she's fighting against these injustices with words.

Were you aware from the start of the approach the series would take to the Superman saga?

Tyler (Hoechlin, who plays Clark Kent/Superman) and I were really sold when Todd (Helbing) was talking about "Friday Night Lights." That was a really important show; the way it was shot at the time was really novel. The actors had a lot more freedom, it wasn't like they always had to hit their marks and everything. But more than that, it was really grounded and real.

Part of what I'm hoping audiences respond to in our show is that this couple – even though she's this dynamic journalist, and even though he's Superman – is incredibly relatable, and they're dealing with a lot of the same issues that normal people deal with, whether it is lost jobs or having teenagers who are pushing back against them at every turn. It should feel, and I think it does, like Superman and Lois Lane could be your next-door neighbors.

‘Ordinary People’ is anything but ordinary

If Robert Redford was going to make his directing debut, he couldn’t have done much better than “Ordinary People.” The deeply moving 1980 screen version of Judith Guest’s novel – which EPIX shows Wednesday, July 21 – earned an Oscar for Redford among its four wins, which also included best picture. A relative novice to the business at the time, Timothy Hutton picked up a best supporting actor trophy as Conrad Jarrett, a profoundly troubled Chicago-suburb teen whose quest to come to terms with his emotions has a huge impact on other relationships.

The main one is that of his parents, Calvin and Beth, superbly played by Donald Sutherland and (in a calculated break from the television image she had cultivated for so many years) Mary Tyler Moore. While Calvin is warm and concerned, Beth is cold and impatient ... and though he has tried to look past her flaws, that becomes all but impossible as Conrad recovers from a suicide attempt linked to his guilt over a family tragedy.

With great hesitancy, Conrad goes to see a recommended psychiatrist (Judd Hirsch, also excellent), whose irony-infused approach to counseling gets through to the young man and slowly sets the stage for psychological doors to be unlocked. As that happens, Beth resists the new awareness awakened within her household, which also prompts changes in Calvin – who maintains that he’s “just trying to hold this family together,” despite the realization that he ultimately may not be able to.

Veteran screenwriter Alvin Sargent (also an Oscar winner here) does an exceptional job in retaining author Guest’s ideas and making them accessible to the mass audience, particularly in showing the progress in the therapy sessions without making it seem too accelerated for dramatic purposes. He and Redford also provide a choice part for much-later “Downton Abbey” staple Elizabeth McGovern, making her film debut as a quirky classmate who becomes Conrad’s would-be girlfriend; her scene as a clearly inexperienced bowler is wonderfully clumsy and classic, and one only can imagine the delight Redford took in guiding it. (Also seen in an early role: Adam Baldwin.)

Donald Sutherland and Mary Tyler Moore

Despite the perfection of other performances here, the biggest acting revelation in “Ordinary People” is that of Moore. One only needs to glance at a few minutes of “The Dick Van Dyke Show” or her eponymous 1970s sitcom to recognize the huge challenge she faced in preventing her usual persona from seeping into her work as the icy Beth, and it’s a masterful job from start to finish. She has to keep a tight rein on it, really only getting to show all of the character’s colors in a marital fight on a golf course.

“Ordinary People” is every bit the rare movie experience it promises to be, and 40-plus years later, it still has a singular place among great American films.

OF ‘BATTLE ON THE BEACH’
ON HGTV AND DISCOVERY+

With the seaside-home-renovation competition “Battle of the Beach” now added to the other projects you do for HGTV and Discovery Networks, does it seem to you like you work pretty much year-round for them?

You know, it’s been pretty awesome, this whole experience. They truly are my family, and they support me through all of it. They absolutely have been the wind beneath my wings.

They know I’m a hard worker. I don’t mess around; I get my work ethic from my father, and I just get up and I go. I love what I do, and if I don’t, I don’t say “Yes” just to do another show. I have to really believe in it and understand it. That they continue to put my name in the hat for all these shows they have, I love them and I’m extremely loved. And I can feel it.

What do you think of your fellow mentors to the teams on “Battle on the Beach,” Ty Pennington and Taniya Nayak?

Taniya is a real powerhouse and somebody who leads by example, so I know she took it very seriously. And Ty ... I love him! He’s just this creative burst of life and energy, and it’s hard to not learn from him. You have to hold on tight, because he’s such a force. We all have so much passion for what we do.

One thing that my team said was, “We didn’t know what to expect. This isn’t just television; you guys don’t just show up and do the shots for TV and walk away. You’re in it, getting your hands dirty and sweating and stressing right there with us.” That was a beautiful compliment, and a great takeaway for us.

The body count grows for 'Dr. Death' in Peacock true crime series

Many an actor talks about the power of the costume, how the simple act of donning an article of clothing can help them get into a character.

For AnnaSophia Robb, who plays prosecutor Michelle Shughart in the Peacock limited true-crime series "Dr. Death," it was the power suits that did it.

"It was great," the actress says. "I mean, I'd never really worn like little suits before so I have all these suits and briefcases and I sort of have my power suits, so it felt very empowering. You know, she's excellent at her job ... and I think putting that confidence on while walking into a room with Alec Baldwin and Christian Slater and being like, 'No, I'm going to be really great at my job and I'm gonna tell these guys what's going on,' is an empowering act in itself."

The drama series, which currently streams its eight episodes, is based on Wondery's hit podcast and follows the story of Dr. Christopher Duntch (Joshua Jackson, "The Affair"), a rising star in the Dallas neurosurgery scene with a flourishing practice until things started to change. His patients would come out of complicated but routine spinal surgeries paralyzed, in great pain or dead.

As the victim count grows, fellow physicians Dr. Robert Henderson (Alec Baldwin, "30 Rock") and Dr. Randall Kirby (Christian Slater, "Mr. Robot") set out to stop him with the help of Dallas assistant district attorney Shughart (Robb), and try to determine if he is the sociopath he appears to be or just an inept surgeon.

For the role, Robb talked with Shughart and came away impressed by her kindness, her desire to do the right thing and her determination to find, as Robb says, "the appropriate repercussion for someone who has committed a crime."

"In Dr. Duntch's case, she felt that he gave his patients a life sentence by either paralyzing them or giving them pain for the rest of their life or killing a few of them," she says, "and so she went for the highest sentencing. And he's the only doctor who's been convicted for something he did in the operating room. He used his hands as a deadly weapon, basically."

The bad news for 'Good Girls'? It's over

Q: Is "Good Girls" really ending? – Marcia Collins, via e-mail

A: It is, though NBC still had several episodes of the show's fourth and final season left to air when the cancellation announcement was made. Like another NBC series that recently ended, "Manifest," "Good Girls" – starring Christina Hendricks, Retta and Mae Whitman – was faring very well on Netflix, but that streaming service declined to continue the show with new episodes.

Once that happened, it was "game over," since Universal Television wasn't going to shop "Good Girls" to other outlets. The deal Netflix made for it right from the start was significant, since NBC didn't have to foot the bill alone for the licensing fee ... which without NBC's involvement would have fallen to Netflix solely, and that likely was the breaker of any possible deal. If it's any consolation to fans, the existing episodes (including the last season) should remain available on Netflix for some time.

Christina Hendricks

Q: I've seen references to Conan O'Brien having written for "The Simpsons." When, exactly, did he work on that show? – Mark Light, Columbus, Ohio

A: After his college tenure on the staff of The Harvard Lampoon, the former NBC and TBS talk-show host made several stops as a writer before reaching "The Simpsons." He worked on "Not Necessarily the News" and "The Wilton North Report," then joined "Saturday Night Live" for four years, winning an Emmy Award along with the rest of the show's writing team at the time.

O'Brien's "Simpsons" tenure came after that, from 1991 to 1993, when executive producers Mike Reiss and Al Jean recruited him. And he's credited with adding a more surreal approach to the animated sitcom's stories. Among the more famous ones O'Brien wrote are "Marge vs. the Monorail" and "Homer Goes to College," and he stayed until the opportunity arose for him to succeed David Letterman on NBC's "Late Night" program. He was sought as a producer, but his agent held out to get him the host spot. The audience for his audition was comprised of other writers on "The Simpsons," and the rest is TV history ... O'Brien's, specifically. (Fox initially wouldn't let him out of his "Simpsons" contract, but NBC and O'Brien himself mutually paid to resolve that.)

"The Dick Van Dyke Show" (1961-66)

In terms of his screen work, any list of Van Dyke's notable credits would have to start with this classic sitcom, in which he and Mary Tyler Moore became one of television's most popular couples – both then and for all time – as variety-show writer Rob Petrie and his wife Laura.

"Bye Bye Birdie" (1963) Van Dyke re-created his Tony Award-honored Broadway performance as a songwriter whose Elvis Presley-like star client is drafted into the U.S. Army.

"Mary Poppins" (1964) With Van Dyke rightfully telling us recently that this movie "will be around forever," the Walt Disney production made great use of the actor's multiple talents as London chimney sweep Bert opposite Julie Andrews' magical title character.

"Lt. Robin Crusoe, U.S.N." (1966) Reuniting with Disney for this "Robinson Crusoe" revision, Van Dyke entertainingly portrays a Navy pilot stranded on a supposedly deserted island.

"Divorce American Style" (1967) Delving into more mature movie territory, Van Dyke starred in this Norman Lear-written satire as a man whose life takes big hits in all ways as he separates from his wife (Debbie Reynolds).

"Fitzwilly" (1967) Van Dyke is terrific as a manservant who wants to keep his near-broke employer (Edith Evans) in the posh means she's accustomed to, even if it means resorting to robbery to do it.

"Chitty Chitty Bang Bang" (1968) Though it received a relatively lukewarm response upon its release, this adaptation of a children's book by James Bond creator Ian Fleming has grown in popularity with its fanciful tale of a flying car and its eccentric inventor (Van Dyke). Turner Classic Movies will show it Saturday, July 24.

"The Comic" (1969) Reteaming with "Dick Van Dyke Show" mentor Carl Reiner, Van Dyke went for something darker with this portrait of a silent-movie comedian who was his own worst enemy.

"Cold Turkey" (1971) In another script with Norman Lear's touch, Van Dyke plays a minister who encourages his Iowa town to give up smoking for a month in a contest to win $25 million from a tobacco company.

"The Morning After" (1974) Emmy-nominated for this TV-movie, Van Dyke has noted that the story of a heavy-drinking publicist mirrored his own life around that time.

"Columbo" (1974) Seeing Van Dyke playing a villain is so atypical, the memory of it lingers, as with a caper that cast him as a wife-killing photographer suspected by ever-wily police detective Columbo (Peter Falk).

"Matlock" (1986) Early in fellow TV icon Andy Griffith's lawyer series, Van Dyke made a strong impression by playing against type again as a murderous judge.

"Diagnosis Murder" (1993-2001) Van Dyke comfortably adapted his image to a mystery-series format as Dr. Mark Sloan, who helped police officers including his son (played by Van Dyke's son Barry) solve crimes.

"Night at the Museum" (2006) Van Dyke is a welcome presence as a museum security guard who has an extra agenda as he faces imminent retirement.
