Jon Seda discovers a world beneath Los Angeles in 'La Brea'

After "Chicago P.D." and "Homicide: Life on the Street," Jon Seda didn't expect his career to go into a sinkhole.

That's not even a figure of speech: His character is among those who fall in when a sizable chunk of Los Angeles literally opens up in "La Brea," a NBC adventure-drama series premiering Monday, Sept. 27. Those who are forced to take the plunge find themselves in primeval surroundings, while others who have remained above ground try to determine what happened and how to reunite with those they apparently have lost.

Natalie Zea ("Justified"), Eoin Macken ("The Night Shift"), Zyra Gorecki and Jack Martin play members of a family separated by the phenomenon, while Seda portrays an ex-Navy SEAL turned thoracic surgeon who's thrust into the land beneath L.A. "I've been really fortunate in my career to play different types of characters," the pleasant Seda reflects, "so when this opportunity came up, I knew it really was something different.

"I hadn't been thinking about doing something like this, but it was something I could enjoy wholeheartedly. To me, it's the epitome of a Hollywood project ... almost like watching a 'Star Wars' movie that takes you away on an adventure. I thought, 'Wow! I definitely have to grab onto this.' I lived in L.A. for about four years, but I was more worried about earthquakes. I never really thought about sinkholes."

One of the ironies of "La Brea" is that while its setting is very American, it's actually being filmed in Australia. Seda has worked there before – when he made HBO's 2010 limited series "The Pacific" – and he says, "The landscape is amazing. It adds so much, especially since with 'La Brea,' you have the sinkhole and this crazy world that we find ourselves in. A lot of the same crew members worked on 'The Pacific,' so we've been doing a lot of reminiscing."

Still, working in Australia means a long separation for Seda (who terms himself "an East Coast kind of guy") from his U.S.-based family, underscored by the quarantining that's required for international travel now.

"That's the tough part," Seda allows. "The pilot was filmed in Vancouver, and I thought even that was a stretch (distancewise). Then the pandemic happened and delayed things for a while, and when this came back around and it was moving from Vancouver to Australia, I had to talk with my wife about it. We're a really close family and we went over it, with the possibility that we might not see each other for six months. Our kids are older now, so we decided, 'We'll handle it. We'll make it work.' It's been tough, but we all make sacrifices.

Checking in with WNDSY FONSECA

W.C. Fields famously said that performers should never work with children or animals. Nearly a century later, it's safe to say Lyndsy Fonseca would disagree.

In her role as single mom and veterinary assistant Laura Turner in the currently streaming Disney+ family comedy "Turner & Hooch," the 34-year-old actress is surrounded by a full complement of beasties, among them cats, turtles, birds and rabbits, plus the five Dogues de Bordeaux who play massive police dog Hooch.

Each of the canines has a special skill, be it wildness, friendliness or calmness, utilized for whatever the scene demands. But that also brings an element of unpredictability as the canine actors can get tired and bored easily. So scenes must be completed in as few takes as possible and the human thesps have to be ready for anything.

"It's kind of like working with a really famous actor who only comes in at the very last second and leaves first," Fonseca says with a laugh. "I remember talking to (executive producer) McG and being like, 'But what's the dog going to do? Why are we going to rehearse without the dog?' And he was like, 'No, no. The dog comes like last second.' ... So then you think you know what you're doing but then when the dog comes in, probably everything's going to change anyway. So there's a lot of elements of improvisation and going with the flow and using whatever dog is there, their talents to best facilitate the scene.

"In all honesty I loved it," she continues, "because you can't fake it with a dog. Like they know when you're honest or not and it's kind of like working with horses, like you just have to really be in the moment. So it's a nice challenge."

When food becomes a character in sitcoms and dramas

It is often said that food is the great common denominator, the common thread that unites us all no matter our beliefs, backgrounds or cultures.

On television, it performs a different function, sometimes as a catalyst for a storyline or as a backdrop against which characters can engage with one another. And nowhere is that more true than on "Blue Bloods."

Premiering its 12th season Friday, Oct. 1, on CBS, the venerable cop drama is known for its lively Sunday family dinner scenes in which patriarch Frank (Tom Selleck) and the Reagan family will discuss morally complex issues over meat loaf, roasted chicken or pot roast or whatever craft services whips up.

And the food is real, though no one in the cast except Donnie Wahlberg (who plays Danny Reagan) actually eats. When it takes all day to shoot the family dinner, it's best to pace oneself.

Conversely, food played an unconventional role in "Seinfeld." Of course, everyone remembers the "Soup Nazi" episode, about an eccentric soupmaker who put his customers through the wringer if they're to get a pint of his extraordinary creations. But there were also junior mints, nonfat yogurt, Mackinaw peaches, a big salad, a loaf of rye, an early bird dinner and a discarded eclair that drove Jerry (Jerry Seinfeld), George (Jason Alexander), Kramer (Michael Richards) and Elaine (Julia Louis-Dreyfus) to distraction – or worse.

On "The Big Bang Theory," Chinese takeout is what's for dinner on Fridays with General Tso's chicken, beef with broccoli, shrimp with lobster sauce and vegetable lo mein being the typical order for Sheldon (Jim Parsons), Leonard (Johnny Galecki), Penny (Kaley Cuoco) and the gang. Much like "Blue Bloods," the comestibles were real here and the cast really dug the steamed dumpling appetizer. Watch closely.

Food was mostly the butt of the joke on "M*A*S*H" with what was served in the mess tent being mostly unrecognizable. But there was the Spam lamb that a kindhearted Radar (Gary Burghoff) used to give a real lamb a stay of execution for a camp cookout and the ribs that Hawkeye (Alan Alda) and Trapper (Wayne Rogers) ordered from Chicago.

While the gang at "Cheers" mostly consumed their meals in liquid form, there was a memorable scene in one Season 5 episode where Thanksgiving dinner at Carla's (Rhea Perlman) house devolved into a food fight with Sam (Ted Danson), Diane (Shelley Long), Frasier (Kelsey Grammer) and the others letting fly with mashed potatoes, stuffing, peas, gravy and cranberry sauce. Fans will also remember this as the only appearance of Norm's (George Wendt) wife Vera, albeit with pumpkin pie obscuring her face.

Power hopes to finish season on a high at Long Beach

IndyCar ends its 2021 season in style this week, going out with a fan favorite and North America's longest-running street race in the Acura Grand Prix of Long Beach.

If history is a guide, Will Power should be a threat on the iconic 1.968mile, 12-turn temporary street circuit. The 2014 IndyCar Series champ has won here twice, in 2008 and 2012, and gotten on the podium four other times, most recently in 2018 when he finished second. Like many drivers, this is a race he gets up for.

Unfortunately, 2021 has been something of a disappointment for the 40-year-old Australian. Before collecting his first win of the season in the IndyCar Grand Prix on Aug. 14, the year had been a mishmash of mishaps and underperformance. He was nearly dropped from the starting grid for the Indianapolis 500 before qualifying 32nd and finishing 30th. In Detroit, he was leading most of the first race before his car overheated and he wound up 20th. And in Nashville, early contact with Simon Pagenaud caused him to finish 14th.

Were it not for his win in the Indy road course race – which snapped a 13-month drought - Power would be farther down in the IndyCar standings than his current ninth (as of early September). A victory at Long Beach would help salvage his season though the series title is certainly out of reach with leaders Pato O'Ward and Alex Palou ahead of him by more than 100

And it is against them and the likes of Pagenaud, Scott Dixon, Josef Newgarden and Marcus Ericsson that Power will vie in the 2021 Acura Grand Prix of Long Beach, which airs from Southern California Sunday, Sept. 26, on NBC Sports Network.

"Movie: I Am Durán"

From director Mat Hodgson comes this 2019 documentary about the Panamanian boxer who held titles in four weight classes and helped inspire his homeland's people to rise up against its CIA-funded dictator to achieve independence. Fellow fighters Sugar Ray Leonard, Mike Tyson and Lennox Lewis offer their observations, as do Robert De Niro, Sylvester Stallone and Larry Merchant.

"Movie: Nixon"

Oliver Stone's controversial portrait of Richard Nixon stars Anthony Hopkins as the former president. The film covers Nixon's childhood in a Quaker home, his rise in politics and his fall from grace after the Watergate scandal of the '70s. Joan Allen stars as Pat Nixon, Ed Harris plays E. Howard Hunt, and David Hyde Pierce plays attorney John Dean.

"The World's Most Amazing Vacation Rentals"

The unscripted series returns for its sophomore round, as seasoned travelers Jo Franco, Megan Batoon and Luis D. Ortiz visit incredible, over-the-top vacation properties around the world and share their expert tricks and tips as well as highlight the life-changing experiences these rentals have to offer. (ORIGINAL)

"Disney's Magic Bake-Off" (Sept. 29)

Dara Reneé and Issac Ryan Brown host this competition series that combines the fun of baking and the impressive ingenuity of several young pastry chefs, who divide into three teams of two and race against the clock to create cakes inspired by a Disney TV or movie offering. Disneyland pastry chef Graciela Gomez guides the kid bakers.

OF 'BIG SKY' ON ABC

As Season 2 of "Big Sky" begins, your character Jenny appears to have accepted Cassie (played by Kylie Bunbury) as her investigative partner. Does that mean any tension over the two women's mutual love for the now-deceased Cody is over?

We definitely have a strong bond. We have mutual respect for each other as private eyes, but now that Jenny got shot at the end of Season 1, that adds a whole new different dynamic and stakes in their relationship.

I did a lot of research in terms of having a near-death experience, and how that actually affects your life choices if you do get a second chance. I feel that you will see Jenny in a new light. You'll see a new version of her ... a 2.0 version that is reflective in terms of her choices in work, and her relationship with Kylie and new partnerships, and also her own purpose and her own meaning of what she wants and how to get it.

"Big Sky" took some criticism in its first season for its rather brutal treatment of several of its female characters. How do you view that going into Season 2?

This feels like a new start and in a lot of ways new storytelling, also with new cast (members). I started Tae Kwon Do at the age of seven, I got my first black belt at the age of 13, and I started a martial-arts school at the age of 16 – so I'm a huge advocate of protecting women and also helping women, getting them the knowledge they need to be able to defend themselves. I know that Elwood (executive producer Elwood Reid) also is a big advocate, having daughters, so I think you'll see a big change this year.

BY JAY BOBBIN

'Network' still packs a punch with its view of TV

When it was released in 1976, "Network" largely was considered a satire. Now, not so much.

Writer Paddy Chayefsky and director Sidney Lumet's searing, Oscar-winning look at the media – being presented Tuesday, Sept. 28, by Turner Classic Movies to lead off a tribute to late co-star Ned Beatty – has proven over time to be a remarkable forecast of developments in the television industry, most notably the lessening of the line between news and entertainment.

The story's main symbol of that is Howard Beale, the depressed chief anchorman of the fictional UBS network. Brilliantly portrayed by Peter Finch in a performance that was honored with a posthumous Academy Award, he declares that he's going to commit suicide on the air ... prompting his bosses to remove him, until the ratings for his newscast show an immediate and enormous spike.

Close friend and news director Max Schumacher (William Holden, also superb) resists exploiting Beale, but desperate-for-a-hit UBS entertainment chief Diana Christensen (Faye Dunaway, another Oscar winner here) inserts herself into the process and takes over the news program, supported by soulless conglomerate deputy Frank Hackett (Robert Duvall, perfect in the part).

What had been a straightforward newscast is turned into a broadcast sideshow of sorts, with Beale positioned as "The Mad Prophet of the Airwaves," backed by such added attractions as "Sybil the Soothsayer." Though the show stumbles initially, it eventually finds its groove as Beale beseeches his audience to take action against the wrongs in society ... never more so than through his legendary mantra, "I'm as mad as hell, and I'm not going to take this anymore!"

Beatrice Straight also was a "Network" Academy Award winner for her one big scene as Max's wife, painfully betrayed when he skeptically enters into an affair with the work-obsessed Diana. The aforementioned Beatty also was an Oscar nominee for the single scene he's in, but what a scene: a roughly fiveminute monologue as the network's top executive, who tries to impose on Beale an understanding of the reason for the newsman's new influence ("You're on television, dummy!")

Other movies about the TV-news business have come along since, but "Network" remains the standard they're measured against. That's unfair in a way, because without Chayfesky's famously acerbic voice and Lumer's clever staging, no other movie of this type ever could hope to be another "Network." It is that original and distinctive, even almost 50 years later.

OF 'AMERICAN RUST' ON SHOWTIME

How did you get into Del's headspace?

. There are a lot of things going on with Del. The PTSD, which is very common for people coming back from any war. You know, they call it "the VA cocktail" where they put you on these opioids to kind of dull the pain and dull the tremors and dull the anxiety and the stress He's got a history as a detective in Pittsburgh that he left, and now he's a small-town police chief. There's a relationship with Maura Tierney's character, Grace, that he pines for her but she's married/not married ... and she's got her own reasons as to why she's not jumping towards Del, and so there's a broken heart you've got to add to it. And then the murder happens and Grace's son is implicated in it

And you find that Del, like many of the people in "American Rust," it's what we all keep going back to. These are good people and they have dignity and they have dreams and hopes just like everybody else, and most of theirs were unfulfilled. And they're still good people but whether it's the economy or their circumstances around them, are pushing them into bad decisions simply to survive And then those people are complicated, they're very human and they're fun to play.

We know that Del is such an honorable man, but he has a tendency to be cop, judge and jury while under the influence of narcotics. Does this make him more interesting to portray, and what it says about the character?

Yeah. That's the contradictions. A lot of what we're going for in this is real people, their good and their bad, their strong and their weak, just like people in real life. This is less of a Hollywood-polished version of Southwest Pennsylvania and more of this cast trying to blend in and become one of them.

So, yeah, he's still got to be a cop regardless of what he's going through personally. And he tries his best. Which is a lot of what this show

'American Experience" recalls 'Citizen Hearst' in new PBS profile

In the history of American media, the name William Randolph Hearst stands tall.

With an information empire built on newspapers but also encompassing magazines, radio stations and movie production, Hearst accrued power and influence – extending to his entry into politics – that, to his dismay, inspired Orson Welles to initiate what would become one of the most classic of all films, "Citizen Kane." The Hearst Corporation continues to remain prominent in the business world, and its founder's history is recalled in PBS' new "American Experience" profile "Citizen Hearst" Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 27 and 28 (check local listings).

"Citizen Hearst" writer-director Stephen Ives claims 1941's Oscar-winning "Citizen Kane" is "most accurate" in mirroring Hearst in "that swashbuckling early period where he is literally bashing his way through conventions and reinventing what it means to be a newspaper publisher. I think David Nasaw, whose wonderful biography ("The Chief: The Life of William Randolph Hearst') this series is based on, said that at that stage in his career, Orson Welles wasn't going to play a villain.

"Hearst himself was this magnetic, winning personality," Ives adds. "I think that the darker side of that was so hyperbolic in 'Citizen Kane,' the women in Hearst's life were painted as such extreme caricatures that it is really hard to not see it as a crazy distortion." That encompasses the character of singer Susan Alexander, who reflects Hearst's extramarital romance with actress Marion Davies (which is covered in "Citizen Hearst").

Ives reasons that Hearst would be an admirer of modern communication methods: "I think he would have loved social media. That would have been fabulous for him, because it was that kind of unbridled free market of ideas (and) direct connection to the people that I think Hearst thrived on and loved. Some of the more polarizing aspects of our media culture today would be very familiar to him. And he'd probably approve of them, because I think he really did believe that his platform gave him the right to have a profound influence on what people thought and saw and heard and believed."

Steve Martin has been mildly wild and crazy about series work

Q: I don't recall Steve Martin doing a series before "Only Murders in the Building." Did he? – Jerry Heller, via e-mail

A: Yes, but you have to reach back quite a way for it – like, almost 50 years. Martin was a regular cast member on "The Sonny & Cher Comedy Hour," playing a variety of characters in skits from week to week. The same applied to his work on "The Ken Berry 'Wow' Show" around the same time; Martin also was a writer on both programs.

Those were Martin's two stints as an ongoing television performer before Hulu's "Only Murders in the Building," unless you count his recurring appearances on "Saturday Night Live." He's also done a relative handful of guest shots on series including "The Tracey Ullman Show," "The Simpsons" (in voice only, of course) and "30 Rock." He also had a role in the much-praised 1993 HBO film "And the Band Played On."

BEST NED BEATTY MOVIES

"Deliverance" (1972) Beatty made a hugely imbued newsman Howard Beale (Peter Finch) a dose memorable screen debut as one of four acquaintances whose outdoor excursion goes phenomenally wrong in director John Boorman's version of the James Dickey novel

"White Lightning" (1973) Showing his versatility early, Beatty played a sinister sheriff targeted by exconvict Gator McKlusky (Burt Reynolds), who wants to avenge his brother's death.

"Nashville" (1975) As part of director Robert Altman's fabulous ensemble cast, Beatty plays an attorney who's married to a gospel singer (Lily Tomlin) and overseeing a presidential campaign.

"All the President's Men" (1976) In a brief appearance, Beatty is terrific as a Florida official who tries to stall eager Washington Post reporter Carl Bernstein (Dustin Hoffman) from acquiring Watergate-related information, but doesn't fare very well at that

"Network" (1976) Beatty earned an Oscar nomination for his one scene - playing a corporate executive who tries to give supposedly celestially of down-to-earth truth - in director Sidney Lumet and writer Paddy Chayefsky's highly regarded satire of the television industry. Turner Classic Movies shows the film as the first attraction in a tribute to Beatty on Tuesday, Sept. 28.

"Silver Streak" (1976) An extremely amiable Beatty plays a presumed salesman who educates fellow train traveler Gene Wilder on the rules of the road ... but gets visibly "cooled down" by Jill Clayburgh.

"Gray Lady Down" (1978) Beatty makes an ideal sidekick to David Carradine, who plays the developer of a uniquely suitable vessel enlisted to help rescue the crew of a sunken submarine.

"Superman: The Movie" (1978) In a fantasy classic with a number of competing styles, Beatty succeeds with a knowingly broad portrayal of villain Lex Luthor's (Gene Hackman) bumbling henchman Otis

"Hopscotch" (1980) A terrific Beatty portrays a CIA chief who's given major headaches by a roque agent (Walter Matthau) intending to write a memoir about the famously covert agency and its operations.

"Back to School" (1986) Beatty is quite amusing as college chief "Dean Martin," who knows he shouldn't sell himself out to a wealthy new student (Rodney Dangerfield) ... but just can't resist.

"The Big Easy" (1986) Getting quite a bit to do as the story unfolds, Beatty plays the boss of a New Orleans police detective (Dennis Quaid) who's probing a mobster's murder.

"Hear My Song" (1991) In an atypical part, Beatty had one of his best screen roles (though he didn't do his own singing) as an elusive Irish tenor. "Rudy" (1993) One of Beatty's most enduringly popular roles is the father of the title character, an unlikely Notre Dame football player (portrayed by Sean Astin), in this much-loved true story.

"Toy Story 3" (2010) Before he retired from performing, Beatty did some of his last work as the voice of "Lotso" – or Lots-O'-Huggin'-Bear, who has some surprises behind his image – in this entry in the hugely successful Disney-Pixar franchise.
