The Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade returns to normal – somewhat

For this year's Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, the bands are back together.

Last time, the event altered some traditions to meet coronavirus-pandemic protocols, one being the postponement of appearances by marching bands from schools across the country. Since the parade won't be for television only for 2021, spectators will be back as will the bands as NBC broadcasts the 95th annual edition of the New York holiday procession Thursday, Nov. 25. "Today's" Savannah Guthrie, Hoda Kotb and Al Roker will have their usual roles as the three-hour special's hosts.

"We were so happy to get to do a parade, in whatever form it came," Guthrie recalls of last year's procession ... with Kotb adding. "Every time the Macy's Parade comes around, it reminds you that life is getting a little bit back to normal. The fact that we're going to have some of the crowd back just gives me that feeling of, 'We're on a roll. Let's keep it going.' And I think this is emblematic of the route on which we're hopefully heading."

The number of people permitted to line the parade route will be reduced from the norm by 10 to 20 percent. New character balloons include Grogu (or "Baby Yoda") from "The Mandalorian" and the title figure from "Ada Twist, Scientist." Among the scheduled performers are Carrie Underwood, Kristin Chenoweth (whose former show "WICKED" will be among Broadway hits represented by musical numbers), Darren Criss, Kelly Rowland, Jimmie Allen, the Muppets and the Rockettes.

For typical parade-route-walker Roker, doing the 2020 version was memorable for a number of reasons, including the fact that he'd had prostate-cancer surgery just a couple of weeks earlier.

"Once you're in the teeth of (the parade), you're not really thinking about anything else," the genial meteorologist maintains. "In planning my surgery, my goal was to have recuperated to be ready for the parade. It's a touchstone for me, so it provided a certain sense of normalcy, even though it wasn't a normal parade. It was one I really needed, and I think a lot of people needed it."

The ongoing existence of the Macy's Parade comforts Guthrie, who says it would be that way whether she was a part of it or not: "To have that continuity is really important and really meaningful. It'll mean a lot for people to be back out there participating."

Kotb believes that might pertain especially to the band members, since she reasons, "It's their moment in the spotlight. I always picture their parents with their noses glued to the TV, being like, 'That's my kid!' The fact that that's back brings an element that's beyond balloons. It's maybe the most real part of the parade."

Checking in with JEFF GOLDBLUM

It is said that dogs are empaths, that they have a sixth sense that enables them to pick up on the emotional or physical state of their human companions without any apparent communication.

Jeff Goldblum has seen that in his own dog, a Standard Poodle named Woody, whom viewers of his Disney+ series "The World According to Jeff Goldblum" got to meet in one episode of the currently streaming second season.

"He does many things," the 69-year-old Emmy- and Oscarnominated actor explains, "but the one thing he seems to do best for our purposes is his empathy. He's very special, I think, and he sits there and stares at you and listens to me. He pays attention to you. He's always your bodyguard, kind of arranges himself where the likeliest place is that some intruder may come and if anybody comes to the door makes himself known with some wild barking. But he's the sweetest dog."

In the new season, Goldblum brings his innate curiosity to bear in exploring more topics that fascinate him, which in addition to dogs include magic, monsters, dancing, fireworks and motorcycles. In his role as host, he sees himself not as an expert but as the eyes of the viewer, taking in the experiences and asking questions he thinks viewers would.

"That's kind of the approach that we took," he says. "I said, 'I don't want to pretend to be anybody's teacher. But let me just go along and be surprised by it and authentic and let's kind of capture me on camera as I'm meeting them for real and just let my curiosity kind of roam and guide the exchange.' And that's what we did. I got a big kick out of it. I like to improvise and this is a variation of that."

tasty tv BY GEORGE DICKIE 'The Katie Button Project' explores food and how it gets to market

Katie Button has a deep and abiding appreciation for where food comes from and trailer, she's seen on a commercial fishing how it is produced, which is what drove her to make a food/adventure series upcoming on discovery+.

In the currently streaming "The Katie Button Project," the award-winning chef and restaurateur traces how popular ingredients such as fish, beef, cheese and apples make it to market, from the moment they're harvested through the production process. She also shares her knowledge of cooking techniques like searing or seasoning in the hopes of inspiring others to be more adventurous, curious and creative in the

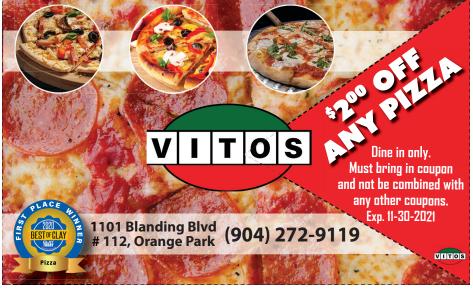

"My favorite thing about cooking," the Asheville, N.C.-based Button explains, "is cooking something that I don't usually cook, cooking something new because it's an experience. ... You know, if it's cooking rice a different way or trying a different variety or cooking with apples instead of just thinking of them for dessert or as a snack, or playing around with honey and different varieties, I just want to inspire people not only to learn about the passion behind the people producing food in this country because that is an extremely interesting and important part – but the takeaway is jump in your kitchen and try it out."

And try it out she does. In the show's vessel off the coast of South Carolina fishing for snowy grouper and golden tilefish. This was no charter boat with many of the comforts of home but a trip in Spartan conditions to the continental shelf 10 hours out in the Atlantic.

After hauling in her catch by rod and reel - "they do a catch-and-reel system because it's super sustainable," Button notes she then prepared a traditional Spanish fisherman's stew on board.

"My husband's from Spain and I lived and worked in restaurants in Spain and also worked for (chef) José Andrés here in the U.S. - that's where I met my husband," she says. "And so I made this ... stew made with fresh fish that you catch and some fish stock. And then I added to it - like traditionally you add to it fish liver, which is not something which you can usually get your hands on but since we were on this boat gutting the fish ... I was actually able to do that. It was so neat. (It was) something I never had the opportunity to do to make it in that authentic method using those ingredients. It only happens on a fishing

Kamara shoulders the offensive load in New Orleans

Alvin Kamara has always been one of the better runners in the NFL and now he has a major milestone to prove it.

With his 51 yards rushing and 128 yards receiving in his New Orleans Saints' 13-10 victory over the Seattle Seahawks in Week 7, the fifth year man out of Tennessee became the fastest to 3,000 yards rushing and 3,000 yards receiving over his career, making it in his 66th game, four faster than the previous record holder, Roger Craig. That his efforts were the lone highlight in an otherwise lethargic offensive performance by the Saints that day only underscored his value to the team.

Over his career, he's been the picture of consistency, never running up 1,000-yard rushing seasons (although he's on pace to record his first this year) or gaudy receiving numbers but always being identified by opponents as the guy to stop, double-teaming if necessary.

His teammates also think highly of him, especially quarterback Jameis Winston, who in Kamara has found his favorite target in his first year with the Saints.

"(Kamara) is one of the most dominant players in this league," he said in a press conference after Kamara's record-setting performance against Seattle, "so it's always exciting when you put the ball in his hands and watch the things that he does."

Kamara and the Saints can be seen in action at home against the Buffalo Bills Thursday, Nov. 25, in prime time on NBC, in the late game of the NFL's traditional Thanksgiving Day tripleheader.

OF 'AN UNEXPECTED CHRISTMAS'

ON HALLMARK CHANNEL AND W NETWORK

As "An Unexpected Christmas" – about a brokenup couple pretending they're still together – adds another title to the ever-growing list of holiday movies you've made, what was the appeal for you of this one?

It has lots of fun comedy and some romantic moments. It was a really great script, and Tyler (Hynes, Lenz's leading man in the film) is so smart and makes such good, interesting choices, I would love to work with him again. He's challenging in a really good way. He understands cameras and lighting and the scene as a whole, and I really enjoyed working with him a lot.

Since your holiday movies have become annual events for many viewers, what do you like about continuing to make them?

I love it when people come up to me and say they recognize me from them, because it tells me that they're in a place where they want to feel good, and that's what these movies do for people. To be able to be a part of that and give back to people who are out there working hard every day, and just want to come home and want something to make them feel warm and fuzzy, it's a wonderful space to be in.

What are your own Christmas plans this year?

I'm such a last-minute planner! Part of being in this business is that every time I make a plan, it must be changed. Something always pops up, so I wait until the last minute more often than not, unless it has to do with my daughter and her schedule.

Are you pleased with the way "Drama Queens," your podcast with fellow "One Tree Hill" alums Hilarie Burton Morgan and Sophia Bush, has taken off?

It's just so fun to be able to spread my wings a little bit. I have so many ideas, it's really fun to be able to share my creativity, so I'm grateful that "Drama Queens" has gotten such a great reception.

movie review

BY JAY BOBBIN

Eddie Murphy is an arresting 'Beverly Hills Cop'

An immediate breakout talent on "Saturday Night Live," Eddie Murphy teamed with Nick Nolte and Dan Aykroyd for early movie successes, but "Beverly Hills Cop" rested squarely on his shoulders.

The 1984 action-comedy – which Cinemax shows along with the two sequels as a Thanksgiving feast Thursday, Nov. 25 - was an enormous hit that left no doubt that Murphy had arrived on the big screen. Envisioned earlier as a project for such performers as Mickey Rourke and Sylvester Stallone, the final version wisely left plenty of room for Murphy's brand of improvisational humor. And even if it wasn't really improvised, it sure felt that way, playing right into the Murphy style.

The actor-comedian plays fast-talking Detroit police detective Axel Foley, who goes AWOL to California to get to the bottom of a longtime friend's murder. He's very clearly a fish out of water, and his manner of playing by his own rules greatly worries the Beverly Hills lieutenant (Ronny Cox) and police partners (Judge Reinhold, John Ashton) who end up keeping an eye on Foley as he continually rocks the figurative boat.

Fortunately, the visitor has another friend (Lisa Eilbacher) who's on the West Coast, but her employer is a gallery owner (Steven Berkoff) who may have something to do with the death in question. Jonathan Banks, more recently known for "Breaking Bad" and "Better Call Saul," makes his presence known with few words as the possible

In fact, though it's a star vehicle for Murphy, "Beverly Hills Cop" is very generous in giving supporting players their moments under the direction of Martin Brest ("Midnight Run," "Scent of a Woman"). Another great example of that is Bronson Pinchot, priceless in his moments as forked-tongue gallery worker Serge, who alternately confounds and amuses Foley.

Another strength of "Beverly Hills Cop" is its hitdriven soundtrack led by Glenn Frey's theme song "The Heat Is On." The Pointer Sisters had a huge success with "Neutron Dance," and composer Harold Faltermeyer even scored on the charts with his "Axel F" instrumental.

While Murphy hasn't blazed as brightly at the box office in a while, there's been talk for some time of his returning in a "Beverly Hills Cop 4," which currently is set up as a direct-to-streaming Netflix project. Whether or not that ultimately comes to be, he'll always be able to count the original film as one of the top victories in his career ... and it hasn't lost any of its sizable entertainment value over the better part of 40 years.

Tamera Mowry-Housley

OF 'TABLE WARS' ON HGTV AND DISCOVERY+

Are you a tablescaper?

Yes (laughs), I am and what's crazy is I didn't know the term before and think I'm forever learning. I always loved putting parties together, like Halloween parties we did. Thanksgiving, we always oscillate (on kitchen duties) and I was always into setting the table. So I always like to add candles or napkins, you know, the right silverware. So yes, that's why this job was so exciting for me. I loved it.

Do you pick up ideas from the show for your own tablescapes?

Yes, I do. And of course, their tablescaping was on a whole 'nother level (laughs). I don't know if I'm going to like go to a junkyard and find – but I love the idea of having different color cups, different designs, having a theme for a dinner and starting from there. I love it. I love seeing people's faces when they see what you've done and then on top of that being able to enjoy a great meal in that setting.

How did you like working with Martha Stewart?

(Laughs) Well, the blessing was, I have to say – they were cautious that I was going to be intimidated. They were like, "Make sure you approach Martha a certain way." And once I saw her, it's like we knew each other for years and that's what she said. And she would always say, "You're a great host, Tamera. You are an excellent host." And I think she respected the fact that, one, I respected her legendaryness, and two, I was myself. Martha I'm sure has seen many different types of people approach her and one thing that I have learned, if you're going to approach her just be yourself.

Nat Geo Wild gives thanks for veterinarians with 'Vetsgiving'

At a time when the pandemic has hampered our ability to work, travel and even relate to one another, the importance of the humananimal connection to our overall well-being has never been more apparent. And in the week of Thanksgiving, Nat Geo Wild lauds the professionals who keep our furry friends healthy with its annual "Vetsgiving" celebration.

Airing Monday through Sunday, Nov. 22-28, each night of the event offers up a four-hour block of the veterinarian series "Heartland Docs, DVM," "Critter Fixers: Country Vets," "Hatcher Family Dairy," "The Incredible Dr. Pol," "Dr. Oakley, Yukon Vet" and "Vets on the Beach," as well as a sneak peek at the new series "Pop Goes the Vet With Dr. Joya."

That series, which airs Thursday, Nov. 25, in advance of its official 2022 premiere, follows Kentucky-based veterinary dermatologist Dr. Joya Griffin as she and her protege Dr. Jeff treat everything from hair loss and earwax to lumps and oozing cysts. It's a little-known specialty that Griffin herself wasn't aware of until she had a dog with a persistent skin problem.

"One thing I hear over and over again," Griffin explains, "is that my clients come to me, my pet moms and dads, and they say, 'I didn't even know a dermatologist existed.' And so part of me was wanting to tell that story, that we are out there and that 50 percent of the cases that a general practitioner will see have to do with the ears and the skin. And when they get a little complicated, I'm here to help and solve those major skin and ear issues. And so we're sometimes not known about, and I'm happy to tell our story."

According to Janet Van Vissering, senior vice president of development and production for National Geographic Channels, an obscure discipline such as Griffin's is exactly the type of content the broadcaster is looking to spotlight.

'The Sound of Music' will be heard again soon

Q: Will "The Sound of Music" be on again this holiday season? – Sherry Evans, Bexley, Ohio

A: It will, indeed. One of the very few movies that still get an annual broadcast-network telecast ("It's a Wonderful Life" and "The Ten Commandments" being other examples), the Julie Andrews-starring 1965 Rodgers & Hammerstein musical will have its yearly ABC airing all night Sunday, Dec. 19. It's likely to be a bittersweet occasion for true devotees, since it will be the film's first television presentation since the death of co-star Christopher Plummer (alias the picture's Captain von Trapp) last February.
