BCWA approves backup supply without EP's involvement

Water rates to increase by an average of 4.2 percent per year for the next decade

BY PATRICK LUCE
pluce@eastbaynewspapers.com

After years of failed negotiations with the city of East Providence over a backup water supply to the East Bay, the Bristol County Water Authority is moving forward with plans to build a pipeline through EP, with or without that city's cooperation.

The project will be funded by sharp rate increases charged to BCWA customers over the next decade.

The BCWA Board of Directors voted unanimously April 20 to install a 24-inch pipeline from the Pawtucket city line to the BCWA connector in East Providence, where the water could then be redistributed throughout Bristol, Warren and Barrington. The pipeline will serve as the backup supply the water authority and the three towns it services have been seeking for years.

The authority's primary source of water comes from Providence Water and flows through a pipe beneath the Providence River to the same BCWA connector on Pawtucket Avenue in East Providence. The pipeline, which is protected by a tunnel under the river, was installed in 1998 and is "in relatively good shape," according to BCWA Executive Director Pamela Marchand. Still, a backup is badly needed, she said.

"The whole issue is you never know what can happen to the water supply," Ms. Marchand said. "We need an alternative; another backup in case something happens."

The backup pipeline would be able to supply four million gallons of water a day, an adequate amount for the three towns," Ms. Marchand said. The only other option should the Providence supply ever be disrupted would be for the BCWA to turn to its 1908 processing plant, which draws water from Massachusetts. That old system could not supply potable water, however, unless production is cut to less than 1 million gallons a day, short of the county's needs, she said.

"It would need to be boiled unless we limit the supply" to treat it, Ms. Marchand said. "We would still need another source."

Fifth-grade Guiteras student leads group advocating for change in school lunch program

BY PATRICK LUCE

No one sitting in an elementary school cafeteria would mistake it for a four-star restaurant. But while gourmet meals are certainly not on the menu, students should be able to expect at least a moderately tasty lunch that not only provides the necessary nutrition, but is also something kids want to eat.

One fifth-grade student at Guiteras Elementary School didn't feel the lunch offerings at her school were meeting her and her classmates' expectations, so she decided to do something about it, and earned an audience with school lunch executives to state her case.

Lindsie Medeiros, a 10-year-old from Bristol, said she had grown frustrated with what she described as inadequate lunch offerings from Chartwells, the Bristol-based company that provides daily school lunches to the Bristol Warren Regional School District and others around the state. Ms. Medeiros described cardboard-like pizza with rubbery cheese, and unappetizing, gray hamburger patties and chicken nuggets.

"A lot of kids complain about the food. They say it doesn't taste very well," Ms. Medeiros said. "I'd say the food tastes like trash, but I don't know what trash tastes like."

The complaints go beyond taste and appearance. Ms. Medeiros said the students have been served expired milk and rotten apples, and often find it difficult to exchange the expired products for new ones. The food does not have a fresh taste or appearance, she said, and is trucked in from elsewhere instead of being cooked at the school. Also, there is a general lack of choice in the cafeteria, she said. Elementary students are given three choices each day, two of which only change weekly. Middle and high school students have a much wider selection at lunch each day.

"As younger, elementary students, we think we should have more choices and more nutrition," Ms. Medeiros said. "Their website says they cook the food local, but we see boxes with Chartwells on them coming from trucks. Food comes in boxes and they just warm it up. Chartwells is being misleading, I guess. I always complain to my parents, and they were like, 'If you don't like it, do some-

Council prohibits medical marijuana cultivation centers

Bristol Town Council also approves new medical clinic, holds doggy daycare license

BY BRITNEY DIXON
PATRICK LUCE

As demand for medical marijuana continues to skyrocket, the state Department of Business Regulation is encouraging towns throughout Rhode Island to allow cultivation centers that can produce more medicine to satisfy demand.

Such large-scale growing facilities won't be going on in Bristol any time soon after the Town Council voted last Wednesday to ban the cultivation centers in town.

The council voted 4-1 to ban the cultivation centers, with Councilman Tim Sweeney the lone vote opposing the move. For most council members, their votes against the cultivation centers is not reflective of a moral opposition to cannabis, but is rather based in a practical business concern, they indicated.

"What this ordinance would facilitate and allow is cultivation centers to occupy manufacturing spaces," Councilman Andy Tyska said. "There's no doubt that the cultivation centers can pay a premium for these spaces. As a result, small businesses, new businesses, which employ our neighbors, our family members, will be squeezed out because of rising rents. For our town, it's important we preserve our manufacturing and light industrial spaces."

Indeed, the state is encouraging medical marijuana growers to take advantage of, available factories and industrial spaces to increase supply in a state with more than 40,000 medical marijuana card applications, according to Norman Birebaum, from the DBR.

"Existing grow facilities cannot provide enough to meet the demand for medical marijuana," Mr. Birebaum told the council. "The overwhelming majority of supply is coming from home grows, not licensed facilities. In trying to make sure that people have a variety of products to treat their medical condition, we are really encouraging people to license these facilities."

The large operations will make it easier for the DBR to oversee the medical marijuana industry, Mr. Birebaum said, noting the state does not have the same controls and oversight over home grow operations. With cultivation centers, DBR representatives have 24-hour control over real-time surveillance systems, and they conduct regular inspections. The state ensures the centers comply with all local zoning laws, mitigate all odors from the operation, install discreet signage, and hire adequate security to protect the facility.

"We have a tremendous level of oversight over these facilities so it's done safely and responsibly," Mr. Birebaum said. "RI has one of the highest capacity of usage in the country — a lot is distributed on the black market. Demand is there. People are using it to treat medical conditions. We want people to be able to treat their conditions without having to rely on the black market or grow it themselves."

Town Administrator Steven Contente encouraged the council to deny the prohibition on cultivation centers. Harkening back to his days as a Bristol Police Officer, Mr. Contente relayed to the council stories of home invasions and other crimes spurred by the prevalence of home grows around town. A cultivation center is a better option, he said, and urged the council to hold the vote for further study.

"I don't think we want to prohibit regulated grows. There is some merit to it," Mr. Contente said. "There are grows all over town. This is a way to try and eliminate that."

Most council members, however, hesitated to allow a full-scale grow operation in Bristol until there's some evidence of how they work in other towns.

"There are a lot of things I think Bristol should be first in. In this case, I'd like to see how it works elsewhere," Council Chairman Nathan Calouro said. "I don't want to be the first in on this one."

Pet overcrowding

In other business Wednesday, the council considered a license extension for a pet daycare that has reportedly not met the requirements of the existing permit, despite the owner's efforts.

Donna Olivo, owner of All Paws Inn — a dog day care — experienced an outbreak of parvo in her kennel, and reportedly had dozens more dogs on site than she is permitted for. Ms. Olivo confirmed the issues, but said the dogs belonged to her friend and she was simply taking them in for the night. When she realized that the dogs did not look well, she took them to the vet, finding they had parvo.

"I knew they didn't look good, but I kept them in contained areas," Ms. Olivo said. "I thought I was being good and helping the community."

Animal Control Officer Dyanne Gibree said Ms. Olivo had 51 dogs on her property while her license — which expired on May 1 — only allows for 10 at a time. Ms. Olivo acknowledged having 51 dogs registered under her name, but said they were not all on her property at that time.

Ms. Olivo was also confronted about odors on the property and told her floors and other aspects of the property needed to be renovated. "At this time, Olivo was also made aware of the changes that were not addressed to her when she last renewed her license," Ms. Gibree said.

"I did what they asked," Ms. Olivo said. "I had dogs elevated, which was against the law, so I don't do that anymore."

Regardless, Ms. Gibree indicated she is not pleased with the kennel. "I'm torn. Do you give someone a license who is not in compliance with the regulations or do you stop them from making a living?" Ms. Gibree said.

Without the state's approval, there was nothing the council could do with the local license, so the council continued the issue to the May 19 meeting.

New medical clinic

Lifetime Bristonian Dr. Paul Agatiello, a physician for 35 years, plans to open a free medical advice clinic for Bristol residents over 18 years old. The clinic would allow residents to speak to him about questions they have about a diagnosis, pills, Obamacare, etc.

Dr. Agatiello reminded the council that this would not be a typical doctor visit. He would not be ordering lab tests or anything similar and it would not be a replacement for their primary physician.

"I don't need anything. I don't want anything," Dr. Agatiello said. "I'm not asking for much from the town, just your blessing."

Dr. Agatiello is working with an attorney to minimize his and the town's liability. There are no major legal issues and it is a complete volunteer effort, he said.

OLMC celebrates 100 years as a parish

Current and former pastors of the church lead centennial Mass

BY MANUEL C. "MANNY" CORREIRA
Special to the Phoenix

It was a historic day at Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Church, literally. The church celebrated its own history this weekend, marking an impressive milestone.

Starting Sunday morning with a 100th Anniversary Celebration Mass, celebrated by Providence Bishop the Most. Rev. Thomas J. Tobin, and ending with a gala dinner-dance at White's of Westport, parishioners and guests shared in the joy of a parish whose deep-rooted and well-documented faith has continued to grow throughout its century of existence.

Principal concelebrants at the Mass included the Rev. James J. Verdelotti, former pastor at OLMC, current pastor, the Rev. Henry P. Zinno Jr., the Rev. Jonathan DeFelice, the Rev. James F. Quigley and the Rev. Jeremy J. Rodrigues.

Adding to the depth and enjoyment of the Mass was the Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Parish Choir, under the direction of Michael Garrepy. Also featured were Cantor Denise Dufour, flutists Elise Augustine and Maximillian St. George, trumpeters Jennifer Collins and Carl Gerhard, Brandi Poirier on horn, trombonists Jonathan Collard and Nic Dion, and timpanist Michael Iadevaia.

During the afternoon, more than 300 people gathered at White's of Westport, where they enjoyed a sumptuous dinner and dancing to the music of "Triad."

The 100th year celebration program was under the direction of William Delmage. The invocation was given by former assistant pastor Rev. Giacomo Capoverdi, and the toast was given by Father DeFelice.

Longtime parishioner Francis Vaccaro made the town of Bristol introduction, at which time, Town Administrator Steven Contente presented a citation to Father

Zinno officially proclaiming April 30, 2017 as "Our Lady of Mount Carmel Day."

Another highlight of the program was a video produced by parishioner Christine O'Connor depicting some of the church's historic highlights. The program closed with comments and Benediction by Father Zinno.

"To see a faith generated 100 years ago thriving a century later, and now with such enthusiasm and dedication of our parishioners, handing on that same faith to the next generation, is tremendous," Father Zinno said. "You only celebrate your first centennial once, so you have to celebrate in a big way. Our ancestors of Italian heritage came to this country with nothing but their faith, and it is the richness and legacy of this faith that we celebrate today."

Council approves $54.3 million Bristol budget

The property tax rate will increase by about 1 percent

BY PATRICK LUCE
pluce@eastbaynewspapers.com

Bristol property taxes will rise by about 1 percent after the Bristol Town Council approved Town Administrator Steven Contente's fiscal 2018 budget last Wednesday night.

The town's spending plan will increase by about $700,000 — or 1.29 percent — over fiscal 2017, for a total of $54.3 million. That will result in a 20-cent increase in the property tax rate to $14.97 per thousand dollars of taxable value. The average $300,000 home in Bristol would carry an annual tax bill of $4,491.

"That is a very conservative increase. I want to show we are being very fiscally responsible," Mr. Contente has said. "I listened very carefully to the need to hold the line on our tax rate. I know where we can cut and still maintain public safety, our infrastructure and a moderate increase in spending to education at an affordable amount to our homeowners."

Separate from the tax rate is the enterprise sewer fund, which would increase with the next budget by $18.73 per house per year to pay for the debt service on past improvements to the sewer system. The average Bristol taxpayer would pay a total of about $78 more per year under the proposed plan.

Most departments will see a moderate rise of 1 to 2 percent, mostly to pay for a 1 percent salary increase for non-union town employees. A handful of departments — including Police, Fire, Board of Canvassers, Community Development and human resources — will get less than last year. The Police Department will see the largest spending cut — more than 3 percent — owing to the fact that the force is fully staffed, saving on police academy costs, and its fleet of vehicles is in good shape.

Another significant cut comes from human resource grants — disbursements the town makes to area non-profits and charities. Mr. Contente's proposal imposes a 30 percent cut in the grants across the board, saving the town about $30,000. The biggest cuts would be to the East Bay Center and Explore Bristol, both of which would see their $25,000 grants cut to $17,500.

The biggest increase in the proposed budget is in fixed costs — expenses like pension benefits and interest on past loans — which will rise by nearly $200,000 (3.2 percent). Other significant increases include Public Works ($88,748, or 2.8 percent) to pay for increased tipping fees at the state landfill, and the Finance Department ($86,584 or 14.9 percent) to begin preparing for the upcoming property revaluation.

AG issues Medicare fraud alert

A scammer claiming to be from "Healthsource" is reportedly preying on senior citizens

After receiving multiple reports of a scammer preying on senior citizens in Rhode Island, Attorney General Peter Kilmartin has issued a statewide Medicare fraud alert.

Medicare patients have reportedly been receiving phone calls from someone claiming to be a representative of "HealthSource" requesting personal information including patients' Medicare numbers. The attorney general's office is warning Rhode Islanders that these phone calls are a scam and to remind consumers not to provide Medicare ID information to anyone over the telephone.

A man has called Medicare enrollees from a number with a 401 area code claiming to represent HealthSource RI. The agency never contacts customers via telephone to ask for such information, according to the attorney general.

"Medicare scams and fraud cost billions every year. Access to a person's Medicare ID number is akin to printing money," Mr. Kilmartin said in a release. "With that number, individuals can set up fake businesses to bill Medicare for health-related items that are never provided to the Medicare subscriber. Keeping your Medicare number safe and secure is as critically important as it is to keep your social security number and financial information safe and secure."

The attorney general's office advises anyone receiving such a call to immediately hang up. If someone leaves a voicemail claiming to be from HealthSource, don't call the phone number they leave on the message.

Other tips the Attorney General offers include:

- Never give out your Medicare ID number to anyone on the telephone.
- Check you Medicare statements regularly and report suspicious services or products to the Medicare Office of the Inspector General, 800-447-8477.
- Alert the Attorney General's Consumer Protection Unit so they can share the information with others. They can be reached by calling 401-274-4400.

Marijuana ban is good — for now

The Bristol Town Council's vote to ban marijuana cultivation centers from operating within the town is a smart, prudent tactic. Without a law on the books, at any time the town could have faced an application for which it was ill-prepared.

The marijuana-growing ban at least prevents that from happening.

However, the town should remain open-minded to the idea of allowing a grow center in the future. This is not a pro-pot stance; it's a pro-business stance.

A properly-licensed, regulated, monitored, discreet and professionally-managed business could operate safely within the town limits, without creating a nuisance or fueling a crime wave in town — while paying property and other commercial taxes that support the town's tax base and its services.

The town's industrial corridor, between Gooding Avenue and Tupelo Street, is not booming as robustly as it once did. There are notable vacant properties, and new construction permits are rare.

Industry and manufacturing have always been a bedrock for the economy and commerce in this community, and hopefully they will be for generations to come. The cultivation of marijuana for "legal" (so long as the laws allow) distribution is a legitimate, regulated industry that, excuse the pun, is quickly growing.

As a general philosophy, the town should be reluctant to "ban" any industry.

There are obvious exceptions, such as strip clubs, casinos or gun shops. All can create safety hazards, unwelcome behaviors and associated crimes.

We don't see marijuana cultivation centers the same way.

At the same time, we are not encouraging further legalization of marijuana or expansion of its distribution, and we understand and respect those who warn about the damages it can inflict on our society.

We only encourage town leaders to keep an open mind, and to welcome more discussion and analysis of this issue. Industries rise and fall all the time; with its industrial spaces and resources, Bristol is well-positioned to welcome them. One can only imagine the vitriol a certain few would have spewed the council members' way if they had passed a piece of legislation with teeth.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Council shows support for needed immigration reform

To the editor:

I would like to commend the Town Council for taking a small step forward with its resolution to protect immigrants in Bristol. The resolution is, "A commitment to equal, respectful, and fair treatment of all people regardless of their immigration, ethnic or religious status, and a commitment to remain a welcoming community."

I believe that Tony Avila's April 27 letter to the editor represents a general lack of understanding of the immigration issue.

1. We need people to work in the United States, and do not allow them to come legally in the numbers that we need them. Tom Roach, a Seattle immigration lawyer stated we needed 500,000 workers a year in low-skilled jobs. We only gave out 5,000 visas in that category.

For those who don't believe in statistics, talk to employers. The biggest challenge is finding good employees. I work in the plumbing and heating industry; we are not getting people into the trade. Electric Boat can't find welders. Manufacturers on Broadcommon Road can't fill positions. Fruit production is down 9.5 percent in the U.S., because the labor necessary to handle fruit is not available. There is a labor shortage in this country. Meanwhile, politicians are attacking the people that we need to fill our jobs.

2. The effort to create Trust Acts in states, cities and towns recognizes the failure of comprehensive immigration reform, which will never happen until politicians are honest about our immigration quotas versus our labor needs. Trust Acts are not designed to protect serious criminals. They are intended to prevent haphazard and indiscriminate deportation of non-criminal, hard-working people, and the destruction of families.

3. An administrative detainer request issued by ICE is simply a request. In the case of a serious crime, ICE can get a warrant signed by a judge. This protects people from being arrested and detained without probable cause. The 14th Amendment clearly states that this protection applies to everyone within the borders of the United States, regardless of citizenship status.

4. It is well documented that immigrants commit crimes at much lower rates than U.S. citizens. They came here to escape crime and violence, as well as oppression and poverty. The attempt to stereotype undocumented people as criminals is part of an effort to use them as scapegoats. All demographic groups contain criminals, and pointing to a very small group of people who have committed serious crimes to cast a shadow over everyone else is nothing but the worst example of political propaganda.

5. Undocumented immigrants make up less than 1 percent of all RI residents using benefits. Everyone who lives in this country uses services. Immigrants want to send their kids to school, like everyone else. Undocumented workers pay taxes. Everyone who works pays taxes. On the books, taxes are deducted, and they probably will not seek a refund. Off the books, employers cannot deduct the expense, and will pay taxes at a higher rate on their profit.

6. Police departments do not want to be deputized as federal immigration agents. Creating distrust and fear in the community they are policing makes fighting real crime more difficult. The vast majority of police chiefs support at least the intent of the Trust Acts.

7. Most — 75% — of Americans support a path to citizenship for undocumented immigrants. In spite of this, Congress has blocked efforts toward immigration reform. Indiscriminate deportations of people stopped for traffic violations, or witnesses or victims of crime, only serve the purpose of political gain and cruelty.

I'm starting something called the Truth in Immigration Project (TIP) to research and document U.S. past, present and future labor needs, and our immigration policies. The goal is to write something, clearly understandable to the average person, to dispel the myths and counter the attacks on hard-working people in this country. Anyone interested can call me at 401-253-6741.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Rhode Island needs single-payer healthcare

To the editor:

March 31 was the 18th anniversary of my combined kidney-pancreas transplant. It also signified the date when I had lived half of my life with my amazing "replacement parts."

I went to dinner with friends and celebrated quietly, thankful for the normalcy of my life, which at one time was medical chaos. About a year before my transplant, my parent's HMO denied coverage because the insurance company deemed a pancreas transplant "experimental." With no premium caps, the cost for my insurance had been going up monthly and now the medical procedure my doctors said I needed to survive had been denied.

I write this letter and share my story to support the single-payer insurance system. A recent New Kaiser Foundation/New York Times (2016) survey found that 63 percent of those with medical issues report using all or most of their savings and one in five working-age Americans with health insurance report having problems paying their medical bills. Another article from 2013 estimated that over half of personal bankruptcies were medical cost-related and of these, over 70 percent had health insurance at the time of their bankruptcy (NerdWallet, 2013).

As a transplant survivor, my medical future is still fragile; much depends on the industry that once denied my life-saving surgery. The ACA is an improvement. While there are clear issues, statistics show lives are being saved, but it could and should be better.

It disgusts me when healthcare is used as a political pawn. The people who lose in that game are us — all of us. Americans deserve healthcare as a right, not a privilege.

On May 2, Rhode Island is having a hearing on bringing single-payer to our state, which is only the beginning. I encourage you to look at singlepayerri.org, ask questions as I did, and if you are inclined, call our representatives to voice support for bills S-154 and H-5069.

On the loss of a 'true Bristolian'

To the editor:

The recent passing of Hector Massa reflects the loss of a true Bristolian in every sense of the word.

We first met in 1968 and I had the wonderful opportunity to work for him at both Camp Hess and at the Y.M.C.A. In my introduction as 4th of July Chief Marshal in 2014, Hector was one of the people I credited with influencing my life in so many ways.

We remained friends all these years.

At Camp Hess, he would always greet the campers and staff with, "Good morning you lucky people!"

How lucky we, and the town of Bristol, were for this man who affected both in so many positive ways.

Rep. Kenneth Marshall served me well

To the editor:

Especially in today's political climate, it is not often that we see the words "Positive" and "Politics" put together in the same sentence to describe someone's personal experience, as an average constituent, with the often unfamiliar territory of the political world. However, I am extremely pleased to express, with great pride, that Representative Kenneth A. Marshall (D) of Bristol and Warren – District 68 is genuinely dedicated to those he represents.

As constituents, we are urged to reach out and contact those we elect to address our concerns or to clarify proposed legislation. For myself, this was an unfamiliar process that I undertook with uncertain expectations. My initial expectation was simply to have my e-mail acknowledged along with the hope of receiving a reply from my elected Representative. This expectation was met with a prompt reply and willingness to participate in a discussion. Representative Marshall was extremely accommodating to arrange his schedule and make himself available for discussion.

Quite simply, it was extremely reassuring to know that Representative Marshall is a true gentleman and professional, willing to extend himself to those he represents. He is available and willing to be of assistance to address your concerns and provide his attention to what matters to you.

Overall, what I imagined to be a difficult process to navigate was instead an informative and pleasurable experience. Representative Marshall's exceptional courtesy and work ethic is to be admired and respected.

I am extremely grateful for the opportunity to communicate with Representative Marshall and proud to know that he represents my hometown district.

Thank you for your service, time and attention.

SPEAK-OUT

Chauvinistic HOF induction, criminal protection

I'm calling about the RI Heritage Hall of Fame inductees announced. Is this a tribute to the people in Rhode Island? I see first of all and foremost that ONLY MEN ARE LISTED, OK? Only men. You've got nun men. Then two of them are political, democratic government workers, and longevity was their answer. Is that what they're famous for? The longest serving judge? And Paolino, the former mayor of Providence? There's a lot of people out there in Bristol, unsung heroes, women, men, that are not political hacks or democratic. I mean, who's paying for this. You cannot tell me the town of Bristol is going to. They're all white, they're all men. I'm sure they have their good qualities, but I'm a female and I notice that there are no females, and you should not be endorsing political candidates. This is a joke.

I'm calling about the DUNKIN' DONUTS that wants to go in next to the fire station. Does that sound insane, putting a Dunkin' Donuts next to a fire station when you can't even get out of Gooding Avenue? And number 2, in your articles, please include that the land they're giving this guy is town land. Since when does the town of Bristol give free land to business owners?

I'm just reading the article in Speak-Out and I agree with the person who was talking about the Fourth of July and how the town is way out of control, and the police should be doing more about it because it's illegal to be SHOOTING UP FIREWORKS over people's roofs and yards.

I was shocked to read the Town Council unanimously passed a resolution that would HELP ILLEGAL ALIENS. Please print who was responsible for such craziness. I will not vote for any of those Town Council members in the next election again.

The nerve of those progressives on the Town Council who think they HAVE THE RIGHT TO CHANGE TOWN POLICY. To protect illegal immigrants, who just by being here are breaking the law and have absolutely no rights in our country. Bristol politicians who wish to aid criminals should at the very least be put out of office.

RWU athletic director takes new position at university

Dave Kemmy will step down May 8 after more than 30 years in sports

BY MANUEL C. "MANNY" CORREIRA
Special to the Phoenix

Dave Kemmy (far right), who is stepping down next week as athletic director at Roger Williams University, is seen with two old friends and former Roger Williams University athletic directors, Ray Cordeiro (center), and the late Hector Massa.

The popular and high profile director of athletics, intramurals and recreation at Roger Williams University will be stepping down from his current position to take on another role at the university.

Dave Kemmy will become director of conferences at the university starting May 15, according to an official Roger Williams announcement. He will also be assisting in the area of alumni relations within the Division of Advancement.

Mr. Kemmy, a native Bristolian, has served as director of Athletics, Intramurals, and Recreation since the 2011-12 academic year. Previously, he served as acting athletic director for two years.

In a recent interview, Mr. Kemmy said he was excited at the prospect of moving in a new direction.

"After 33 years in college athletics, including 27 at Roger Williams University, it is time for a new challenge," he said. "I have had the privilege of working with some outstanding colleagues in athletics at RWU, and I will surely miss working them. There are some passionate and incredible people here who do their best for our students. We have achieved some incredible things together, and I wish them the best of luck going forward."

John King, vice president for Student Life, said Mr. Kemmy has been an invaluable asset to the university.

"Almost every student-athlete since 2011 has experienced the omnipresence of Dave Kemmy," he said. "As athletic director, his dedication, constant presence and unwavering support for RWU athletics has enabled the program to reach new heights, including national championships and NCAA Tournament success. Most importantly, under his leadership, RWU student-athletes have excelled academically, through community service, and are active alumni supporters."

During his tenure as athletic director, Mr. Kemmy oversaw numerous achievements for the Roger Williams University Athletic Department, including the construction of a new turf field in 2011, the addition of two new varsity sports (field hockey and women's rugby), and the reinstatement of one discontinued varsity program (men's golf).

Under Mr. Kemmy's guidance, Hawk teams have won championships and tournament titles, including the sailing team winning its first-ever ICSA Team Racing national championship in 2011, and David Welch claiming RWU's first NCAA national championship in wrestling.

Outside the field of competition, Roger Williams University teams have been praised for their success. The Athletic Dept. has conducted more than 25,000 hours of community service under Mr. Kemmy and has had more than 450 student-athletes named to the CCC All-Academic team, and 24 student-athletes earn Academic All-America honors.

In March 2011, Mr. Kemmy was inducted into the National Wrestling Coaches Association Hall of Fame. He is a member of the Rhode Island Wrestling Hall of Fame and New England Wrestling Association Hall of Fame. Mr. Kemmy ended his 18-year career as head coach of the Hawks' wrestling team in 2012, after claiming five Pilgrim League Championships, in addition to winning the 2007 New England Dual Meet Championship.

In 2012, Mr. Kemmy was inducted into the Roger Williams University Athletic Hall of Fame.

"I have always been a student-centered person and I will surely miss the relationships I have developed with our student-athletes," Mr. Kemmy said. "Watching them grow and develop as young women and men, graduate and go off into the working world, where many of them have been very successful, is a rewarding experience. I am fortunate that I will remain a Hawk and look forward to continuing to support the efforts of the University in a different role."

Toronto's tree professor meets with students

Professor Elwood Pricklethorn visits elementary schools across the district

BY TED HAYES

thayes@eastbaynewspapers.com

he said he'd taken two shots of it to get going that morning. He showed the kids a partially deflated inflatable Earth, asking if students knew "Tree PR," and the gags continued throughout the talk.

But along the way, the students learned that trees help keep urban areas cool, are the source of a large percentage of the consumer drugs on the market today, and create the oxygen we all breathe.

"I love trees," he told them.

Students in Bristol Warren's elementary schools had a strange visitor last week — none other than Professor Elwood Pricklethorn.

Pricklethorn, a certified arborist and educator from Toronto, Canada, spent the Arbor Day week visiting all of the district's elementary schools to teach kids about the importance of trees to their health, the planet and their future. With thick glasses, a tussled white wig and suspenders he didn't look like the typical professor. But Pricklethorn, whose visit to the district was arranged by former Bristol resident Paul Fletcher, had a very important message: Trees are "quite frankly, one of the most important natural resources known to us on this planet," he told students at the Hugh Cole School Friday afternoon.

His half-hour talk — it was actually going to run thirty-tree minutes, he warned the students — was filled with puns: Holding up a bottle of maple syrup,

NEWS BRIEF

Residents to play role in Rogers Free Library's future plans

Strategic planning process asks for resident input; survey is online
Rogers Free Library is working to determine its value to the Bristol community, now and in the future. And residents can play a prominent part. The process is called strategic planning, and it will take about seven months to complete. The result will be a five-year strategic plan for the library. The work began a few months ago when the library trustees hired a consultant to provide guidance for the process. Kay Ellen Bullard has more than 30 years of library experience, including serving as an assistant director for the Providence Public Library for 16 years. The strategic planning process will include input from the public. The trustees indicated they are looking for as much input and as many voices as possible in order to draw conclusions about the future of the library. The process includes multiple chances for library visitors and Bristol residents to participate, and that process starts now. The steering committee has posted an online survey which can be accessed at www.surveymonkey.com/r/bristolibrary or by visiting the Rogers Free Library website at www.rogersfreelibrary.org and clicking on the survey. The survey will be active until the end of May.

FOOD: Students advocate for change in elementary school lunch menu

So that’s exactly what Ms. Medeiros did. She started a petition asking the school district to change food service providers or, at the very least, improve the offerings in the cafeteria. She circulated the petition at recess and spoke before Mass at nearby St. Elizabeth’s Church one Sunday morning, earning nearly 100 signatures and garnering the attention of Chartwells executives.

A group from the food service company visited Guiteras School last week to meet with Ms. Medeiros and three of her classmates to try and address their concerns.

“Our priority and focus is providing students in Bristol Warren with great tasting and nutritious food as well as maintaining open dialogue for formal and informal feedback,” Chartwells representative Kimberley Orr wrote in an email to the Bristol Phoenix. “In that spirit, our team along with representatives from the school enjoyed a meeting with a small group of students to discuss their school lunch program, ideas and opportunities. We appreciate all input and working with the community to provide a variety of menu options.”

The options were among the items discussed, according to Guiteras Principal Cynthia Sadler, along with wait times for lunch and seating arrangements in the cafeteria. Immediate changes will include the order students are called up to get their lunch, which will now be according to food choice instead of classroom to expedite the process; and the addition of a second “peanut-free table” to allow those who buy food at the school to sit with their friends who have allergies, Ms. Sadler said. The food options will not increase at the elementary level, though some recipes could.

“Chartwells kind of agreed the cheese on the pizza is horrible,” Ms. Sadler said. “It was very low-fat so not as flavorful. They are changing the cheese type.”

The freshness of the food can not necessarily change as the elementary schools in Bristol Warren do not have full kitchens. Instead, Chartwells cooks some of the food at Mt. Hope High School and Kickemuit Middle School and delivers the meals to the elementary schools.

“Cafe meals are prepared fresh daily,” Ms. Orr wrote. “Based on kitchen equipment requirements, some food is prepared at Mt. Hope and delivered to the school prior to service but most is made on site. The students are encouraged to first approach the café workers should they have any issues with their meal. Our staff is trained and can resolve most immediately if brought to their attention.”

As for the food quality, it is perfectly nutritious, Ms. Sadler said. Students are allowed to take two fruits or vegetables at every lunch, and can take a piece of fruit with them when they leave the cafeteria. The gray color of the meat and chicken is because of the use of dark meat in the chicken and the fact that burgers are baked, not grilled, so they don’t get that appetizing grilled appearance, she said. As for the sour milk and rotten apples, Ms. Sadler said she suspects those were isolated incidents.

Chartwells is making an effort to use fresh, local ingredients and provide food kids not only need but want, Ms. Sadler said. To that end, the company meets with students at the start of each year to gauge their tastes. Such a meeting this year resulted in a “more Mexican flair” to some of the food, including the beef soft tacos students were served Tuesday afternoon.

“I’ve been very happy with the meetings with Chartwells over the years,” Ms. Sadler said, adding the meeting with the students and Chartwells executives was productive. “I really appreciate Lindsie’s willingness to work for change. Kids should be encouraged to speak up; that’s how we make better kids. We kind of resolved some of the problems.”

Whether the kids are satisfied is another story. Ms. Medeiros said she appreciated Chartwells meeting with the students, but felt all their concerns weren’t addressed. She said she tried to present a comparison to another company that supplied food to a school she used to attend in Massachusetts — which she researched extensively, creating a side-by-side comparison — but the group from Chartwells wasn’t interested in being compared. They also did not address the petition she circulated calling for the company’s removal.

“Most of the changes aren’t going to be about the food,” Ms. Medeiros said. “I feel like they weren’t really listening to us. I don’t think they’ll do anything.”

WATER: Rate increases expected for 10 years

The Pawtucket source is the answer, she said, one with which the authority had hoped East Providence would assist. A 2013 CDM-Smith study on water supplies in the region recommended a 30-inch pipe be built from Pawtucket to the connection, at a cost of about $27 million. East Providence has repeatedly balked at partnering with BCWA, so the authority voted to move ahead with the 24-inch line at a cost of about $20 million. The authority has also had failed negotiations with the state for access to water infrastructure funds.

“We are still working with the state and East Providence, but the board had to say we’re going to just do it,” Ms. Marchand said. “We had been negotiating to do it with East Providence, but they’ve had a lot going on. Water has not been the highest on their list.”

The BCWA will still be able to install the pipe on the mostly state roads between the Pawtucket line and the Pawtucket Avenue connector, but Ms. Marchand noted the authority is still hoping to partner with the city.

Without that partnership, the BCWA will be left paying the entire bill, funded by rate increases to customers over the next decade. The project will add 1.25 percent per year to four of the 10 years of rate increases the authority had already planned for infrastructure and maintenance. After a 3.25 percent increase in water bills in 2018, rate payers will be hit with three straight years of 4.75 percent increases, followed by a 4.5 percent hike in 2022. After that, water rates will continue to increase at an average of 4 percent a year through 2027.

Ask the Expert—Planning Ahead

Christy Bergeson
Licensed Funeral Director, Wilbur-Romano Funeral Home

Q: What’s the best advice you would give someone about funerals?

A: Very simply: be prepared. I don’t mean merely to expect to have a funeral or mention your final wishes to your spouse, but to plan everything in advance—and in detail—with the help of a professional. The most difficult thing we see is families who are not prepared for the loss of a loved one. The surviving family members are forced to create a plan while they mourn, which can make an emotional situation worse. A plan can help your loved ones to better cope with the loss, allowing them to focus on what’s most important. And, you can feel comfortable in knowing that your personal wishes are known.

Christy Bergeson is a funeral director at Wilbur-Romano Funeral Home, a member of the Dignity Memorial® network serving the East Bay community and families nationwide. For more information, contact Christy at 401-245-6818 or visit Wilbur-Romano.com.

Stone Church Coffee House to present two troubadours

Bristol's Stone Church Coffee House at the First Congregational Church concludes its 10th season on Saturday, May 13, with a double header/split bill featuring former Connecticut state troubadours Kristen Graves (2013-15) and Lara Herscovitch (2009-10).

Kristen Graves is a singer/songwriter and humanitarian from Fairfield, Conn., who was recently listed as part of the "new generation of folk music" in the New York Times and had a recent mention in Rolling Stone for her participation in the compilation album, "Buy This Fracking Album," produced by Movement Music Records.

Lara Herscovitch is a songwriter, poet and performer. Her award-winning music is "pure musical poetry," highly original, modern folk with shades of blues, jazz and pop. She has extensive experience as a policy social worker, and has worked in the U.S., Latin America and Asia on behalf of disadvantaged individuals. These themes are woven throughout her music.

The coffeehouse is a family-oriented musical venue at the church at 300 High St. Doors open at 6:45 p.m., with the show 7:30. Light refreshments are available for purchase.

Tickets are available at the door. Tickets are $15 per person, students are half price, and children 5 and under are free. For more information, or to purchase tickets in advance, call 253-4813 or 253-7288.

Men's Club to host a tribute to Ros Bosworth

A retrospective of Roswell S. Bosworth Jr. and his legacy as editor/publisher and community leader, recounted by close friends and colleagues, will take place at the Men's Club meeting on Thursday, May 11, at 7 p.m. at the Linden Place ballroom off W a r d w e l l Street. The event is free and open to the public.

R.S. Bosworth Jr.

After initial remarks by Joan Roth, Leo Contente, Ralph Kinder, Herbie Moitoso, Alayne White and Halsey Herreshoff, those in attendance will be invited to offer their thoughts and recollections about Ros and his impact on the community. Ros passed away Feb. 7 of this year.

Beginning in 1949, he was primarily known as editor, publisher and owner of East Bay Newspapers. A founding member of the Men's Club in May of 2013, Ros was instrumental in the organization and development of numerous civic and nonprofit initiatives and the recipient of numerous accolades in both public and private sectors.

Up to his passing, at the age of 90, he remained active from the sidelines with a number of local institutions and initiatives, coaching friends and colleagues on how best to address the issues and opportunities they faced in their community efforts.

A profound patriot, Ros was a champion of the Bristol Fourth of July Parade, hosting with his wife Marcia an annual viewing of the event from his Hope Street home. While he never sought recognition for the accomplishment, he was singularly responsible for conceiving and erecting the Revolutionary War memorial at Independence Park.

In tribute to Ros and his love for blueberries (he cultivated dozens of bushes at his second home on Prudence Island), members and guests are encouraged to bring a sample of their favorite blueberry recipe to serve with refreshments.

Gen. Burnside posters at the Bristol Statehouse next week

On Wednesday, May 10, from 7 to 9 p.m., the Bristol Historical & Preservation Society, in conjunction with the History and American Studies Department at Roger Williams University, will host a display of posters on the history of Gen. Ambrose Burnside in Bristol. The event is at the Bristol Statehouse, 240 High St., on the town common.

Gen. Burnside is best known for his Civil War career, but he lived in Bristol for much of his life and had a major impact on the town. In addition to founding a rifle factory, he was involved in the creation of Juniper Hill Cemetery, owned and rented various properties around town, and served as governor and later senator of Rhode Island. His house, Edgehill, was located on what is now the northern part of the RWU campus.

At the suggestion of Ros Bosworth, the Bristol Historical & Preservation Society partnered with Charlotte Carrington-Farmer's "Dimensions of History" class to research these aspects of Burnside's life. Students also worked directly with Burnside-related objects in the BHPS collections.

The students will display their posters and will be available to discuss their findings in person. Some objects from the society's Burnside collection will be on dis-Barrington pitcher Paige Concannon struck out 16 Huskies and allowed just four hits in a 2-1 win over Mt. Hope on Thursday.

Mt. Hope pitcher Jenna Cimbron pitched well for the Huskies in her first game of the year. The multi-sport athlete spread out seven hits over seven innings and struck out one in a 2-1 loss at Barrington High School on Thursday. The loss dropped Mt. Hope to 0-6 in the division.

Third baseman Brianna Gendreau smacked a run scoring hit in the top of the sixth inning to tie the score 1-1. But Barrington's Sydney Parkhurst ripped a triple to lead off the seventh inning. Maia Villercica hit a sacrifice fly to score Parkhurst to give Barrington a walk off 2-1 victory.

The win boosted the Eagles record to 6-1 in the division.

What to do when someone dies – family, financial and legal

Can there be a more devastating and confusing time than when a loved one dies? What should you do? How quickly should you do it? Call Attorney Evelyn Zawatsky. She has prepared a helpful list of actions you will need to take -- some immediately, some later on, and some with legal guidance. She is ready to help through the process.

- Consider donation of body organs and tissue.
- Contact place of worship.
- Contact funeral home.
- Determine whether decedent had a safe deposit box.
- Determine whether decedent left a will.
- Phone the Social Security office and notify them of the death.

- Ascertain the decedent's assets and liabilities, including the following: real estate, household goods, furniture and personal belongings, stocks and bonds, insurance policies, retirement funds, business interests, bank accounts, and debts and liabilities, including monthly bills and invoices that come in the mail after a death.
- Keep records of all payments for funeral and expenses for last illness and retain receipts.
- Investigate other benefits that may be available to this estate, including insurance policies, social security benefits, union death benefits, veteran's benefits, and employee benefits, such as accrued vacation pay, final wages, employee death benefits, reimbursements, refunds on insurance or cancelled subscriptions.

- Obtain death certificate.

Then, there is the matter of probate, which may or may not be necessary. Legal assistance can be very helpful with probate in order to transfer the decedent's assets to the persons named in the Will or trust, or the decedent's legal heirs.

A call to Attorney Evelyn Zawatsky upon the death of a loved one is an important first step in guiding you through this trying time.

Buoys shot, one sunk

The crew of Coast Guard Cutter Ida Lewis discovered a sunken buoy riddled with bullet holes off Block Island last week.

While conducting routine buoy maintenance work, they found that the green Clay Head buoy number seven was underwater. And when they raised the 12,000-pound buoy moored off the island's east side, they found 20 bullet holes. It has since been removed from service for repairs.

The Coast Guard added that this was the second buoy found with bullet holes within a week.

Damaging or tampering with a buoy is a federal crime punishable by jail time and fines, said Senior Chief Petty Officer Timothy Chase. Floating just below the surface, "Buoy number 7 became a navigational hazard that could have easily been struck by a vessel and seriously injured or killed mariners."

Fifth ranked Coast Guard Academy won the New England Conference (NEISA) Women's Championship, hosted April 22-23 by Brown University, to defend their 2016 NEISA crown. The Bears of Coast Guard passed Boston College late on Saturday and were able to hold off the Eagles throughout Sunday.

The Bears finished the regatta with 112 points and scored only one double digit finish throughout the entire event.

Brown University placed fifth on its home waters, URI was sixth, Connecticut College 12th and Roger Williams University 14th.

Third ranked Brown and fourth ranked URI are among those qualifying to move

Legendary Fado singer Carlos do Carmo in concert

BY DAVID MENDOCA

Portuguese singer Carlos do Carmo stands at the center of much of fado's history of the last 50 years, a singular voice that has resonated with generations of listeners throughout the world and which will be heard, for one night only, at the Zeiterion Theatre on Saturday, May 6.

In his illustrious career, Carlos do Carmo has performed for audiences in dozens of countries, drawing on a deep and highly influential repertory of fados that speak of love, loss and the eternal enigma of Portuguese saudade. His accomplishments have been recognized through innumerable national and international awards, including a Latin Grammy Lifetime Achievement Award in 2014. The citation highlights Carlos do Carmo as "one of the most iconic voices of Portuguese music." Now, after a long absence, he returns triumphantly to the US.

Carlos do Carmo's professional career began when, at 23 years of age, he began performing at his family's storied fado house, O

Lessons Learned from an Autistic Son's Journey from Infancy to Middle Age" by Mary Miller is both a personal memoir and a history lesson about the treatment of autistic children from the 1970s to now. On Sunday, May 7 from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m., Mary Miller will meet the public and sign her memoir at Simone's restaurant

Mary Miller started a journal when her son Jay was two years old, "compelled to document [Jay's] development." For Miller, the traditional Dogwoods come in a surprising number of types, so here is a short run down. While the American Dogwood (cornus florida) has had problems with a fungal disease, they can be grown successfully if you plant them in open, sunny areas, and keep them stress free by mulching widely under the limbs, and watering in the summer to keep moisture stress at a minimum. Avoid wetting the leaves. American dogwood bloom in May while a very nice alternative, Korean dogwood blooms Mid-June to early July. They have a somewhat different flower but provide a nice show of late color. Cornelian Cherry (cornus mas) blooms very early with bright gold flowers. Fruit will follow that the birds will like. This is a small tree maturing to about 15 feet.

Stop by for a tour of the trees and we will be glad to show you these and lots more.

What is to become of the old Veterans' Home?

This Fall the new veterans' home will open in Bristol. The 2016 referendum added another $27 million to the $94 million approved in 2012 for a total cost of $121 million. Initially, the bond referendum recited that the proceeds would be used to build a 225 bed facility (now scaled down to 208 beds) along with funds to renovate the original facility in order to turn it into a space for veteran's spouses, a veterans recreation area, and provide a home for homeless veterans. Additionally, the referendum promised a 75 bed assisted living facility for veterans. Certainly, the price for the new construction was boosted by new guidelines from the federal government. Yet, questions need to be answered on the present project. What funds were allocated to the demands required by the federal government as opposed to the jacking up of the price, if any, by the contractors and Gilbane? Secondly, what happened to the assisted living and renovation portions of the bond for the uses stated in the referendum? It appears that all the money is going solely to the construction and demolition of the existing home. At least 2 studies were done that supported the renovation of the so-called North and South building. No contrary "report" has been made public. State money recently was poured into making a wonderful recreational spot with garden views, a $500,000 paint job, etc. It seems awfully wasteful to now demolish the original building without a careful vetting of all the alleged studies performed. As of April 25, Gilbane's website still lists a 20,000 foot renovation project on the present home.

While, no doubt, some areas may not be suited for living quarters, where are the studies which were the basis for the renovation "ask" in the referendum bonds? My concern is that these were needs that lured voters to give the approval for the project, yet seem to have been tossed aside. I just don't like government luring people with promises and then unilaterally dismissing voters' reasons for the support. Query whether the assisted living facility, spouses' residence, a place for homeless veterans, etc. have been jettisoned because of uncontrolled cost run-ups which are being covered up?

The veterans deserve nothing but the best, but an audit should ensue as to why the facility cut beds yet costs nonetheless rose so dramatically that the other two-thirds of the original reasons for the bond are scrapped. Before the bulldozers erase the "evidence" of what could be done with perfectly good sections of the existing home doesn't the public deserve an explanation? Perhaps a private company might want to purchase the present building since the rooms each have a toilet facility and sink with communal showers (not unlike a lot of nursing homes) and the state could sell it.

In the happiness of giving veterans a fine home the public should not lose sight of demanding accountability as to how the money was spent and what happened to the other projects that led voters to support the referendums.

It's time for answers before the original home is demolished. Join me in demanding an audit now and for release of all studies that supported the original referendum proposals and any rebuttal of the promised renovations.

Senior Living IN THE EAST BAY

Intergenerational Living: An Old Idea with a New Twist

As the "Greatest Generation" began having their children in the 1940s, it was not unusual for three generations to be living in one house. Then as the suburbs grew, and the "Baby Boomers" secured job offers taking them away from their hometowns, their parents found themselves living in huge homes all by themselves.

In the 1990s retirement communities of varying types and sizes began popping up in response to a need or want for smaller, more simplified living. They first developed in the Northeast and the Midwest, and then throughout the South and West. In Rhode Island, communities that rent apartments are the typical choice for seniors. However, Laurelmead Cooperative, located on Providence's East Side, is set apart by being the first and only resident-owned senior community in the state.

Fast forward 20 years to 2017 and senior housing options have changed very little except for more health-related assisted living/memory care facilities, and the beginning of the 55+ active adult-living campuses.

Now as Baby Boomers (the oldest being in their early 70s) begin thinking about their next place to live, something very interesting is happening.

At an established independent-living community like Laurelmead, a new kind of intergenerational living is evolving. Members of the Greatest Generation, now in their 80s and 90s, who have been thriving at Laurelmead for 15-20 years, are being joined by younger seniors - many of whom are Baby Boomers. This form of intergenerational living, while rarely talked about or studied by social scientists, will be a reality for many senior communities for years to come.

Laurelmead residents, young and old, have been boasting about how satisfied they are with their new neighbors. The younger seniors who are new to the community enjoy making friends that are their parents' age. "The centenarians living at Laurelmead have become my inspiration," says Pat Gifford, one of Laurelmead's Baby Boomers. "Our older residents also benefit from social interaction with their younger neighbors."

Karen Sheahan, another one of Laurelmead's, younger residents, is known as the "iPad Lady" for her expertise, and she has already helped many iPad owners at Laurelmead. She tells of a call from her neighbor Frances. "I just got an iPad from my grandson for my 94th birthday, and I am so eager to get started." They met for coffee and got to work! Karen has intentionally chosen to live within Laurelmead's multi-generational community. When asked why, there was no hesitation. "I am learning...every day. And I am teaching; I found we all have something to give. I am inspired."

If you are interested in learning more about the new style of intergenerational living at Laurelmead, do not hesitate to contact Diane Lamontagne at 401-273-9550.

Bills in Congress put fish at risk

I was in Washington, DC last week with fishermen throughout the country advocating for the fish. The group I was with met with Rhode Island and Massachusetts senate and congressional offices to gain their insight and update each other on important fisheries issues.

The Rhode Island senators and congressmen do a good job when it comes to fisheries. In fact Senators Reed and Whitehouse have been on the forefront of not only fisheries issues but important related climate change issues such as rising water and erosion of our coastline, warming water and its impact on fish and fishing. We are in good hands in Washington.

Key issues discussed included the impact of recreational fishing. According to a NOAA study, recreational fishing has a $200-million dollar annual economic impact on the State of Rhode Island. However, three bills introduced in congress (with versions soon to be introduced in the senate) would have a major long term impact on both commercial and recreational fishing.

House bill H.R. 200, introduced by Representative Young (Alaska) and H.R. 2023, introduced by Representative Graves (Louisiana) would both liberalize the Magnuson-Stevens Act allowing more fish to be taken out of the ocean for the short term financial gain of some.

These short term gains would be possible by eliminating the need for Allowable Catch Limits (ACLs) on rebuilt fish stocks. A quick assessment shows that if these bills passed, possibly all but 30 of 400 species would have Allowable Catch Limits. To eliminate them on stocks that have rebuilt could take away the gains we have made to rebuild stocks and allow species to become overfished before catch limits can be put back in place.

These bills do not put fish first, they do not grow fish to abundance for all to catch and eat but rather put fish stocks at risk for overfishing making them available for short term gain for some.

New Jersey summer flounder bill

New Jersey Congressmen LoBiondo and Pallone sponsored a bill H.R. 1411 that would prevent NOAA Fisheries (NMFS) from implementing regulations that would reduce summer flounder harvest limits.

Summer flounder spawning stock has been down for six years in a row and coast-wide anglers have overfished. With this declining biomass and overfishing the Atlantic Marine Fisheries Commission (ASMFC) that regulates summer flounder coastwide found it necessary to reduce commercial and recreational harvest levels by about 30% in 2017.

More on these bills and others as they develop in Congress.

8th Annual Customer Appreciation Day

Lucky Bait & Tackle, Warren, will be celebrating their 8th Annual Customer Appreciation Day on Saturday, May 13. Manny Macedo of Lucky Bait said, "We plan on having a number of reps on hand from a variety of manufacturers (Penn, Calcutta and a host of others). As traditional we will have refreshments and food available (a pig roast) for customers that attend."

Quahog transplants May 10-11

Two quahog transplants will take place this month. On Wednesday, May 10 a transplant will take place at Greenwich Cove and a Thursday, May 11 transplant will take place at Bristol Harbor, kicking off at the Independence Park boat ramp. Licensed commercial shellfishermen will be paid $7/50 pound bag and those assisting with dumping $10/50 pound bag. Both transplants will take place from 8 a.m. to 12 noon.

To participate shellfishermen should report to the on-site DEM enforcement patrol boat by 8 a.m. on the day of the transplant. The shellfish transplant program is a cooperative effort between DEM, the Narragansett Bay Commission, the shellfish industry, and the RI Department of Health. 2017 transplant funding is provided by the Narragansett Bay Commission.

Free Fishing Weekend for freshwater

The Rhode Island Department of Environmental Management (DEM) will hold Free Fishing Weekend Saturday, May 6th and Sunday, May 7. As part of the event, the public is invited to fish without a fishing license or trout conservation stamp in the state's freshwaters.

Six local ponds will be stocked with over 6,000 rainbow trout and 4,000 golden trout for the event. Stocked waters include: Peck Pond, Burrillville; Browning Mill Pond, Exeter; Silver Spring Lake, North Kingstown; Upper Melville Pond, Portsmouth; Meadowbrook Pond, Richmond; and Shippee Sawmill Pond, Foster.

Where's the Bite

Freshwater fishing continues to be very strong with anglers catching large and smallmouth bass. The trout bite is expected to improve this weekend with DEM stocking ponds with trout and golden trout for Free Fishing weekend. See above article for ponds to be stocked or visit dem.ri.gov. Mike Wade of Watch Hill Outfitters, Westerly said, "Trout fishing in DEM stocked ponds is still great and customers are catching bass and pike in Chapman Pond (Westerly)."

Tautog fishing has improved this week in the Bay with anglers catching keepers with shorts mixed in, however, fishing along the southern coastal shore was not good.

"Tautog fishing is good in RI but anglers have been keeping their fishing success to themselves as is the case in the spring time, but we know they are catching keepers somewhere," said Wade. Matt Conti of Snug Harbor Marina, South Kingstown, said, "Spring fishing locations in water 15 to 25 feet has just not been good in South County." I fished with two anglers Saturday in the Newport and Jamestown area and had a very slow pick with two keepers and three shorts. Manny Macedo of Lucky Bait & Tackle, Warren said, "We received reports of keeper tautog being caught off Newport, and all along Water Street but there are a lot of shorts mixed in."

Striped bass fishing in outhern RI is exploding. Conti said, "Bass fishing is phenomenal. A customer caught a 31" fish off the West Wall (Harbor of Refuge) this weekend with school bass being caught in mass at the Wall and on Matunuck and Charlestown beaches. The ponds in Charlestown, Ninigret and Narrow River are all hot too." "School bass with keeper bass mixed in are being caught everywhere including the Warren River, Kicketmuit River and all the way up to Pawtucket." said Manny Macedo of Lucky Bait & Tackle. "We have a lot of school bass in the 14" to 15" range being caught but no reports of keepers really arriving yet." said Mike Wade of Watch Hill Outfitters.

"Squid fishing is hit or miss with anglers catching as much as 1/2 bucket (a five gallon pail) fishing in the Newport and Jamestown." said Manny Macedo.

Captain Dave Monti has been fishing and shellfishing for over 40 years. He holds a captain's master license and a charter fishing license. He is a RISAA board member, a member of the RI Party & Charter Boat Association and a member of the RI Marine Fisheries Council. Contact or forward fishing news and photos to Capt. Dave at dmontifish@verizon.net or visit his website at noflukefishing.com.

SINGER: Star of Fado at Zeiterion

Faia, located in the Lisbon neighborhood of Bairro Alto. In the ensuing 50-plus years, he has recorded and performed almost without pause.

His landmark 1977 recording, Um Homem na Cidade, is a deeply affecting musical portrait of post-revolutionary Lisbon, with all of its glorious beauty, contradictions and mystery intact. "Um Homem na Cidade" added haunting, ethereal works such as "Rosa da Noite," "Fado do Campo Grande" and the record's title track to a burgeoning catalog that already included future classics such as "Bairro Alto" and "Gaivota." His many live recordings render not merely the high points such as the songs "Canoas do Tejo," "Locura," and "Lisboa Menina e Moça", but also in large part the sound of contemporary fado. Perhaps it is no surprise, then, that when asked to name three fados that are essential to his repertory, he responds "And if it were 30?" Even the 10-CD collection 100 Canções (2010) can only be viewed as a sampling of "the best of the best."

His work has always embraced the new, even the revolutionary, within fado, while never losing sight of the music's fundamental identity. He has been plain-spoken about the influence of the American singer Frank Sinatra on his artistic development, but also that of his many and varied collaborations. Friendship has been "fundamental" to the success of these collaborations, enriching his sound and his aesthetic through cross-pollination with jazz, classical and of course, fado. His 2013 album of duets ("Fado É Amor") features many of fado's current brightest stars, including Mariza, Ana Moura and Camané — all of whom have performed recently at the Zei-

Park in Newport from June 16 to 25. Tours, hosted by the Tortola-based Columbus Foundation, will be offered daily.

Nina, billed as the "most historically accurate Columbus replica ship ever built, is 65 feet long, has an 18-foot beam and weighs 75 tons. The original sailed over 25,000 miles and was last heard of in 1501.

Pinta, at 85 feet with 25 foot draft, is a typical caravel-style vessel of that era.

Both ships are featured in the movie "Four Blood Moons."

terion. And he continues to produce compelling, innovative work such as 2007's "À Noite" and, very recently, duet recordings with two of Portugal's best-known pianists, Maria João Pires and the late Bernardo Sasseti.

He speaks fondly and openly of his affection for his fans in the United States: "Whether or not they are Portuguese, the audiences in America have always received me warmly." He looks forward to his return to the New Bedford area, where he has "performed for generations of fans" where he hopes to return the dedication that they have shown to him over the years.

The challenge of putting a show together from a repertory of more than 200 recorded fados and a career that stretches more than 50 years is one that Carlos do Carmo readily accepts. Invoking the vision of fado at its origins, as an intimate conversation between performer and audience, he says "Every concert is a gift we share with each other." And for this US audience, which has treated him so well in his prior visits, he promises his best.

Carlos do Carmo performs at the Zeiterion Performing Arts Center, New Bedford on Saturday, May 6 at 8 p.m. He will be accompanied by José Manuel Neto on the Portuguese Guitar, Carlos Manuel Proença on the classical guitar (viola de fado) and Daniel Pinto on the acoustic bass (baixo). Tickets ranging from $39 to $59 are available online at zeiterion.org or by calling the box office at 508/994-2900.

David Mendonça writes frequently about fado music and culture. His work has been published in various print and online outlets, including his own fado-today.blogspot.com.

Mix up lunch with Mason jar salads

Bored with your current lunch routine? Mason jar salads are a fun way to mix up lunch. They also can be prepped ahead of time. Believe it or not, there is an art to making the perfect mason jar salad. Follow the tips below for the tastiest salads in a jar.

Emily DELCONTE

1. Order matters. The dressing goes at the bottom of the jar. This ensures that the other ingredients do not get soggy. Next choose hard, crunchy vegetables like carrots, celery, or bell peppers. Then top with lean proteins or grains, nuts and seeds, or dried fruit. Lettuces or greens then go on top.

2. Mix it up. It is important to get a good combination of different food groups. This helps you feel energized throughout the afternoon. Always include a protein such as chicken, fish, eggs, or nuts. Something salty or sweet can keep your salads interesting. Try flavored nuts or dried fruit. Whole grains like quinoa or farro can also make for fun add-ons.

3. Think outside the box. Mason jar salads do not need to include lettuce at all. For example, try zucchini noodles with quinoa, peas, and feta cheese.

Greek Mason Jar Salad

Servings: 4

- 2 cups water or chicken stock
- 1 cup farro, dry
- 1/4 cup vinaigrette
- 1 cup canned chick peas, drained and rinsed
- 1 cup tomato, diced into small pieces
- 1 cucumber, diced into small pieces
- 1/4 large red onion, diced into small pieces
- 1 cup feta cheese, crumbled
- 4 cups arugula

Preparation

1. In a medium sauce pan, bring chicken stock or water to boil. Add in farro. Cover and reduce heat to low. Simmer for 30-45 minutes, or until farro is tender.

2. In the bottom of 4 mason jars, evenly divide salad dressing. Then evenly divide ingredients in the following order: farro, chick peas, tomato, cucumber, red onion, feta, and arugula.

3. Store in the refrigerator for up to four days. Enjoy!

LATOUR: Miller's 'So Far So Great!' is a touching and informative memoir emotional. In the seventies, many doctors still subscribed to a “refrigerator mom” theory that children developed autism because of cold, withholding parents. So, in addition to battling for Jay’s healthcare, Miller had to bear contempt from the medical community as well as her own guilty feelings.

Despite the odds, Miller became her son’s staunchest ally: a warrior mother, unwilling to succumb to hopelessness. “I had to be his advocate,” says Miller. It was Miller who researched Jay’s condition and stumbled upon the diagnosis of autism, and it was Miller who advocated for Jay’s right to an education, even if that meant the heart-breaking decision to send him away to school. Explains Miller, “We would have lost three years [of progress].” Mary knew that the earlier she got help for Jay, the greater his chances to develop speech and other cognitive functions.

But the advocacy never stopped. As Jay aged out of the public education sphere, Miller had to fight to find adult services, housing in group homes, and to continue his therapies. Miller currently lives in Chatham where she continues to be involved, raising funds for Cape Cod Village (capecodvillage.org), a project to create a group home for autistic adults in Orleans, Massachusetts.

There are moments of triumph and despair in So Far So Good, expressed with some lovely passages. In one, Miller likens her emotional state to a Jackson Pollack painting: “Feeling alone and vulnerable, the palette of my emotions [were]...colors spattered randomly across the canvas of my life.” So Far So Great! is a touching and informative memoir of one family’s fight to have their son treated with dignity and respect.

Mary Miller lived in Barrington, Rhode Island for thirty years and has five grandchildren who reside there still. Jay lives in a group home in East Providence where he continues to grow and learn. He uses public transportation and holds down two part-time jobs. Each year, since he turned twenty-one, Jay has initiated a trip with his mother to “see the sights” in both the United States and beyond. For more information about Mary and Jay, visit their website at autism-lessons.com.

Turn back time on Hog Island

If you have ever wished to truly get away from it all, look no further than this cute cottage located on nearby Hog Island, the island to the left as you're coming over the Mt. Hope Bridge from Portsmouth to Bristol. For some peace and quiet and a true sense of life as it was in days gone by, this cottage is just the ticket.

Charlene Venancio, the listing agent and owner of the cottage, said very few Hog Island homes come on the market, since they usually transfer within the families that own them.

"It is a wonderful place in the summer if you have children, as friendships and bonds are made with other families in the community that last a lifetime. If you do not have children, it's a great place for privacy and peace and quiet. The beauty of the place is that you make it what you want it to be," she said.

There are approximately 150 cottages and homes on the island. There is no public transportation to and from the island, which means you must either make arrangements with someone on the island for a ride, or have your own boat.

Moorings are permitted from the Town of Portsmouth, usually a nominal annual fee, with a maximum of two moorings per property.

Most homes are fueled by propane and solar. Refrigerator, hot water, stove and any heating units are usually run on propane, and lights are usually run by solar — there is no electricity on the island.

This cottage, with just under 1,000 square feet, has a modern kitchen, full bathroom and sleeps four to six comfortably. The roof was recently replaced. The inside is campy, but solid. The floors are laminated to keep it maintenance friendly regarding beach sand, etc.

The home is fueled with a generator run by propane. This home has a new septic system.

The Hog Island Little Dock Association offers a community dock membership if you choose. There is a one-time, buy-in around $700, with a yearly fee of $50 to $75 (depending on what repairs are needed and the funds in the kitty). Propane delivery and trash delivery are available on the island at reasonable rates.

Most homes still have cesspools, though some are updating to septic systems as the DEM regulations dictate.

There are two community wells on the island that are regularly maintained and in good working condition. The mode of transportation on the island is by golf cart. There is a sandy beach that is the spot for several community get-togethers, including a Fourth of July parade on the island complete with golf cart decorations, Field Day (games, contests, food and laughs), Chowder Cook-off, steak fry, and outdoor drive-in with movies (except with golf carts).

This island getaway is really quite special for the perfect individual or families who wish to turn off their computers, cell phones, televisions and enjoy the quieter side of living.

Ms. Venancio will be scheduling showings starting this weekend. She has a boat and will pick up clients at Bristol Marina.
