TYC wraps up superb summer despite clubhouse woes

BY TOM KILLIN DALGLISH
tdalglis@eastbaynewspapers.com

TIVERTON — The Tiverton Yacht Club (TYC) finishes the sailing season Labor Day Weekend with a race down the river, its legal struggles on hold, and renewed optimism about plans to build a new clubhouse to replace the one that burned to the ground ten years ago in 2003.

"This season was probably our best since the fire," said club Commodore Greg Jones. "A whole lot of things came together."

The legal front

On the legal front, the shift from septic systems to a sewer line as the likely wastewater solution for Riverside Drive residents has made it possible for the TYC to take a breather from the ten-year litigation it's been involved in with several neighbors.

The fight had been most recently about the proper size of a septic system that would serve the proposed new clubhouse. A larger septic system was needed,

Students start year two in modulares

Changes — even iPads — await as school opens Sept. 3

BY TOM KILLIN DALGLISH

LITTLE COMPTON — The new school year that starts here next Tuesday, Sept. 3, promises to be eventful, on many fronts — construction, technological innovation, curriculum change and assessment. And a few more students may enroll.

The buildings

"Renovation of the Wilbur & McMahon School is about 50 percent done," said School Committee Chairman Donald Gomez, "with about 40 percent of the funding spent." "We're still on schedule and pretty much within budget, with no problems and no significant changes."

Mr. Gomez said, "we're very hopeful the kids will be back in the renovated school by the end of the February vacation."

He said that he anticipates giving a tour of the work completed thus far to Rhode Island Department of Education officials. Much of the work done to date is between the walls and not easily noticeable.

The temporary modulares are cleaned and ready, he said, with moisture and bacteria issues, largely attributable to the heat and closed conditions of the facilities, completely resolved.

Modular One, used over the summer on a daily basis, is fine.

SCHOOL: Renovations should be done by February

In Modular Two, used less than One, the bacteria count inside at one point was higher than outside, but not significantly so, he said. "We don't envision any problems."

School Superintendent Kathryn Crowley said, "ModSpace has been impeccable. The modulars are all set and ready to roll."

Technology and innovation

Technology is one of the areas in which the schools are moving fast. Ms. Crowley has announced that the school is hiring a new director of information technology (IT). He is Paul Benjamin, former director of IT for the East Bay Educational Collaborative.

Mr. Benjamin, who has a background in private industry, she said, will divide his time between assisting the school with its IT needs and the town with its. He will be housed temporarily in the public safety complex until renovation of the old school building is completed.

Mr. Benjamin will handle all data collection and state reporting functions, and will help guide professional development of teachers in the area of technology. They'll need to be prepared.

"Every student will have an iPad," Ms. Crowley said. "Within the next year we'll have enough iPads for every student in the building. We want to really utilize them. We haven't used them to the extent we should." Funds for the iPads have come from grants over the past three years, she said.

School Superintendent Kathryn Crowley talking about the school budget last year.

"As we move into the 21st century, we want our kids to learn to use the technology that's available, especially as they move into Portsmouth High School."

Superintendent Crowley said, "electronic textbooks are coming down the pike. We need to look into planning for the future, so we're ahead of the curve."

Curriculum and assessment

The school will be moving ahead with adjustments to the curriculum to conform it to common core requirements established at the state and national level, Ms. Crowley said.

Along with that, she said, the school will be moving ahead with its teacher evaluation model. The NECAP test, she said, will not be used this year in teacher evaluation, a decision made at the state level.

Student formative assessment will also move ahead, she said, as "the school tests what students should be able to do at each level."

Census and more

The student population may be growing. Superintendent Crowley said, "we could end up with a few more students in the fall. We don't know yet who won't be returning, but kindergarten went up to 26 from 20." (Tiverton, too, reports an increase in first graders this fall.)

Ms. Crowley said a part-time speech pathologist replacement teacher will be hired before school starts.

The status quo from last year, regarding the number of bus runs and meals served, will be continued this fall, Ms. Crowley said.

and had been approved by the Department of Environmental Management (DEM).

But responding to a complaint from the neighbors, a judge had ruled in 2007 that the larger septic system represented an unlawful expansion and a more intensive use under the existing zoning ordinance. Zoning relief appeared called for. And there the matter has rested for several years.

Since then the TYC has been engaged in an on-again, off again effort to change the ordinance to accommodate the larger DEM-approved septic system. The ordinance change effort has been on hold for many months.

Meanwhile, the sewer line that now seems likely to be installed in the next few years along Riverside Drive should make the septic battle unnecessary.

“It certainly would solve our problems. Sewers are a whole lot better solution for us,” said Mr. Jones. They would negate the septic system size and expansion issue, he said.

Besides, Mr. Jones said “we’ve pretty much made peace with our neighbors, and reached the point where we accept them and they accept us. There’s very little conflict.”

Recent successes

Mr. Jones said that this summer 30 new members joined the TYC, where in the past the growth usual ran to about 10 per year. The club’s total membership is about 150, and had been down to 125 after the fire.

“The sail training program this summer had 68 kids in it,” he said. Four years ago it was down to 40.

“We’ve made a lot of improvements, too,” he said. “We dredged the marina, rebuilt and reconfigured the docks, put sand on the beach, painted the lockers and garage and other buildings we do have, and filled in the foundation of the old clubhouse.”

The TYC has a training fleet of 12 Optimist boats and six or so 420’s, and has one Flying Scotsman.

“The finances are good, and we have money in the bank,” Mr. Jones said.

“Wednesday nights there’ve been competitions, and pot lucks on Thursdays,” he said. “There’ve been fire pits on the beach the teenagers have enjoyed. And meantime we’ve discovered using a tent has worked out quite well.” The tent will be up until Labor Day.

“The yacht club is doing great, and I’m happy with the improvements,” he said.

Sandywoods wins award for socially responsible housing

BY TOM KILLIN DALGLISH
tdalglis@eastbaynewspapers.com

TIVERTON — Sandywoods Farm is one of five winners of a national award from the Boston Society of Architects (BSA) honoring low income housing initiatives.

The award is named the John Clancy Award for Socially Responsible Housing. "The intent of this award is to recognize and encourage excellence in the planning, design, construction and maintenance of socially responsible housing by honoring an organization, a group or an individual who has been a major force behind one or more built developments," the BSA says,

The juried award competition, says BSA, is based on criteria "that includes design excellence, livability, sustainability, accessibility/universal design, community design and diversity. Special attention will be given to the success of the project in providing housing for those who can least afford it."

Sandywoods Farm, located off Bulgarmarsh Road, is a three-year-old community of 150 residents, many of whom are active in the arts, and about 60 of whom are children, said Russ Smith, the farm's program coordinator.

The farm's activities include an art gallery, a farmers' market, regular musical events, a community garden, an incubator kitchen, and instruction in the arts.

The architects who designed Sandywoods Farm are Union Studio Architects, Mr. Smith said, the same architects who designed the nearby Tiverton Library, soon to start construction.

Mr. Smith said he was not really surprised by the honor. "This is just the latest in a series of awards that the architects have won for Sandywoods," he said.

The others named by BSA for the award are the homes at Old Colony (Phase I) in South Boston, the Olmsted Hill residences in Brookline, and the Stoneham new accessible/affordable passive solar housing in Stoneham, all in Massachusetts, and the Green Way in the Bronx.

Each of the five winners will be recognized at a BSA ceremony on January 30, 2014, and will be named as either an Honor, Award, or Citation winner.

Sandywoods is the only housing development in Rhode Island to be so named.

Tiverton gets more first graders

BY TOM K ILLIN DALGLISH
tdalglis@eastbaynewspapers.com

TIVERTON — Tiverton schools start Thursday, Aug. 29, with a new first grade class at Fort Barton School to accommodate an increase in first graders, a new math curriculum, and a new $650,000 sewer system coming online in about two weeks.

About the additional first graders, Tiverton School Superintendent William Rearick said, "right now it's a bubble class. We think it's an anomaly."

Normally first grade is capped at 23 students, he said, but we had eight over the cap at Fort Barton and had to create another class.

Pocasset and Ranger Elementary Schools each have two first grade classes, he said, but Fort Barton, which had the same, will now have three classes. The added class required the hiring of a 2/5 remedial math position at Fort Barton, he said.

Middle and high school enrollment figures keep moving, but are "pretty much as projected, and are likely to be where we were last year," Mr. Rearick said.

A new math curriculum, built to address common core standards, will be instituted this year for all grades in Tiverton schools, Mr. Rearick said, so that "when we teach our kids math, we'll be teaching information they're required to have."

In the area of technology, Mr. Rearick said Tiverton schools are working to make the buildings wireless, and to have enough computers in the buildings to conduct state-required testing and assessments with the students on site.

The sewer project, which was delayed for a year and a half to get Department of Environmental Management (DEM) approval, "will hopefully be wrapped up in a couple of weeks." The job was bid in June, and construction started in July.

When it goes online, he said, the elementary schools, middle school, and high school will all be compliant with DEM requirements.

The sewer project was originally estimated to cost about $400,000, but the lowest bid came in at $650,000, he said, with the difference being made up from local funds.

Police arrest two on heroin charges

Two people were arrested on heroin charges last week after police observed an alleged drug buy in Island Park.

Police arrested Brittney Davis, 21, of 561 Park Ave., Portsmouth, and Zachary Leroy, 20, of 27 Louise Drive, Tiverton.

On Thursday, Aug. 22, police conducted surveillance on Park Avenue after receiving information that narcotics deliveries were occurring in the area, according to Det. Lt. Brian Peters.

At approximately 1:15 pm, Mr. Leroy was seen driving on Park Avenue when he stopped to let Ms. Davis inside the vehicle, he said. Mr. Leroy then delivered heroin to Ms. Davis, according to Lt. Peters.

The vehicle was subsequently stopped and a search revealed 27 packets of heroin, according to Lt. Peters. Six of those packets were found hidden under Davis' clothing, he said.

Mr. Leroy was charged with delivery of heroin, while Ms. Davis was charged with possession of heroin. Both were arraigned Friday in Second Division District Court in Newport.

Two still hospitalized after Little Compton crash

BY TOM KILLIN DALGLISH
tdalglis@eastbaynewspapers.com

LITTLE COMPTON — A single car accident Friday afternoon on West Mail Road near Block House Lane sent all four teenage occupants of the vehicle to Rhode Island Hospital, two by helicopter.

Little Compton Police Chief Sidney Wordell said Monday that at least two of the four have been released, but said he could not speak to the condition of the remaining two.

A Rhode Island Hospital spokesperson said Monday — without releasing names — that the two still hospitalized were in “good” condition, a term used by the American Hospital Association to indicate that “vital signs are stable and within normal limits,” and that the “patient is conscious and comfortable. Indicators are excellent.”

Chief Wordell said two of the victims were from Little Compton, one was a summer resident of the town, and the fourth was from Westport. Three of the four were males, and the fourth was female. Because all are juveniles, names are not being released. Two of the youths are believed to be related.

The black box from this 2007 Toyota Highlander may yield accident-related information.

At 3:05 p.m., police said, the department received “several 911 calls reporting that there had been a serious motor vehicle accident on West Main Road (Rt. 77).”

Police and fire department rescue personnel from Little Compton, Tiverton, Westport, and Portsmouth arrived on the scene and found that a 2007 Toyota Highlander “had struck a tree head-on.” The “jaws of life” was needed to extricate two of the victims, said Chief Wordell.

The cause of the incident is under investigation by Little Compton accident reconstruction officers Sue Cressman and Andrew Morgan.

Chief Wordell said the black box in the vehicle is expected to provide some useful information such as speed and whether the occupants were seat belted.

“Exactly what took place is not exactly clear, that’s for sure,” he said. Interviews with the individuals involved are pending. From the injuries, it’s not clear at this early stage in the investigation whether all were wearing seat belts.

“It was a beautiful day,” said Chief Wordell, and weather and road conditions are not believed to have contributed to the accident. The posted speed limit at the location is 40 mph, he said.

Sneak attacks

Piping plovers already have gulls, skunks, coyotes, raccoons, storms and more lined up against them. They shouldn't have to worry about people and their dogs as well.

But that is the case along Little Compton and Westport beaches this summer.

Dogs are banned for good reason along Goosewing Beach, Cherry & Webb Beach and others during the summer but that doesn't stop some dog owners. They are repeatedly seen letting their dogs loose on these stretches, especially during the early morning and evening hours when lifeguards and police are less apt to be around.

And since dogs pay no heed to plover protective fences and signs, the birds pay a price for such thoughtlessness.

Beset by predators of many sorts, piping plovers have a precarious toehold here. They lay their eggs on the ground, relying only on camouflage for protection. Until they can fly, those chicks lucky enough to hatch are virtually defenseless with no place to run, no place to hide.

Giving these tiny birds space seems little to ask but some beach walkers and dog owners get downright prickly when told they can't go someplace. Near Cherry & Webb Beach, someone has even taken to destroying the fences and signs erected to protect the birds.

Worse than vandalism, this — and letting dogs run amok in nesting areas — amounts to assault on an endangered species.

Police need to take notice but since they can't be everywhere, others witnessing this behavior should help with their cell phones and cameras.

Naturalists have tried appealing to common sense. Next should come fines and public service.

Show your toll anger — pack transponder away

To the editor:

Regarding the imbecilic 10-cent tolls, recently implemented, for crossing the Sakonnet River Bridge ...

May I very strongly suggest that anyone, from any state, who has a transponder, especially a Rogues Island one, take it down and do not use it as you cross the Sakonnet River Bridge from either direction.

Why pay the lousy 10 cents when everyone can, if we all agree to do so as a really strong show of protest and support against these tolls, send a very clear message to Mr. David Darlington, and his minions at the R.I Turnpike and Bridge Authority that Now that is a much more common sense form of protest — our version of the burning of the Gaspee or The Boston Tea Party!

Toll system offers no clue that payment made

To the editor:

We are accustomed to paying tolls on the New York State Thruway and on the Mass. Pike. When you pass through an EZ Pass lane in either state, an electric sign lights up to thank you for paying the toll.

On Wednesday (8-21), we drove over the new Sakonnet

River Bridge with our Rhode Island EZ Pass tag. Did we pay the $0.10 toll? Much to our surprise, the bridge has no electric signs (or any other means) to inform the driver that he has paid the toll. Or to warn him that he has not paid it.

The lack of a means to keep the driver informed is a major failing in the design and operation of the bridge. It ignores standard practice in collecting tolls from vehicles.

If (regrettably) there must be a toll, the RITBA should at least install some means of informing us of it when we cross the Bridge.

Scout's builders celebrate as their solar-powered boat sets off on her first Atlantic try in July.

Scout sets record on third Atlantic attempt

Scout, the little solar-powered boat designed and built in Tiverton to cross the Atlantic to Spain, began a third attempt just before midnight tonight, Friday, Aug. 23, at Sakonnet Point.

The boat started well, quickly passing distances reached on its first two tries and soon eclipsing the 60-plus mile record for such attempts set by an Irish team. By midday Tuesday, the boat had travelled about 157 miles (118 miles from Rhode Island) and was located about 50 miles southeast of Nantucket. Scout did seem to be heading east and north of its rendezvous with the next satellite waypoint.

That seems to be due to a programming glitch, her handlers said, and is not cause for alarm. The boat seems to be skipping some of its waypoints and is instead homing in on one closer to Spain.

"We're going to let this little boat do her best and follow it along with all of you. Who knows, maybe we'll discover a new continent," wrote Dylan Rodrigues on the Scout Facebook page.

The first try earlier this summer from Fogland in Tiverton was done in by clouds and fog that left the boat adrift too close to land.

The next try, from Sakonnet Point, started well but fizzled southeast of Noman's Land and Martha's Vineyard when the boat began to meander due to mechanical and programming problems.

The Scout crew issued this bulletin late Thursday:

.... Hello Scout supporters —

It's that time again! After mending the rudder system, polishing up some of the programming, charging the batteries, and resetting the tracking page, (www.gotransat.com/tracking) Scout is ready to go! For those of you whom have lost track, this will be Scout's third launch (the tracking pages of the previous launches are www.gotransat.com/firstlaunch and www.gotransat.com/secondlaunch)

We have also made a number of neat improvements on our tracking page and have a few more coming! Look for enhanced smartphone support, expanded data viewing capabilities, and a neat little tool that lets you find the distance between any number of points on the tracking map. We have also added average speed and GPS course to the dataset that Scout sends to us; these metrics will be useful in helping us understand what Scout is experiencing during the attempt. The tracking page will receive a new data packet from Scout every 20 minutes.

We plan on doing our last pre-launch test tomorrow morning, and have scheduled the launch for midnight this Friday (so 11:59 pm Friday night) launching off of Sakonnet Point. (Click here to open a Google Map if you don't know where Sakonnet Point is.)

We hope you can make it to the launch, it should be a great time! The Scout crew.

Beach vandal targets plovers

Mounts summer-long attack on plover protective fences

Piping plovers have had a productive nesting season along the west end of Westport's Cherry & Webb Beach despite the best efforts of an unknown vandal(s). Week after week this summer, someone has attacked the fencing that marks the plovers' nesting area. The orange string has been sliced, the tomato stakes snapped and sometimes the informational signs have vanished.

The barrier is "symbolic fencing" designed not to keep people or animals from entering but rather to "inform beach-goers that plovers are present in these areas," said Lauren Miller-Donnelly, property manager for Mass Audubon.

"This is generally the habitat above the high tide line where the birds chose to nest as well as where the chicks will forage and hide when walkers and especially when dogs come by."

This year, Ms. Miller Donnelly said a pair of plovers nested there and produced three chicks — a good-sized brood that last week was nearly ready to fledge.

That is a critical time for their

"Since their hatch the fencing has been ripped down often, possibly exposing broods to harassment as this line is an important indicator for beach walkers and people that chose to walk their dogs — although dogs are not allowed on the beach in the summer out there," Ms. Miller Donnelly said.

Mass Audubon staff have repeatedly replaced the fence and signs only to return and find it cut again. Staffers say they can't imagine what is prompting someone to do this.

The fence is located on both private property (with the landown-

Mass Audubon say the fence cutters are likely committing a variety of crimes — from vandalism to trespassing (violating the wishes of a landowner) or harming an endangered species.

And the town may also have legal reason to want to prevent the attacks. "Should the town fail to adequately protect state and federally listed species, it risks violating regulations and jeopardizing future permits for beach use, including recreation and deposition of dredge spoils," said Mass Audubon's Gina Purtell.

Ms. Purtell said that Mass Audubon asks people on the beach to keep an eye out for suspicious activity and to report any sighting quickly.

They'll keep repairing the fence but doing so is time consuming and keeps staff from other important work, she said.

AT THE LIBRARY

Cookie decorating for teens, space is limited

TIVERTON — Essex Public Library, Eyecookies in Barrington, and the Sandywoods Center for the Arts will present a free, hands-on cookie decorating class on Saturday, Sept. 7, from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Sandywoods Center for the Arts, 43 Muse Way.

Cookie artist Katrin Schnippering will teach teens tips and tricks for decorating unconventional cookies shapes, but they will have a blast in the process and leave with treats.

The class is limited to 10 participants, so contact the library to register. The class is free and open to teens ages 11 to 18. To register, call 625-6796 or e-mail programs@tivertonlibrary.org.

Creative writing group set for teens

TIVERTON — “Inviting the Muse: Creative Writing Group for Teens” with Kathryn Kulpa is a free workshop for ages 12 to 18 on Wednesdays, Sept. 18 to Oct. 9, from 6:30 to 8 p.m. at the Sandywoods Center for the Arts, 43 Muse Way.

Do you journal? Do you have a secret notebook filled with poems? Have you tried writing short stories? Flash fiction? Fan fiction? Or have you always wanted to try? Tiverton Public Library and the Sandywoods Center for the Arts present an engaging workshop with published, local author Kathryn Kulpa.

Creative prompts and constructive feedback will help you find the right form and the right words to express your own unique vision.

Ms. Kulpa has been writing since she was old enough to hold a pen — actually, a crayon. Her first story was published in Seventeen magazine, and she was an editor at Merlyn's Pen, a magazine of writing by teens. She edits Newport Review, an online literary magazine, and is the author of a short story collection, “Pleasant Drugs.” Her stories have been featured in Cleaver, Metazen, Monkeybicycle, Superstition Review, and the Six-Word Memoir series.

For more information, call Kasia Piasecka, Young Adult librarian, at 625-6796 or e-mail programs@tivertonlibrary.org.

Agnes Golembeske

Graduate of Josephine Wilbur High School, devoted to her children

Agnes Golembeske, 91, of Little Compton, wife of the late Charles Golembeske Sr. and the last surviving sibling of eight brothers and four sisters, died on August 11, 2013. She was born in Little Compton on May 5, 1922, on the family's 90-acre farm, now preserved as a part of the Eight Rod Farm Management Area. She was the daughter of the late Manuel and Mary E. (Virdinlia) Arruda.

Along with her eight other classmates, Agnes was a proud 1940 graduate of Josephine F. Wilbur High School. After graduation she became a civil service worker at the U.S. Naval Base in Newport, processing paperwork for the first Navy officer candidate class, as well as subsequent classes of men who were off to war.

Eventually she met a soldier from Connecticut named Charlie, stationed at Fort Church, and in 1943 they married at St. Catherine of Siena Church in Little Compton. Three years later a daughter, Joan, was born, and shortly thereafter they moved to Fogland Road in Tiverton. Two sons, Chuck and Paul, later arrived, and they completed the family of five.

Agnes devoted herself to rearing her children and staying involved with their activities, from PTA and hot dog roasts at Nonquit School to 4-H Club, Cub Scouts, and mothers' clubs at Sacred Hearts Academy in Fall River, and De La Salle Academy in Newport. Soon afterward she worked at Avica Corporation in Middletown to help with her children's college tuition. In the meantime she began coursework at Bryant College (now Bryant University).

Although unable to complete an advanced formal education she had already mastered the important arts of kindness, compassion, and generosity. Agnes loved her God, her family, and her country. She drove to daily Mass as long as she was physically able, hosted big holiday dinners (including her carrot cake and from-scratch macaroni and cheese), and always took pleasure in celebrating the nation's holidays, especially Memorial Day when those small American flags fluttered on veterans' gravesites throughout town.

She is survived by a daughter, Joan (husband Tom) Carson of Little Compton; sons Charles Golembeske Jr. (wife Susan Bowler) of Cranston, and Paul J. Golembeske (companion Nancy Fontaine) of Little Compton; granddaughters Virginia and Rachel Carson; grandsons Timothy, Andrew, Joseph, Ryan and Joshua Golembeske; and four great-grandchildren. She was predeceased by brothers Manuel, Frank, James, John, Joseph, Louis, George, and Anthony Arruda; and sisters Mary Gomes, Evangeline Fagundes, Josephine Boudle, and Theresa Wells.

Agnes received the sacraments of Baptism, Reconciliation, Holy Communion, Confirmation, and Marriage at St. Catherine of Siena Church in Little Compton and the Last Rites at St. Clare Home in Newport.

She returned to St. Catherine's for her Mass of Christian Burial on Monday, Aug. 26, at 10 a.m. Visitation hours were Sunday, Aug. 25, from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Potter Funeral Home, Westport. Interment was in Our Lady of Fatima Cemetery, Little Compton.

New law firm has special focus in Tiverton Four Corners

Few people would dispute that if you are planning a residential closing or need assistance with zoning, land use or property tax issues, you need to hire a pro. In Tiverton – in fact throughout the entire area – that would certainly be John A. Pagliarini, Jr., Esq., Attorney at Law, a former tax assessor and municipal planner, who has recently opened new law offices in Tiverton Four Corners, following a successful career at a Providence firm where he advised a national client base on complex matters of real estate and taxes.

With a desire to concentrate on real estate closings in his new practice and a wish to raise his family in a beautiful country setting, John brings the unique perspective of a seasoned land use planner and attorney to Tiverton. He earned both a Masters in Community Planning from URI and a Juris Doctorate from Roger Williams University School of Law concurrently, following his undergraduate years at URI. He has been designated as a Rhode Island Certified Assessor and serves as Rhode Island's only representative and board member of the National Association of Property Tax Attorneys. His impressive hands-on experience puts him in the forefront of attorneys handling residential closings and area residents will certainly benefit from his decision to concentrate in this specialty.

While the law offices are situated in Historic Tiverton Four Corners and the décor matches the setting, John has an eye on technology and has invested in proprietary state-of-the-art software that has been customized to make his operation highly efficient. It is technology all attorneys will someday use, but today his office is at the cutting edge. He also believes in the benefits of social networking as a fast way of communicating and uses Facebook as an educa-

Business as usual at Sakonnet Vets after animal hospital sale

Sakonnet Veterinary Hospital founders and longtime owners Dr. Kenneth E Rix and Dr. William E. Condon have sold the Tiverton animal hospital to VetCor Tiverton.

Although the transaction took place August 14, life goes on as usual at the 1320 Main Road facility, Dr. Rix said Thursday.

“There have been no changes in staff, everything is the same as it has been ... Dr. Condon and I will remain as employees for at least two years to assure an orderly transition ... and I will probably stay quite a while longer than that,” he said.

VetCor owns 96 animal hospitals across the country — “I believe we were the 95th,” Dr. Rix said. “The advantage is really an economy of scale ... Dr. Condon and

I retain ownership of the building,” while VetCor now owns the veterinary practice.

“There have been no changes in staff, everything is the same as it has been ... Dr. Condon and I will remain as employees for at least two years to assure an orderly transition.”

There was no public announcement of the sale but it did appear on the Little Compton Town Council agenda last Thursday.

Dr. Rix and Dr. Condon wrote to Little Compton to assure the town that Sakonnet Veterinary Hospital will continue to serve as the town's animal shelter, taking in any stray dogs or cats, a service the hospital also provides to Tiverton.

“The contract that we have arranged with the town will remain in effect with no change in the terms or conditions” or the “quality of services.”

Dr. Rix and Dr. Condon have owned and operated Sakonnet Veterinary Hospital for 41 years.

“We enjoy the relationship we have established with the town and look forward to the new chapter in our lives,” the two wrote to Little Compton.

Blue Summer

Tony Morettini and Cliff Woods, Bristol Conservation Commission members instrumental in the development of Bristol's Blueways maps, relax on the beach at Independence Park prior to launch.

The popular Rhode Island Blueways network expands in the East Bay, giving both locals and tourists another way to play on the bay

BY CHRISTY NADALIN

Last Tuesday, on a pitch-perfect Rhode Island late-summer afternoon, a motley flotilla left the ramp at Independence Park in Bristol. After a brief debate over whether we would follow the harbor route clockwise or counter, we set off upwind (clockwise) reasoning that we would have less of a battle later, when our arms would be tired.

We were hardly pioneers: Bristol Harbor is not exactly uncharted territory, and every paddler in the group was a seasoned local. But we were looking at the harbor in a new way, as the latest addition in a series of maps produced by the Rhode Island Blueways Alliance and accessible at www.exploreri.com.

With 400 miles of coastline and 1,500 miles of rivers, Rhode Island is ripe for this kind of tourism and recreation. The water is there and people are going to take advantage of it; what Blueways does is provide an accessible, downloadable and printable source of information that makes exploring these routes convenient, fun, and safe.

The Bristol Harbor's Blueways map page is representative of the helpful information the resource was created to provide. For example:

"Warning: As you head south of Walley Street Beach past Blithewold....the winds often pick up....(and) can make for challenging paddling conditions." Or this one: "It is best to go to Hog and Back in the morning, before the south-westerly winds pick up in the afternoon." Local boaters know that, but it's the kind of information that's considerate to share with others.

Typical information provided on a Blueways map includes points of interest, experience level, distance, expected time to complete, access points, and general tide, weather, and wind information.

Tony Morettini, fellow paddler and member of Bristol's Conservation Commission, which undertook the project of getting three Bristol-based Blueways on the site this spring, finishing in the last month or so, points out that the Bristol Harbor and Mount Hope Bay routes are different from the riverine routes that characterize many of the inland-Rhode Island Blueways. For one thing, you don't need to follow them to the letter.

"It doesn't take a tremendous amount of creativity to look at the map and see that even though the route doesn't dip all the way into Walker's Cove, it's a great place to explore," said Mr. Morettini.

The addition of the three Bristol routes (besides Bristol Harbor, there are maps for Bristol Narrows and Mount Hope Bay, and the Colt State Park area) brings the number of Blueways in the East Bay to five (including the Warren Loop and the Warren-Bristol Loop) and the total number of mapped Rhode Island Blueways to more than 30.

Mapping was a group effort that began with the Conservation Commission, including Ray Payson, Owen Trainor, Lindsay Green, Alison Ring, Raul Abreu, Tony Morettini and Cliff Woods. Mr. Morettini noted that Alison Ring, Lindsay Green, Mike Byrnes of Explore Bristol and Town Administrator Tony Teixeira were especially instrumental in the planning and development of this project. Mr. Woods joined Town Planner and Conservation Commission staff Ed Tanner and Diane Williamson, Director of Community Development, to bid bon voyage to the inaugural paddlers.

The Bristol Harbor Tour, if completed (in the late afternoon chop the map warns of) would be an impressive upper-body workout. As it was, our intrepid group chose to exercise our creativity and demonstrate the flexibility of the route by bisecting it in such a way as to eliminate about 75% of the southern portion, checking in briefly with the west side of the anchorage before paddling gently back to the boat ramp at Independence Park, our arms slack from the effort. Maybe next time we will heed the warnings about those afternoon southwesterlies.

Where's the bite

According to Al Conti of Snug Harbor Marina, offshore fishing is just starting to pick up and anything being caught is way out there. The vessel Waugh's Up of North Rip Charters landed a 278-pound swordfish and a big eye tuna at Atlantis Canyon, and Lois DeFusco of Hot Reels Sport Fishing charters landed several albacore from the same area. Vin Catauro reported a slow day fishing for giants: "No bluefin but we kept hooking up with shark after shark. We even caught the same blue shark twice. The first time we hooked him he fouled a second line getting hooked in the back. We released him and continued to fish, then we hooked him a second time... he still had the hook and bait on his back. Not a very smart shark."

Roger Simpson, for the Frances Fleet, reported that cod fishing was not bad last week: "Anthony Mercurio from Providence jigged up three fine cod and a few other anglers had three cod apiece to take home. A half dozen or so other cod in the twenty pound range were boated as well." Visit www.francesfleet.com for cod, fluke, and tuna trip schedules.

Bonito reports continue to come in with fish being caught all along the southern coastal shore, and fluke fishing remains strong. According to John Wunner of John's Bait & Tackle in Warwick, "Customers are often catching five to six nice fish south of the bridges with anglers still landing two to three fish in the mid-Bay area."

Striped bass fishing at Block Island remains strong with large fish in the 30 and 40-pound range being taken daily as well as a lot of smaller stripers mixed in with bluefish. Surfcasters are finding the fish out a bit further.

Captain Dave Monti has been fishing and shellfishing on Narragansett Bay for over 40 years. He holds a captain's master license and a charter fishing license. Contact or forward fishing news and photos to Capt. Dave at dmontifish@verizon.net.

Mako jumps on boat off Block Island

Angler J.R. Carlow of Burrillville was fishing for tuna and shark 25 miles south/southwest of Block Island when the tables turned and it seemed the sharks were fishing for J.R. and his crew. As told to Capt. Dave Monti, J.R. said, "We set up and ... (put) heavy chum in the water. After three hours we saw a large fish break about a half mile out. Twenty minutes later the fish (a mako shark, like the one pictured) was attacking our middle bait balloon about 20 yards away. Seconds later it leapt clear out of the water and landed on the starboard/stern gunwale. As it did, it smashed right through a 50 Tiagra bent butt (fishing) rod, sending the top half some 15 feet in the air. The mako flopped on the side, slapping the boat and motor for about three seconds, then fell in the water. We never saw it again. It looked about eight feet long and maybe 250 pounds. Scared the life out of three grown men and two 11 year-olds!"

Mandatory (for many) boating safety course

A boating skills and seamanship course will be offered at East Providence High School for eight weeks starting on September 10. The class, which will meet Tuesdays at 6:30 p.m., is more than a great resource for both new and experienced boaters: If you were born after 1986, or are any age and operate a "personal watercraft," you are required by law to take this class.

According to Don Sullivan, of the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary Flotilla #72, the sponsoring agency, state law requires boaters born after 1986 operating any motor vessel in Rhode Island waters, or persons of any age operating Jet Skis or other so-called personal watercraft, to carry proof of completion of this course with them, any time they are out on the water operating a motor vessel.

The course costs $50 per person and satisfies the law in the states of Rhode Island, Connecticut, and Massachusetts. For more information, please call Don Sullivan at 401/529-6361 or email dsullivan34@cox.net.

Volunteers needed to harvest for hunger

Seven volunteer-run farms across the state make up the network of community farms that grow fresh produce entirely for the purpose of distributing to Rhode Islanders in need through the Rhode Island Community Food Bank. Last year's harvest from these farms generated more than 80,000 pounds of locally-grown vegetables, and now, 2013's crop is coming in and ready for harvest.

Community farms serve the dual purpose of preserving valuable land while growing fresh produce for hungry Rhode Islanders. Each farm is managed by a volunteer coordinator who works with the Food Bank, and they rely on schools, businesses and civic groups, as well as families and individuals, to help work the land. All ages are welcome.

Near-death experience provides 'Proof of Heaven' for a man of science Fascinating, intriguing and thought-provoking: such is the book "Proof of Heaven" by renowned neurosurgeon Eben Alexander. In 2008, at the age of 54, Dr. Alexander developed a rare meningitis-type illness that attacked his brain, leaving him in a coma for seven days. The prognosis was grim — no one had ever survived this illness following so long a period of unconsciousness. As the bacteria devoured his cortex, he entered an unfamiliar world of "indescribable beauty radiating fine filaments of white-gold light — brilliant, vibrant, stunning." There he encountered "higher beings," one in particular, a female dressed in blue who ushered him through this realm. Up until this point, Dr. Alexander had never given credence to descriptions of NDE (near-death-experiences) described by his own patients and others; he had been a skeptical cynic.

Read to find out why Dr. Alexander so strongly asserts that he met the Divine Source; despite the fact that, prior to this, he had never been an overly-religious man. Even more surprising, read to learn who he believes escorted him through this higher universe: a deceased relative of whom he was totally unaware. More than anything else, this book is a prime example of the well-known words: "I was blind, but now I see."

Donna DeLeo Bruno is a native Bristolian and a retired teacher of writing and literature. She now splits her time between Bristol and Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., where she gives book reviews at the local library as well as at book clubs and women's clubs. Some of her most enjoyable and relaxing hours are spent reading a book beneath the shade of a tree at the foot of Walley Street with the sun sparkling its reflection on the water.

POLI-TICKS

Imagine this. The government was inept in planning to maintain monies for a modicum of services. It decided to tax the residents for its mistakes. After a series of blunders it taxed something virtually everyone used every day. The citizens thought this latest episode of nickeling and dimeing them to death was the last straw. They refused to pay the levy claiming that the authority that forced this down their throats didn't really represent their interest.

Arlene

The leaders were shocked since they figured that the amount in question was so trivial that nobody would get lathered up about it. The patriots were not fooled by this ploy, since to accept the tax is tantamount to recognizing the body's right to tax them. They organized a protest around the water and asked others not to submit to the tax.

Somebody attempted to set fire to the tax collection mechanism.

Eventually, they dumped all the tea in the harbor and thus the Boston Tea Party of 1773 was a night of history.

It's a small revolution

The outline of the story sounds familiar, doesn't it? Imposing a 10 cent "toll" on the Sakonnet River Bridge was supposed to be as innocuous as taxing tea.

In 1773, Parliament had a "sweetener" when they imposed the tax by reducing the duty the colonies would have to pay for the imported tea. The Americans would get their tea at a cheaper price than ever before.

However, if the colonies paid the duty tax on the imported tea they would be acknowledging Parliament's right to tax them. Tea was a staple of colonial life. The patriots just didn't want to accede to the power of Parliament no matter how cheaply the tea purchase would be.

The rest is history. The colonists told Britain to take their tea and shove it. The ships were boarded and the tea was dumped. The next morning citizens manned boats and rowed into the harbor. They pounded whatever tea was visible into oblivion by beating it with oars and paddles, drenching it as to render total destruction.

So, who has these guts today? The opponents to the tax on the Sakonnet River Bridge are made out to be miscreants who are blubbering over a mere dime. Tsk-tsking abounded when the information was reported that somebody tried to burn the wires of the system that photographs cars going over the bridge. The discussion has veered away from how the state got into this pickle anyway and how stupid a 10 cent imposition is, given the need to use a 46 cent stamp to collect it.

Perhaps, instead of castigating them, the opposition should be hailed as modern day patriots who don't want to recognize a Bridge Authority's dominance over them. As a paraphrased saying might go, "In for a dime, in for a dollar". Earlier estimates for a proposed toll ranged as high as $4.50.

This is not a personal fight for me since I rarely use the Sakonnet River or the Pell Bridge. There's something amiss, however, when residents of one part of the state are pitted against the other. Certainly, there needs to be accountability at the RI Department of Transportation for its miserable maintenance of roads, rather than just letting them punt the problem. Just as surely, there needs to be a fair allocation of costs among all Rhode Islanders. Lastly, maybe some kudos should go to the loyal opposition who reminds us what a revolutionary spirit New Englanders used to have.

TRASH OR TREASURE?

Resale value of antique cradles impacted by modern safety standards

Q. I have a cradle which I found in my grandmother's home in western Pennsylvania. I have used it for my two sons. Can you tell me anything about it?

A. Cradles and cribs became a more common household piece of furniture in the 19th century.

Karen
WATERMAN

Before this time, most babies slept with their parents, since homes were just not big enough to accommodate them. Your cradle appears to be made of dark stained oak and is most likely from the early 20th Century, based on its Arts & Crafts shape and style. I did not find anything that was an exact match to your cradle, but some similar which sell in the $200 range. Note that modern safety standards influence the resale value of cribs and cradles.

Q. I have a print which is signed "Rost" and "1890" in the corner. It has been passed down in my family. Could you tell me about the artist and what it is worth?

A. Your copper plate etching was done by Ernest C. Rost and is dated 1890. His early works were in oil but he later preferred etchings. The etchings depict bucolic scenes of rural landscapes in upper New York State. Ernest was originally from Mt. Vernon, New York; and many of his works are in the Library of Congress. Prices for Rost etchings sell at auction for around $200.

'Natural' Wine? Open to Interpretation

BY PETER ANDREWS
CSS, CSW, MBA

As organic wines become a common option on restaurant wine lists and bottle shops, natural wines are also becoming more prevalent. So what truly makes a wine “natural” and what distinguishes it from organic selections?

While organic wine has definitions that differ from country to country, they are at the least, legally outlined. The term “natural” wine does not have any concrete definition. In fact, you may receive a different answer each time you ask a winemaker or merchant what a natural wine truly is.

According to my dear friend Summer Wolff, Founder & European Portfolio Manager of Indie Wineries, based in Italy, “Wine is art. Wine is subjective... and hence we cannot attach these strict parameters that everyone continues to define.” Summer, like us, is extremely passionate about her craft. After all, without passion behind your work, why do it?

“The natural wine movement is a philosophy and a way of thinking and a way of farming. So we can say, for these [her portfolio's] producers, a way of life,” says Summer.

Summer's wine is distributed by a great company called The Wine Bros. Steve Wynn, founder & partner, offers more insight on what natural wine is: “Natural wine lets the earth & climate do the work. It's back to grassroots. It is back to the notion of picking the grapes and letting their natural yeasts do their work. A truly natural wine-maker must be a brave soul.” (Check out JC Garnier “Bezigon” Chenin Blanc at Grapes & Grains, it's as natural as they come.)

Simply put, grapes and yeast should be the only two ingredients of natural wine. Yeast can be cultured; there are thousands of different strains that will create their own unique flavors and fermentation length. Yeast is a living organism that feeds on grape sugar to create three byproducts: heat, Co2 and alcohol. The purpose of using cultured yeast is to yield consistent results with every vintage.

As vintages go by, the weather and grape conditions change, and as these changes occur, so do the ripeness and flavors of each respective year. These microclimatic variations are what make wine unique. For natural wine producers, it is essential to use the indigenous yeast on the grape skins to start and finish fermentation. The point is to capture the unique conditions that happen between each vintage and vineyard—with no manipulation through cultured yeast.

Still, consistency and natural do not go hand in hand. Each year does not have perfect weather, so each year should not have perfect wine. It's only natural.

Natural wine can be broken down into four categories: biodynamic, organic, vegan and no-added-sulfites. Biodynamic is farming based on moon cycles and using no motorized equipment whatsoever. To us, this is the most natural. Organic wine is made with no added chemicals, pesticides or herbicides. When wine is filtered or fined, egg whites may be used to coagulate proteins for clarification. Vegan wine cannot use this method because of the egg whites. No-added-sulfite wines are just that, no added sulfur in the wine. Some argue that this method is the most natural. (Check out Meinklang Biodynamic Pinot Noir from Austria.)

Sulfur is necessary for a wine to have longevity in the cellar. Wines without sulfites are the least stable. The right amount can help a wine retain flavor & color, the wrong amount and you have a rotten egg-scented glass. Because wine travels long distances from vineyard to consumer, sulfur can help retain the good qualities during travel and storage. As Steve Wynn said, a truly natural wine-maker is “a brave soul.” This is why.

Still, with all of this information we haven't even discussed the most important factor about wine: the flavor. Regardless of how a wine is made, if it does not taste good, no one will drink it. Natural wine does have different aromas and characteristics to it, and they are not the same as other wines.

This is due to three extended skin contact during fermentation and indigenous yeasts and sulfur, or the lack thereof. The typical fermentation of white wine is to crush the grapes, ferment the juice and discard the skins. Plenty of natural wine producers are macerating the skins with the juice for a very long time to create “orange wine.” Orange wines are what are considered to be the ultimate natural wine. The flavor profiles and color are so intriguing and different; the only way of ever understanding them is to try one. I recommend Movia Lunar Chardonnay from Slovenia—a true orange wine.

In the end, the purpose of natural wine is to seek harmony in the vineyard to ultimately create balanced wine, rather than manipulate it in the cellar. Remember those two ingredients in natural wine? An important lesson in creating any wine is that without quality grapes, one cannot make quality wine. Wine, in essence, is created in the vineyards.

Outstanding in the Field

Outstanding in the Field is a roving culinary adventure—literally a restaurant without walls. Since 1999 they have set the long table at farms or gardens, on mountain tops or in sea caves, on islands or at ranches. Occasionally the table is set indoors: a beautiful refurbished barn, a cool greenhouse or a stately museum. Wherever the location, the consistent theme of each dinner is to honor the people whose good work brings nourishment to the table. $210 per person excluding tax and ticket fee. Sweet Berry Farm, 19 3rd Beach Road, Middletown; 3 p.m.; Tuesday, September 3.

WINE: Andrews

From FACING PAGE

At Grapes & Grains, we strongly believe in the phrase, "to each, their own." Natural wines are not for everyone. The flavor profiles are much more rustic and less fruit-forward; but they are unique. So when it is time to drink outside of the box (and that time will come) check out a natural wine.

Peter Andrews CSS, CSW, MBA, is the General Manager of Grapes & Grains fine wine, craft beer, and small-batch spirits shop in Barrington. Any questions, comments or suggestions on the Monthly Wine Review? Email Peter at Pandrews@grapesandgrainsri.com.

Martin's Garden Notes

Fall Vegetable Gardening

The veggie season is far from over if you want to keep harvesting vegetables well into the fall. As you clear out an area that has produced all it can, turn it over and plant Lettuce, Broccoli, Cauliflower, Collards, Kale, and Cabbage. These will produce very well until we have a very hard freeze. You can also sow spinach for harvest this fall and plant enough to leave over the winter for harvest in early April. You can also be successful sowing mesclun mix for a great addition to your salads.

With any luck you can sow carrots and beets and have them to harvest well after frost. Cover them with straw to protect from frost.

In areas of the garden that you don't intend to replant, plant a cover crop of oats by mid September. If you clear out an area later, it is best to sow rye. Just be aware that rye will live through the winter and must be turned under early in the spring as it will quickly grow to four feet tall. Both covers will store nutrients that you will turn back into the soil in the spring and will prevent erosion.

Vegetable seedlings are available now.

MEET Jeff Bennett: SKIER, BOATER AND SCHOOL VOLUNTEER

BY JOAN D. WARREN

Realtor Jeff Bennet introduces himself, in his own words: "After living in Boston for several years, my wife, Stephanie, and I decided to move to Rhode Island. We have happily called Barrington our home for the last eight years. I attended college at Roger Williams University, which made the decision to return to the East Bay a very easy one.

"My family enjoys everything that the East Bay has to offer. We have two boys who keep us very busy with various school activities and sports. I am on the board of the Kendbrin Swim and Tennis Club and very involved with the PTO at Primrose Hill School. I grew up in upstate New York outside of Albany. Before finding my true calling in real estate, I worked for 18 years as a customer relations manager for a Fortune 500 company. My background has made a clear path for my love of real estate."

WHY REAL ESTATE AS A CAREER? "It seemed like a natural choice. Growing up, my family was always involved in real estate. My father owned apartments buildings and investment properties. Even as a young kid, I enjoyed all the different interactions and problem resolution that went along with properties."

WHAT DO YOU LIKE ABOUT IT? "I love the client relationships that develop. Every person/client is different, every transaction is different, every day is different. It is a joy and true accomplishment to reach a person's goal, whether it is selling a home or purchasing a home."

WHAT DON'T YOU LIKE ABOUT IT? "I have to say, there is not much I don't like about the job."

WHAT ARE SOME OF YOUR HOBBIES? "I am an avid skier and grew up skiing in both Vermont and the Berkshires. I became a ski Instructor for several years before moving to the Boston area. I play tennis and enjoy boating. My family is my biggest hobby. I love family time."

WHERE DID YOU GO ON YOUR HONEYMOON? "We went to Hawaii for our honeymoon. Two weeks on Maui, total relaxation! It was whale season and unbelievable. The reason we

EAST BAY EATERY? "This is a tough one. The perfect afternoon would be to pick up a Dell's lemonade, on the way to Blount Clam Shack for some chowder and then sit down at Al Forno for a delicious meal."

WHERE WOULD YOU LIVE IF YOU WEREN'T IN RI? "Telluride, Colorado. Beautiful mountains and the most amazing skiing."

WHERE DO YOU GO TO RELAX? "A nice long bike ride along the East Bay Bike Path. We are very lucky to have such an incredible landmark."

MOVIES, BOWLING OR MINI GOLF? "A movie and some popcorn ... life is good. A movie allows you for a short time to put everything in your life on hold."

FALL, WINTER, SPRING OR SUMMER? "Fall. There is nothing better than walking down to the soccer field and watching all of the kids on the fields play soccer or tailgating at a football game. The crisp of the air and changing of the leaves, puts my soul at ease."

choose Hawaii, every day is different. We can climb a volcano and sit on the beach. Lots of great history and the culture is amazing. Hawaii reminds me a little of Martha's Vineyard. Each part of the island offers different landscapes and activities."

Loan rates based on $100,000 with 20% down payment & no PMI. Variable mortgages listed are for 30 years, adjusted annually. Points are a one-time charge equal to one percent of the mortgage. APR stands for annual percentage rate and reflects closing costs spread over the life of the loan. CAP is the most a variable mortgage can increase in one year. Savings and loans and Rhode Island loan and investment banks are included in the bank section of this chart. These rates, provided by the institutions on Monday of this week, are subject to change or special conditions. For more information, consumers are advised to call the institution. First-time homebuyers may qualify for lower-rate mortgages from the Rhode Island Housing and Mortgage Finance Corporation. Many credit unions only grant loans to members and limit membership to a defined group. When shopping for mortgage rates ask for explanation of closing costs. Financial institutions that write residential mortgages that wish to be included on this list can get in touch with Classified Real Estate Advertising Specialist at 401-253-1000
